ROYALISTS AS REBELS.

Driven to Cover in Portugal.

The Republican Government Takes Energetic Steps to Crush Monarchists.

Strong Cordon of Troops Marches Upon the Town Held by Insurrectos.

Society of Patriots Conducts a Great Parade in the City of Lisbon.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LISBON (Portugal) July 10.—The royalist rebels in North Portugal again outmaneuvered the republican government troops today. After the sanguinary encounter at Cabe Cabea de Basto, where the royalists defeated the Fifth Regiment of Infantry, reinforcements of government troops were rushed to the scene.

A strong cordon of infantry this morning advanced slowly on the insurrectionary town, pouring in a heavy fire. A few scattered shots were the only response and when the final assault was made with fixed bayonets, the besiegers found the place deserted and all the houses empty. The inhabitants had withdrawn to the mountains with the royalists and now are hidden in the passes.

DANGEROUS MEASURE.

Unless the government decides to weaken the garrisons of Lisbon and Oporto, which would be a dangerous measure to take in view of the possibility of revolutionary outbreaks in the big cities, it seems likely the royalist warfare in the northern provinces is likely to continue for some time.

The situation may be compared to that which existed on the American-Mexican border at the opening of the revolution. The royalists retreat to foreign soil in Spain when they are hard pressed. As the frontier is mountainous, it offers many safe retreats to the royalists whose roving bands are thus able to hold in check the superior forces of the government.

According to last accounts, Capt. Henrique de Paivo Coucoiro, the royalist leader, has retired to Spanish territory.

ROYALIST PLOT.

The general plan drawn up by the royalists for the invasion of Portugal was as follows:

A column of 200 men headed by Lieut. Sepulveda was to enter the country across the River Mino; Capt. Coucoiro with 900 men was to cross the frontier and enter the province of Trash-Oe-Montes, which Capt. Acevedo with 200 men was to reach from Beira and Camacho, with 250 men, from Abmotejo. Every column scheduled, entered the province and with some losses, Capt. Coucoiro and Camacho effected a junction and fought a battle at Chaves.

The Society of Patriots organized a big patriotic parade here last evening. Large crowds gathered on the sidewalks and applauded the paraders, who stopped and celebrated in front of the Belgian Legation as a mark of approval of the seizure of the steamer Vos at Zeebrugge, June 14.

ARMS ON BOARD.

The vessel was taking on board arms and ammunition which the Belgian authorities thought were intended for Portuguese royalists.

It is understood 100 men of the Portuguese crew of this vessel secretly entered Portugal recently and immediately disappeared in the mountains.

The Official Gazette published a decree calling up immediately the reserves of all arms in the first and fourth divisions, as the government desires to crush as quickly as possible the monarchist movement.

Capt. Couciero, the royalist leader, is still on the frontier in the vicinity of Montalegre. He has six quick-firing guns and several field pieces. He lost one gun yesterday in an unsuccessful attack on Chaves.

Republican cavalry is scouring the mountain districts around Chaves.

CHICAGO SURVEYS EFFECT OF HEAT.

DEATH LIST OF DAY DROPS TO FOUR IN WINDY CITY.

Shifting of Wind to Lake Quarter Affords Temporary Relief—Child Left on Fire Escape Falls and Is Killed—Boston Has Three Deaths, New York Five, Syracuse Two.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Temporary relief from the heat wave which has killed forty persons in seven days in this city, came today when a shift in the wind brought breezes from the cool lake.

Four more deaths were recorded today and there were fifteen prostrations, despite the cooler weather. Nine cases of persons being bitten by rabid dogs were reported to the police.

Three deaths were reported tonight from Boston, with numerous prostrations. Two were killed by the heat at Syracuse, and five dead was the toll in New York.

CHILD IS VICTIM.

One of the little tragedies of the heat scourge here was the death of Jennie Kolacheski, 4 years of age. In order that the baby might get a breath of fresh air, her mother had placed her on a fire escape, three stories up on a dingy, crowded tenement.

The child tossed about in her sleep and fell over the railing, being instantly killed. Neighbors had much difficulty preventing the frenzied mother throwing herself out of the window to the pavement when she realized her baby was dead.

A victim of the first day's intense heat was found today with the discovery in Tinley Park of the body of a man who had been dead six or seven days. There were no marks of violence and physicians say he was stricken down by heat.

SLEEPS IN VIADUCT.

Andrew Murdock, a sailor, suffering with the heat, removed all his clothing and laid down to sleep in a cool viaduct, regardless of the fact that many loaded street cars were to pass that way early in the morning. He was fined $5 and advised to stick to his boat or nail his clothing on when he visited the city.

Indications tonight are for thunderstorms, which will do much to further break up the pall of heat and humidity hanging over the country.

Phoenix and Tucson, the most torrid spots on the map, tired of their unpleasant notoriety, made no return to their records today, leaving El Paso, Tex., carrying the banner with 100 above. Quebec had 94, or two degrees hotter than Washington, D. C. Boston reported 96 and New York 90.

Disclosures.

BRIBERY OF BELL BOYS ALLEGED IN FUNK CASE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Disclosures came thick and fast today in the grand jury investigation of the alleged conspiracy against Clarence S. Funk, general manager of the International Harvester Company, and it was predicted in the Criminal Court building in the evening that before the week is over indictments will be returned. Six sealed indictments were returned today and the efforts of the authorities are now directed to find the men "higher up."

Chief of the events of the day was the discovery by agents of State's Attorney Wayman that there was a wholesale attempt to bribe the bell boys of the Grand Pacific Hotel to get them to appear as witnesses against Mr. Funk in the alienation suit brought against him by John C. Henning. Hundreds of dollars are said to have been paid to these boys under promise to testify that they had seen Mr. Funk and Mrs. Henning in the hotel.

ONE BOY APPEARS.

Only one of them, "Eddie" Deuter, had the nerve to appear when the alienation case was tried. It is said the others refused to take the witness stand after vain entreaties by Daniel Donahoe, attorney for Henning. The name of every bell boy who received money is now in the possession of the Cook County Prosecutor and they face indictments as parties to the conspiracy against Mr. Funk unless they are given a chance to get immunity by appearing before the grand jury in the search for the men "higher up" in the conspiracy plot.

Among the bell boys who are said to have received money to be witnesses are Deuter and two companions, named Michael Slavin and Patrick Enright. Others believed to have been approached are being sought by detectives. None of the three boys now is employed by the hotel.

LIVELY SESSIONS.

Both Deuter and Enright had lively sessions during the day with the prosecutor, but were not taken before the grand jury. Mr. Wayman refused to

MILITANT OPPOSITION

Hadley Fights Third Term Party.

In State and Nation Missouri Governor Will Carry Earnest Crusade.

Roosevelt Floor Leader in Chicago Announces He Is Done With Him.

Executive Co-operates to Elect the Ticket Headed by Mr. Taft.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Gov. Herbert S. Hadley, who was the Roosevelt floor leader in the Chicago convention, in an authorized statement today declared unequivocably that he will exert himself to the utmost to prevent the organization of the third party in Missouri. His declaration is contained in a statement issued by the Republican State Press Bureau today. The statement is based on a communication addressed to Ben Deering, in charge of the press bureau, by the Governor, today.

EMPHATIC DECLARATION.

Gov. Hadley declares emphatically he will not support Roosevelt electors if they are put up in Missouri. He states, however, that he is opposed to any rule of proscription which would drive from the Republican party those who may want to vote for Roosevelt electors if any are entered and support the Republican State and local tickets.

Close friends of Gov. Hadley say his opposition to the formation of a third term party not only will be active, but will extend to its national organization as well in this State.

THE STATEMENT.

The press bureau would not give out the text of the letter for publication because it contained references to personal matters. The bureau made the following statement:

"In view of the fact that misleading statements have been published concerning the position of Gov. Hadley with reference to the present political situation, he has made it clear through the Republican State Press Bureau how he stands, and Republican weeklies of the State will be authoritatively advised that he is opposed to the organization of a third party, and that he will do whatever he can to prevent the organization of a third party in this State, because he believes there is no occasion for such a party as the Republican party is already a progressive organization. He thinks, however, that if a Roosevelt electoral ticket is placed on the Missouri ballot, Republicans not willing to vote for the Taft electors, and who otherwise may not vote at all may vote for the Roosevelt electors, and the regular Republican State and local tickets, and he says that for obvious reasons he is opposed to any rule of proscription which would drive from the Republican party and from the support of the State and local tickets those Republicans who may not feel disposed to support Mr. Taft, because they do not believe him to be the rightful nominee of the Chicago convention.

"The Governor declares emphatically that he is not going to support Roosevelt electors if they are put up. The Republican party organization in the State confidently expects the cooperation of Gov. Hadley in the campaign for the regular Republican national ticket. He is actively cooperating with the State organization in plans for the success of the Republican State, district and county tickets to be nominated August 5."

Miss Margaret F. Andrews,

Reported to be the fiancee of Vincent Astor, son of the late Col. John Jacob Astor. Miss Andrews was a figure in an exciting incident at the Newport Casino yesterday, in an endeavor to avoid having her picture taken by a newspaper photographer. The attention of a policeman was attracted to the scene, but he refused to interfere, and the photographer obtained the picture.

SOCIETY GIRL OBJECTS TO LIKENESS IN PRINT.

Miss Margaret F. Andrews, Reported Engaged to Vincent Astor, Actively Resists Efforts of Newspaper Photographer at Newport Casino—Policeman Is Attracted but Refuses to Interfere With Camera Man.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEWPORT (R. I.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Margaret F. Andrews, daughter of Paul A. Andrews, several times reported engaged to Vincent Astor, shared with a newspaper photographer today the front of the stage in an exciting incident, which attracted a crowd of society people at the Casino.

Cheered by onlookers, Miss Andrews made strenuous objection to being "snap-shotted" by the camera man, and it looked for a time as if a policeman would get mixed up in the affair.

Miss Andrews had just arrived in her automobile in front of the Casino entrance, when the photographer approached and held the camera in position.

After Miss Andrews had emphatically objected, Henry A. C. Taylor, the millionaire, ran up.

"What's the matter?" he cried.

He was told the trouble.

"Society Policeman" Casey, so called because he is always detailed to "protect" society people, looked on, but refused to interfere, and the camera man got his photograph.

DEATH OF YOUNG WOMAN IS TO BE INVESTIGATED.

[BY FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 10.—[Special Dispatch.] Until thorough investigation is made of the death in Denver of Miss Candace Wheeler, daughter of James Cooper Wheeler, author, the $12,000 insurance on the life of the young woman will not be paid by the Pennsylvania Mutual and Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance companies, by which the policies were written.

Mr. Wheeler has asked the Denver police to make an investigation in addition to that instituted by the insurance companies.

"While we don't say that Miss Wheeler was murdered," said Emil Schneelock of Hollis, L. I., who is the author's legal representative, "there are circumstances which we regard as most suspicious.

"On learning that his daughter's death was suspicious, Mr. Wheeler telegraphed and then wrote Mrs. Emma George of Denver, a warm personal friend of Miss Wheeler, who was supposed to have been an eye-witness to the drowning. Mrs. George did not answer either communication.

"Next Mr. Wheeler wrote to Otto Meyer, who is supposed to live in Indianapolis, and who was engaged to marry Miss Wheeler. Again no answer came.

"Then he learned of the investigation being pursued by the two insurance companies and employed a Denver lawyer to represent us and get at the real facts.

"It was found that all Miss Wheeler's life insurance was in favor of Dr. H. Meyer of Denver. He is a brother of the man to whom she was reported to be engaged."

Unannounced.

OROZCO IS IN JUAREZ.

Rebel Chief Enters His Capital.

Finds No One to Greet Him as His Movements Are Kept in Secret.

Faces Turmoil in Ranks of His Army, Rival Junta Becoming Active.

Vasquistas Conspiring Again to Assume Reins of Mexican Revolution.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

JUAREZ (Mex.) July 10.—Gen. Pascual Orozco, Jr., arrived in Juarez at 10:45 o'clock tonight, accompanied by his staff.

The hour of his arrival was not generally known and the rebel chief found no one at the station to greet him. Knowledge of his movements had been kept fro even rebel officers here, including Col. Pascial Orozco, Sr., his father.

The rebel chief went to the home of his father for the night.

Gen. Orozco's arrival was the more inconspicious as he rode into the rebel capital in a caboose coupled to an engine. He had abandoned his private car on the way.

Tonight marked the first time that Gen. Orozco had visited Juarez as a revolutionist. He was here last in February, when as a government officer, he sought to restore order in the town, which had just mutined. Less than a month later, he accepted the leadership of the revolution.

Gen. P. Orozco must face dissatisfaction in the ranks of his soldiers. A new rebel junta has been organized and secretly has been working among the troops with the idea of persuading them to abandon the leadership of Gen. Orozco and recognize Gen. David de la Fuent, as military chief, with Emilio Vasquez Gomez civil head of the rebel cause.

VASQUISTAS RISING.

The Vasquista sympathisers, originators of the present revolt which was appropriated by Orozco who repudiated Vasquez Gomez, have risen again and the mutinous spirit conspicuous among the rebels of late may be traced to Vasquista influence. It is understood the Vasquista leaders will meet in a few days in San Antonio, Tex., and consider plans for deposing Orozco.

The Vasquistas have been anxious ever since Emilio Vasquez Gomez was overthrown by Orozco to assume charge of the revolution, but not until recent events, when Orozco began to meet with military reverses, have they found encouraging response in the rebel ranks.

Gen. Orozco's stay in Juarez, it is declared, will be short. His next headquarters will be at Casas Grandes, 140 miles southwest, on the Mexican Northwestern Railroad, from which point the rebel invasion of the State of Sonora will be directed.

ROB GERMAN CONSUL.

The rebels are making desperate efforts to obtain money to carry on the revolution. During the night the home of Max Weber, the German Consul, was robbed of several hundred dollars.

The Mexican Northwestern Railroad officials who were held in their offices here for nearly two hours last night while an armed guard barred their exit, probably will have to pay the rebels $5000 claimed by them as an export tax on a consignment of ore shipped by the American Smelting and Refining Company from Chihuahua.

J. O. Crockett, vice-president and director of the Mexican Northwestern, nearly lost his private car today. Gen. Antonio Rojas wanted it to travel in on his campaign through Casas Grandes, but H. C. Ferris, general manager of the road, quietly had it moved across to the American side.

OROZCO SAYS REVOLT WILL WIN IN END.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

VILLA AHUMADA (Mex.) July 10.—Gen. Orozco at 6 o'clock tonight reached Villa Ahumada, eighty-three miles south of Juarez. He declared he would continue to Juarez tonight.

Though not disclosing his immediate intentions, Gen. Orozco tonight expressed to the Associated Press correspondent accompanying him absolute confidence in the ultimate triumph of the revolution.

"It must be either the resignation of Madero or the prosecution of the revolution," he said. "The people of the State of Chihuahua began this revolution to win and they will."

Every bridge and culvert on the Mexican Central Railroad north of Chihuahua is being destroyed. The work of destruction thus far has been completed to a point fifty miles north of Chihuahua City. It will be continued to some point a few miles south of Juarez.

Federal cavalry were moving today north out of Chihuahua, according to rebel scouts. They had reached Corral, thirteen miles north of Chihuahua, at noon today. The force

Ocean-to-Ocean.

"THE TIMES" CAR REACHES TIDEWATER OF ATLANTIC.

Baltimore Gives Great Welcome to Tourists From Los Angeles and Band Plays "Maryland, My Maryland," as State Is Enrolled in Great Transcontinental Highway Building Enterprise.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BALTIMORE (Md.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Rain poured down on Baltimore tonight just as The Times special chugged into the city after a hard run across the mountains. Leo T. Downing, State Engineer of Maintenance for Maryland, was a passenger on the organizing car from Cumberland, and tomorrow will pilot the big machine into Washington.

Austin Ramsay, Road Commissioner for this State, journeyed to Baltimore today to prepare this city for the reception to The Times crew. As a result of the work of the prominent road builder, leading men of this large city gathered in the rain at the Hotel Belvedere and listened to the plan of Col. Dell M. Potter for organizing this State.

While the band played "Maryland, My Maryland," this State was linked in the chain of organizations streching from Los Angeles to Baltimore. Maryland is the twelfth division of the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association to be formed on this tour of The Times car. New Jersey and New York are the last two States to be organized.

ROADS NEED REPAIRS.

The roads from Cumberland here are in need of repairs. Engineer Downing estimated today that $25,000 would put them in temporary shape for touring. He believes that a highway costing from $5000 to $10,000 a mile can be built across this State and that Maryland can perform her part of this great project as quickly as any other State along the line of the proposed Ocean-to-Ocean Highway.

Edward Smith, one of the prominent newspaper men of this city, took an active part in the meeting this evening. The newspapers of Maryland have joined the movement, and the story of the ocean-to-ocean highway is preached each morning. The crowds attracted by The Times car are keeping track of the movements of the machine as it is sent on toward the Great White Way in New York.

The run today was one of the red-letter tours of the long journey. Though the roads through the Alleghany Mountains are rough and rocky, The Times car reached here on schedule. In order to do this John Zak, the driver, was given a chance to "step on the throttle."

NEWS AT FREDERICK.

When a wire was received at Frederick, the town Barbara Frietchie made famous by hanging out the Starry Flag, the ocean-to-ocean highway organization knew that a throng was waiting for The Times car in the largest city of Maryland, forty-five miles away.

The roads from Frederick to this city are good. There is no speed limit to speak of on the county highways. The smaller towns have ordinances, but The Times car has been given the preference so often that it was worth taking a chance.

"Can I open her up a little?" Zak requested. Rather than disappoint the throng, Zak was allowed to let the ocean-to-ocean car out several notches and the forty-five miles were covered in sixty-two minutes. When the roar of the exhaust was heard on the main streets, the Good Roads slogan was sounded from many lips, and the mud-covered car was greeted by leading men who were swung into line for what several speakers were pleased to call "the greatest movement now before the people of this country."

W. E. G. Hitchins, a capitalist, is one of the officers of the Maryland division. He is taking a leading part in the great work in this State. Thomas F. Smouse, one of the largest lumber dealers of this State, is another. With a big touring car containing four other prominent men Mr. Smouse piloted The Times car across the county roads from Cumberland, and then pledged himself to work with hundreds of others in the great fight for Federal aid for a national highway.

ENLISTED FOR FIGHT.

C. A. Tenney, engineer of road construction for Western Maryland, was a passenger in The Times car from Cumberland to Clear Springs today. Engineer Tenney is out and out in his statement in favor of a national highway, and says he is willing to do all in his power to mould sentiment in favor of the mighty project.

Mayor George Young of Cumberland, piloted The Times car out of his city this morning, after having pledged himself to the good roads campaign. Mayor Young proved to be one of the big hustlers in this State.

This evening word was received from Frank H. Rosboro, vice-president of the Pennsylvania division of the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association, saying that arrangements have been made for a mass meeting in Philadelphia, providing The Times car can maintain its present schedule. The car is in shape for another hard run if necessary.

National Organizer Potter will call on President Taft tomorrow at Washington, and then will confer with leading Senators and Congressmen regarding the plan for the Federal aid campaign. The Times car has organized twelve States already, and more than 150 Congressmen and a score of Senators are concerned in this great plan. Col. Potter intends to call on each man through whose territory the national highway passes. The monster petition demanding Federal aid will not be presented until the next session of Congress in December.

After the Washington session, the request has been made that The Times car be driven through New Jersey and that Gov. Wilson be given a chance to express himself on the national highway project. The Times car will be kept out of politics, however, and every effort is being made to finish this great trip within the next four days.

CHICAGO HEAT.

day with temperatures above 90, causing a score or more of scattered deaths and general suffering.

For the first time there were indications tonight that the siege was broken, in the metropolis, at least. A few drops of rain—the first in two weeks—fell after sundown, and cooling breezes followed.

In the record of prolonged hot spells the present siege does not appear likely to approach the record established a year ago, when more than a third of the country experienced temperatures of nearly 100 during the first two weeks in July, with a total of 1500 deaths reported. The present heat wave has taken lives which can be numbered by scores instead of hundreds.

In this city today the official temperature was 91, as compared with 93 yesterday, but notwithstanding the slight improvement, there were ten deaths. A year ago it was 95 deg. here. Boston and other New England points report temperatures above 95 today, with scattering deaths and many prostrations. The wave extended as far north as Montreal, where a temperature of 96 and one death were reported.

FARMS ARE SEARED.

HEAT IS INTENSE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 10.—A few tantalizing thunder showers that pattered vainly on burned fields and steaming pavements were the only promises of relief in sight tonight from the wave of humid heat that deluged the country.

From East and West the Weather Bureau received reports of generally increased temperatures. Behind the stolid figures came a story of sweltering cities and seared farms. Increased death rates in the overcrowded cities and general suffering as a result of the oppressive heat were generally recorded.

New York and Chicago, East and Middle West, all caught the rising temperature. Throughout the New England and the Middle Atlantic States the mercury rose. The lower lakes and the lower Mississippi Valley, the Southwest and Northwest all showed increased temperatures. There was a slight let up in the upper lake region, and in the upper Mississippi Valley, but even there the temperature promised to rise tomorrow.

"There is no relief in sight," said the forecaster at the Weather Bureau tonight. "Today was generally warmer except a few spots where showers cooled things for a time. Temperatures are gradually rising and reports show the likelihood of further increases tomorrow. The heat wave, from all indications, will probably continue for some time.

The national capital sweltered under a blazing sun throughout the day, with legislators courting electric fans and cooling drinks.

Hot weather and the vacation spirit combined to drive the House leaders almost to despair, for they were virtually unable to command quorums either on the floor or in the committees. Today was set aside for the consideration of the naval appropriation bill by a Naval Affairs Subcommittee, but not enough members appeared. Other committees today were without quorums and could transact no business

ROYALISTS AS REBELS.

Montalegre and Valencia, shooting or seizing all stray royalists. Cabeceiras de Basto is still in open revolt, 800 well-armed royalists holding a strong position there. The Fifth Infantry is now investing the town, but does not appear able to carry an attack.

REPUBLICANS REPULSED.

One assault has been made, but the republicans were repulsed by a hot fire from the quick-firing guns. Reinforcements are being rushed to the scene with heavy artillery and the town will be bombarded unless the royalists surrender.

Last night a royalist band attempted to penetrate to the interior through Corviera, but were driven back after two hours' fighting, with heavy loss.

Apparently the plan of the royalists was to stir uprisings in the districts of Braga and Vianna, making Braga the central point. This accomplished, they intended to proclaim a provisional military government.

The Almeida captured by the republicans and imprisoned proves not to be the African hero as reported, but a Miguelist partisan. Another royalist prisoner, severely wounded, lies in the hospital at Chaves. He says he is the son of Viscount Arcos.

HEAVY LOSSES OF THE ROYALISTS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, July 10.—A special dispatch to the Journal from Verina says that in the fight at Chaves, Capt. Couciero and nearly a thousand men with artillery made an attack on the town.

The garrison, which numbered only 200 men, replied vigorously from the shelter of the walls. The engagement lasted five hours, when the arrival of a regiment of cavalry caught the Royalists between two fires. A determined sortie by the garrison completed the defeat of the Royalists, who lost 180 men, killed or wounded, and many prisoners.

Couciero is reassembling his partisans near Cabeceiras de Basto.

GROVE L. JOHNSON ENTERS.

Father of the Governor Becomes a Candidate for Assemblyman in the Fourteenth District.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, July 10.—Grove L. Johnson will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Assemblyman in the Fourteenth District, which comprises half of the city of Sacramento. Johnson took out his nomination blanks today.

Johnson, who is the first candidate for the Assembly from either of the three Assembly Districts in the county, is the father of Gov. Johnson, but he is not and never has been identified with the progressive movement. He is classed as a conservative, and at the time of the Presidential primaries was a Taft adherent.

Mr. Johnson has served his district in Congress, has served in the State Senate and has served many terms as Assemblyman.

DECLARES OUTRAGES CANNOT BE ENDURED.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 10.—"Outrages in Mexico are becoming so frequent that this country cannot put up with them any longer. There will be big developments in the Mexican situation in a few days."

This was the prediction of Senator Mark Smith of Arizona, at the White House today. He added he had not talked about the Mexican situation with President Taft.

"We have got to do something—issue a proclamation or warn Mexico in some way," he said.

MEXICAN GOVERNMENT TO USE AEROPLANES.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

The amnesty will not apply to Orozco or his officials.

AIMED AT SECRETARY.

Resolution Offered in House Calls on Department of Agriculture for Data on Colorado Dam.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 10.—[Special Dispatch.] A resolution admitted by its author to be one of a series of shafts which he proposes to direct toward Secretary Wilson, whom he charges to be incompetent, as the head of the Department of Agriculture, was introduced in the House today by Representative Akin of New York. It calls on the Secretary to tell the House what he knows about the Stanley dam irrigation project near Denver, and how Jasper Wilson, the son of Secretary Wilson, came to obtain a lucrative position with that concern.

The resolution touches many subjects in a vague way. Akin refused today to disclose his informant, but says he has many persons waiting in Colorado to tell things they know, and insists it is up to the House to show up Wilson as unduly interested in the Stanley project.

Secretary Wilson refused to discuss the Akin resolution in any of its phases. Akin came to Congress last year on a combination of Democratic and Republican votes. He insists that he is a progressive Republican.

Death of Son and Sweetheart Overcomes Enmity of Texas Mother and Los Angeles Girl.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FT. WORTH, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch:] In the crucible of a common grief, the enmity which has existed between Mrs. John Adams of San Antonio, Tex., and Miss Jane Laury of Los Angeles, has become sympathetic love, and today Mrs. John Adams passed through Ft. Worth on her way to Los Angeles, to attend the funeral of her only son, Fred Adams, who died two days ago, and beside his grave to beg forgiveness of Miss Laury for the opposition she has raised to the marriage of the two young people.

Adams wrote to his mother months ago, telling her of his love for the Los Angeles girl. His mother answered at once, begging him not to marry Miss Laury, and ever since that time she has made every effort in her power to change her son's mind.

She declares she had no reason for opposing the marriage except a mother's jealousy of a son's love, and says she will endeavor in every way to make reparation to Miss Laury for the wrong she thinks she has done her.

Another Syndicate Organized in London to Search for Millions Supposed to Be Hid on Cocos Island.

[BY CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A syndicate has engaged a steamer for a treasure hunting expedition to Cocos Island, which will start out this week. The principal members of the party, including Mrs. Barry Till and Miss J. Brockley Davis, will join the expedition at Panama. These women, who were with the Navajo expedition which returned from Cocos Island a year ago and said nothing was found but three skeletons, now claim to have located the cave in which the pirate, Buelo, buried $100,000,000 gold, which he had seized from the Spanish.

Last year's expedition, which was known as the Till and Davis Company Limited, started from Panama in April, 1911. It returned a few months later without any treasure.

CHARGES INTOXICATION.

Witness Says Lackawanna Engineer Had Been Drinking at Time His Train Collided with Passenger.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CORNING (N. Y.) July 10.—That William Schroeder, engineer of the express train that ran into the rear of Lackawanna passenger train No. 9 here last Thursday and caused the death of forty persons in the resulting wreck, was apparently intoxicated within four hours of the time he boarded the engine, was the testimony at the Coroner's inquest here today by Charles Kleproth of Elmira, N. Y., for many years a close personal friend of Schroeder.

Schroeder, it developed today, was late in reporting for duty on the day of the wreck. The train was held for him and he started without testing his engine.

WORST OF ALL IS ROOSEVELT.

Prohibition Chairman Calls Him Least Desirable.

Finds Fault With His Methods and Achievements.

Democrats in the House Are Severely Criticised.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) July 10.—A sensational attack upon President Taft, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, whom he condemned as the least desirable of all, and the Republican and Democratic parties in general, marked the beginning here today of the eleventh National Prohibition Convention.

Clinton N. Howard of Rochester, N. Y., temporary chairman of the convention, made a speech which bristled wit hdenunciation of the "boss-ridden, liquor-controlled old parties." He declared nothing in the way of a real reform was to be gained from either of them or from a third party dominated by Col. Roosevelt.

FROM THE DEMOCRATS.

"And what can be expected from the Democratic party? Less than nothing at all.

"Exactly the same influences that poisoned the Republican party at Chicago were in control at Baltimore.

"It may be said in truth that Woodrow Wilson was not Mr. Murphy's choice; but the campaign banner, decorated with his picture, was flung to the breeze in front of Tammany Hall one-half hour after his nomination, on the order of Charles Murphy by long distance telephone, and the candidate has since sent his regrets that a prior engagement prevented his presence at Tammany Hall on the Fourth of July."

"GOOD MAN."

The temporary chairman said that while Gov. Wilson was known as a "good man," the Prohibitionists are "not heer to elect a good man, but to kill the liquor traffic." McKinley and Harrison were "good men" in the White House, he added, "but they went out of office with the country more saturated with rum than when they went in."

After severely criticising the Democratic House of Representatives for its failure to enact legislation prohibiting the shipment of liquor into prohibition territory in the South, Chairman Howard turned his guns on Col. Roosevelt.

"How about the promised progressive Roosevelt party?" he was asked.

LEAST DESIRABLE.

"We already have two whisky parties," he said, "and do not need another. From the point of view of the Prohibitionists, by his record, public utterances and confessed personal habits, he is the least desirable of them all.

"Posing as the 'Thou shalt not steal' candidate because his partisans were not preferred over President Taft's in the convention, he brazenly boasts that he stole the Isthmus of Panama from Colombia and 'let Congress debate about it afterward.'

"Stealing is stealing, Mr. Roosevelt. When you taught that the end justified the means, you gave every thief a passport to heaven."

"VARIOUS BOSSES."

Mr. Howard referred by name to the "various bosses" at the two old party conventions, concluding with this sally:

"And to think of Billy Flinn, the vice-protector and promoter of Pittsburgh, and Timothy Woodruff of Brooklyn, masquerading as Roosevelt 'progressives.' What hope is there for reform in America at such unclean hands? Absolutely none."

The speaker predicted that the Prohibition party was certain of ultimate success and informally declaring the convention ready to transact business, urged that "all things be done decently and in order."

Hours before National Chairman Charles R. Jones called the convention to order crowds of cheering delegates, fully half of them women, marched to the pier. State delegations followed each other into the hall shouting prohibition rally cries.

The temporary chairman was presented with a gavel handed down from the beginning of the Prohibition party movement. It was a small one, and in accepting it, Mr. Howard said: "It is very evident that no big stick is necessary to rule over this convention."

TARIFF ISSUE PRESSES TO FORE.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 10.—[Special Dispatch.] The issues of the coming campaign were discussed at some length at the White House today, the majority of the President's callers being of one opinion, that the tariff will be the main issue. Senator Sanders said:

"Not only do I think the fight will be upon the tariff, but I believe before November 4 the voters will have made up their minds to hold to either the Republican or Democratic ticket."

"The tariff is already the main issue," said Representative Moore, "and on that question Pennsylvania will go overwhelmingly for Taft."

"The Democrats made the tariff the issue," said Representative Campbell, "and we accept their challenge. Beyond the tariff, the issues will be the administration of President Taft and his enforcement of the laws without fear or favor."

"While I am sure the tariff will be the big feature of the campaign, I think that fairness and decency will also be an issue," said Senator Townsend. "Mr. Taft has either made a successful President, or he has been a failure. He has not been treated decently, or fairly, and I believe that the square deal idea of the American people will always be appealed to."

Representative Willis said:

"The tariff is the big question ahead of us and must be settled."

"This will be another McKinley campaign and on the tariff, as the Republican party upholds it. President Taft will be re-elected," said Mr. Cameron of Arizona. "He is clear in his record on that question and will triumph."

"The tariff looms up as the real issue of the campaign," said Senator Gamble.

Among the White House callers were Senators Smith and Guggenheim, ex-Senators Massey and Hemenway, Representatives Howell, Anthony, Booher, La Follette, Dobbs, Clark and Jackson and ex-Representative Watson.

The President played golf at Chevy Chase this afternoon.

"NEVER HAD A CHANCE"

Roosevelt Tells Iowans How Close Senator Cummins Came to Getting the Nomination in Chicago.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DES MOINES (Iowa) July 10.—Senator A. B. Cummins, in resolutions presented to the Republican State Convention Resolutions Committee today, urged that a committee be named to investigate the Chicago convention. The resolution says if Mr. Taft was fraudulently nominated Republicans would be excusable in bolting the convention; if not Iowa Republicans should support the ticket enthusiastically.

Theodore Roosevelt sent word to Iowa Republicans that so far as he knew there never was any chance of Senator Albert B. Cummins getting the nomination at Chicago. The telegram was in response to one from the Iowa Republicans, asking if it was true that the colonel had refused to give Cummins a chance.

The plan for holding a Roosevelt meeting following the convention has been abandoned.

CLARK'S MIND NOT MADE UP.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Speaker Clark may go to Sea Girt Friday evening for a conference with Gov. Wilson. Both Mr. Clark and Majority Leader Underwood have acknowledged invitations to the Governor and have replied that they will visit him when the business of the House permitted. If the house adjourns over Saturday this week, the speaker probably will make the visit then. Mr. Underwood may accompany him.

HIS RE-ELECTION DEMANDED BY OUR ORIENTAL RELATIONS.

Bishop From Japan and Korea Says President's Policy in Far East Is Rapidly Strengthening American Influence—Regarded as the Nation's Greatest Statesman.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 10.—[Special Dispatch.] Bishop Merriam Colbert Harris of Japan and Korea, who is on a visit to this country, believes American interests, both religious and commercial, in the Far East would receive a disastrous blow if President Taft should fail of re-election. He declares that the preservation of the friendly relations between the United States and the powers of the Orient is dependent upon Mr. Taft's success at the polls in November.

Speaking of Mr. Taft and his influence in the Far East, Bishop Harris said:

"President Taft's policy in the Orient is going to strengthen the bonds of friendship between the United States and Japan and to maintain the 'open door' in China more than the policy of any other President. He is regarded in the Far East as America's greatest statesman, his policies doing wonders in advancing civilization.

"China recognizes that the success of the revolution and the organization of the republic were largely achieved through American influence over other powers.

"The President is regarded in the Orient as the lantern bearer of world peace and is also esteemed as the greatest and most efficient friend of foreign missionaries.

"He has gained for the missionaries greater respect and protection from the eastern nations. In fact, he has made the missionary a welcome figure throughout the East and civilization has made tremendous strides in consequence.

"I do not speak as a partisan, but as a Christian minister in charge of the greatest missionary field in the world."

Bishop Harris came to this country to attend the general Methodist Episcopal conference in Minneapolis. He was first appointed to Japan in 1872 and remained there until 1886. He was superintendent of the Japanese missions in San Francisco from 1886 to 1904, and during that period established Japanese missions in Hawaii and on the Pacific Coast, organizing them into the Pacific Japanese mission.

He was elected to his later station in May, 1904.

HOLD COFERENCE WITH PRESIDENT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 10.—President Taft conferred today with Chairman Hilles. William Barnes, Representative Burke of South Dakota, vice-chairman of the Republican National Committee and Representative Moore of Pennsylvania, secretary, regarding whether an elector chosen on the Republican ticket could vote in the electoral college for Col. Roosevelt, running on a third party ticket.

In South Dakota the State convention already has named Roosevelt men on the Republican ticket. Similar action is expected in other States. The President and Mr. Hilles are expected to concentrate their attention upon this question.

"The cardinal plank in the 'Bull Moose platform'," said Representative Burke, "is 'Thou shalt not steal,' but the first thing that party did in my State was to steal the Republican electoral vote. The State Committee chose for electors men who have declared for Roosevelt, but they will go on the Republican ticket.

"If they are elected under the Republican banner they expect to vote for a man who has deserted the old party and is making one of his own. In South Dakota we can petition and put a set of Taft electors in the field, but in many States this is impossible."

Representative Anthony of Kansas told the President after the conference that Senator Curtis and other Taft leaders in Kansas expected to fight to prevent Roosevelt men being chosen as electors on a Taft ticket in the State primaries August 6.

The Taft men in Kansas have Taft electors in the field, but in case Roosevelt men are chosen they know of no way to keep them off the Republican ticket which goes before the voters in November.

LIGHT FROM THE EAST ON THE LIVING ISSUES

[BY FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 10.—[Special Dispatch.] The following editorial comments on topics of the hour are printed in eastern papers:

SELECTION OF HILLES.

CLEAN POLITICS.

[New York Sun, July 10:] The choice of Mr. Charles Dewey Hilles to be chairman of the Republican National Committee is gratifying to those who want politics kept clean between now and November. It must also be highly satisfactory to President Taft. In the triangular contest now opening the President will need every legitimate advantage that wise counsel can procure, and not the least of such advantage is the activity of an executive whose character and methods command the confidence of the rank and file of the Republican party, including its business men throughout the country. We believe that Mr. Hilles's appointment commands this general concern. He is entitled to it.

MR. TAFT NO QUITTER.

AND NEVER WILL BE.

[New York Herald, July 10:] Mr. Taft has never yet died under fire, and, complicated as the situation is, he is not likely to do so now. So far as his opponents in his own party are concerned, they would prefer to have the country in civil war or without a President, to having Mr. Taft re-elected.

APPROPRIATION CHANGES.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Appropriations of $250,000 for the tariff board and $20,000 for the International Waterways Commission were restored to the Sundry Civil Bill reported today by the Senate.

Because of the bubonic plague situation the House appropriation for prevention of epidemic by the public health service was increased from $100,000 to $400,000.

The customs reforms proposed in the House bill were stricken out and an item of $250,000 for collecting the revenue from customs inserted. Likewise $250,000 for seacoast artillery buildings and $50,000 for the Kaithley-Overton Railroad, both in the Philippines, and $25,000 for a large range at Vancouver Barracks, Wash., were inserted.

The House bill was amended so as to continue the office of register and receiver of public moneys for land districts.

The provision in the House bill limiting the Department of Justice in employing attorneys who have just left the government service was stricken out.

WITNESS SAYS JUDGE SNORED.

Former Attorney Testifies in the Hanford Case.

School Teacher Declares She Saw Him Intoxicated.

Discharged Clerk Pleads Guilty and Is Sentenced.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) July 10.—United States District Judge Cornelius H. Hanford's alleged intemperate habits were the subject of the afternoon session today of the House Judiciary Subcommittee.

Miss Adelia Parker, a high school teacher, member of the bar and editor of a woman suffrage paper, swore that she had seen Judge Hanford intoxicated on the street cars on two occasions, which she described.

L. H. McMahon of Salem, Or., an orchardist, formerly an editor and lawyer, said he was in court on one occasion when, while an attorney was arguing a motion, the judge fell asleep, with his head thrown back and his mouth open. After about ten minutes, he said, the judge awoke, and the attorney began his argument all over.

QUOTED TESTIMONY.

McMahon testified:

"The judge awoke with a snore audible all over the courtroom. He went to sleep every afternoon during the time I appeared in his court. The judge snores when he sleeps. I think he falls asleep because of drinking intoxicants."

John C. Higgins, a Seattle attorney, testified he had never seen Hanford when there was the slightest suspicion of intoxication.

D. O. Fuhrberg, a liquor dealer, testified to have seen Hanford apparently drunk on the street.

HANSEN CASE.

Attorney Finch's examination had just been concluded when the committee adjourned at noon. Representative McCoy asked the witness:

"Do you know of any fact connected with the affairs of Heckmann and Hansen that would make it unlikely that if Heckmann and Hanson had been properly cared for by their attorneys they would now be in possession of their property?"

"No."

Taking up the note to a bank for $5000, signed by Heckmann, and Hanson and by Richard A. Ballinger as attorney for Heckmann, and to collect which Ballinger afterward sued as attorney for the bank, counsel for Hanford asked:

"Was Ballinger attorney for the bank at the time when he signed the note as attorney for the firm?"

"I presume he was," answered Finch.

"Do you know that he was?"

"I cannot say positively."

HOPKINS GUILTY.

Robert M. Hopkins, who was clerk of Judge Hanford's court from the time it was established in 1889 until Hopkins was removed in 1911, pleaded guilty today in the United States Court to two counts of an indictment charging embezzlement of $19,286, and was sentenced to imprisonment of two years on each count, the terms to run concurrently, and to pay a fine of $1000.

Hopkins was immediately taken to McNeil's Island penitentiar. His counsel in a statement to the court said Hopkins had repaid nearly all the money taken.

Hopkins was removed from office last August after an investigation of his accounts by Inspector M. C. Masterson. When the announcement was first made that discrepancies were found in Hopkins's accounts, Judge Hanford issued a statement, vouching for the probity of his clerk.

MOTHER AND SON SEARCHING.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 10.—[Special Dispatch.] Mrs. Andrew Welch of Los Angeles today asked the police to look for her son, James, 20 years of age, whom she failed to find after a search that lasted yesterday afternoon and last night.

Within an hour after Mrs. Welch appealed to the police her son, James, seized the aid of the police in finding his mother. He had been looking about the city all yesterday afternoon and last night for his parent, and expressed the fear that an accident had befallen her.

Now the police are looking for both Mrs. Welch and her son. They hope to bring the two together. Mrs. Welch came to this city several days ago, after leaving with James instructions as to how he would find her when he arrived in San Francisco on the steamer Rose City. James arrived yesterday and went to the hotel at which he expected to find his mother. She was not there. While he was out making inquiry for her Mrs. Welch went to the dock and found that, while her son's name appeared upon the passenger list, no one could give her any trace of his whereabouts.

B. O. Fuhrberg, a liquor dealer, testified to have seen Hanford apparently drunk on the street.

HANSEN CASE.

Attorney Finch's examination had just been concluded when the committee adjourned at noon. Representative McCoy asked the witness:

"Do you know of any fact connected with the affairs of Heckmann and Hanson that would make it unlikely that if Heckmann and Hanson had been properly cared for by their attorneys they would now be in possession of their property?"

"No."

Taking up the note to a bank for $100, signed by Heckmann, and Hanson and by Richard A. Ballinger as attorney for Heckmann, and to collect which Ballinger afterward sued as attorney for the bank, counsel for Finch asked:

"Was Ballinger attorney for the bank at the time when he signed the note as attorney for the firm?"

"I presume he was," answered Finch.

"Do you know that he was?"

HOPKINS GUILTY.

Robert M. Hopkins, who was clerk of Judge Hanford's court from the time it was established in 1889 until Hopkins was removed in 1911, pleaded guilty today in the United States Court to two counts of an indictment charging embezzlement of $19,286, and was sentenced to imprisonment of two years on each count, the terms to run concurrently, and to pay a fine of $1000.

Hopkins was immediately taken to McNeil's Island penitentiar. His counsel in a statement to the court said Hopkins had repaid nearly all the money taken.

Hopkins was removed from office last August after an investigation of his accounts by Inspector M. C. Massie. When the announcement was first made that discrepancies were found in Hopkins's accounts, Judge Hanford issued a statement, vouching for the probity of his clerk.

MOTHER AND SON SEARCHING.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 10.—[Special Dispatch.] Mrs. Andrew Welch of Los Angeles today asked the police to look for her son, James, 26 years of age, whom she failed to find after a search she had made yesterday afternoon and last night.

Within an hour after Mrs. Welch appealed to the police her son, James, called the aid of the police in finding his mother. He had been looking for the city all yesterday afternoon and last night for his parent, and expressed the fear that an accident had befallen her.

Now the police are looking for both Mrs. Welch and her son. They hope to bring the two together. Mrs. Welch came to this city several days ago after leaving with James instructions as to how he would find her when he arrived in San Francisco on the Rose City. James arrived safely and went to the hotel at which he expected to find his mother. She was not there. While he was out making inquiry for her Mrs. Welch went to the dock and found that her son's name appeared upon the passenger list, so one could give her any trace of his whereabouts.

Long Beach Woman Becomes Mother of Son and Two Daughters.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 10.—[Special Dispatch.] Busy Dr. Stork had quite a job on his hands when he paid an official visit to Mrs. J. P. Smith of Long Beach, temporarily a patient at one of the local hospitals. When his mission had been fulfilled, the great family of Smith had been increased by three—one little Mr. Smith and two little Misses Smith. Mother and triplets are reported to be doing nicely.

MORRIS POSES AS IRISHMAN.

Warrant Is Issued for His Arrest at Instance of Celtic Partner, Who Alleges He Has Been Mulcted.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10.—Posing for six years as an Irishman, Moses Morris mulcted Lawrence Muldowney, a genuine son of Erin, of nearly $9000 by means of forged checks and switching of safe deposit box keys, according to a warrant issued for Morris's arrest here today after an investigation by the police. It was upon the German Savings and Loan Society that Morris perpetrated most of his alleged forgeries.

Muldowney and Morris were partners as contractors in plastering, Morris doing most of the banking.

Morris left San Francisco on business a few days ago and Muldowney visited his safe deposit vault to obtain some money from a box in which he had placed, several months ago, $2800, according to his statement to the police today. He was surprised to learn that the key he presented belonged to a box hired by Morris. Morris's continued absence then made Muldowney suspicious, but when told by the bank officials that any money lost from his box would be made good by the bank he was reassured. He might still have been awaiting Morris's return had he not received an envelope containing two safe deposit keys, and a something, he said, in the nature of a written confession.

Morris's alleged impersonations of Muldowney at the paying teller's windows have covered a period of nearly seven years.

CHEER SONG; ROB SINGER.

After Applauding Young Woman's Number at Cabaret Two Men Waylay and Relieve Her of Diamonds.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10.—"If the wealth of all the world were mine, I'd lay it at your feet."

Mrs. Ada Clark sang this song at a local cabaret last night. The young men were interested listeners and applauded heartily. Mrs. Clark later walked home unattended. She was approached by two men, one of whom said deferentially:

"Excuse us lady, but please make good."

She recognized the men who had shown much appreciation of her song.

"What do you mean?" she asked.

"We mean you'd better come through with the sparklers."

She gave them her diamond earrings.

WOMEN TRY FOR BADGES.

Seventy-five of Them, from Thirty to Sixty-one Years of Age, Want on Seattle Police Force.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Seventy-five women, the youngest 30 and the oldest 61, will take the civil service examination tomorrow for the position of policewomen, a position recently created by the City Council through the efforts of Councilman Auston E. Griffiths.

Up to date the Chief of Police has authority to employ four policewomen, but it is understood that when the tax budget is made up for 1913, work on which will begin within two weeks, an effort will be made by certain of the Councilmen to reduce the number of men in the police department and increase the number of women. This plan is credited with having the support of a number of the city officials. Whether or not Chief of Police Claude Bannock has agreed to such a plan has not been announced, but it is understood that the Mayor is not opposed to the employment of more women in the police department.

CANDIDATES MUST ACT.

OPEN SEASON ABOUT OVER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, July 10.—Aspirants for nominations for Congress, State Senate or State Assembly have two weeks left in which to secure their nomination petitions and place them on file in the offices of the County Clerks or registrars of voters, according to the provisions of the State primary law. Then five days later these same petitions must be filed with the Secretary of State, so that July 25 will be the last day on which nominations will be filed in the State Secretary's office.

WEEKLY REST DAY WANTED.

INITIATIVE TO BE INVOKED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, July 10.—Colusa county sent in a "weekly rest day act" petition today, invoking the initiative for the establishment by law of one day a week for rest—Sunday. The proposed law seeks to do away with liquor selling, all unnecessary work and all sports on the Sabbath. Some of the exceptions listed are operation of railroad trains, loading and unloading perishable goods and freight, running street cars, telephones and telegraph, the operation of hotels and restaurants, lodging-houses and places necessary for health, such as drug stores.

Twenty-five Thousand Feast on Salmon at Portland.

Two Tons of Potatoes Eaten as a Mere Incidental.

Amusement Park Thrown Open to Delegates.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The biggest feast ever pulled off in Portland was managed at the Oaks on the occasion of the salmon barbecue to visiting Elks and their families this evening when 25,000 visitors feasted at the 600-foot board, the piece de resistance being 5000 pounds of Royal Chinook salmon fresh from the Columbia and hot off the coals on which it was broiled.

In addition to the salmon, which for the most part was donated by Columbia River salmon packers, there were consumed two tons of potatoes which, with 500 bunches of onions, 500 bunches of radishes, 100 boxes of celery, 100 gallons of oil, fifty pounds of salt, ten pounds of white pepper and 100 dozen eggs, were made into a salad. With this were served 6500 loaves of bread, 426 rolls of butter, 100 boxes of crackers and 100 pounds of coffee in souvenir mugs, 5000 of which had been purchased for the occasion.

A Pacific Coast clam chowder was another feature of the feast, 100 boxes of clams having come from the Coast today. The commissary department provided 30,000 paper plates, the same number of paper napkins together with knives, forks, spoons and other utensils in ample abundance to facilitate rapid serving of the huge crowds.

In addition to the feast, all the concessions at the big amusement park were freely open, without price to the Elks and their friends. The chutes, joy wheel, tickler, skating rink, etc., were all thronged, and there was continuous vaudeville, out-of-door amusement features and band concerts, all of which were free.

The festivities at the Oaks started early in the afternoon and continued until midnight.

GRAND LODGE VOTES TO MAINTAIN RULE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) July 10.—The Grand Lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks decided today by a large majority to maintain its rule regarding affiliation fees in subordinate lodges. This rule permits a lodge to exact from a member of another lodge applying for transfer the difference that may exist in the initiation fee of the lodge in question. A sentiment had been shown to do away with the differential payment.

The Committee on Ritual in its report recommended that no action be taken in the matter of the lodge goat. A year ago at the instigation of the big city lodges the goat was abolished as a part of the initiation ceremonies on the ground that it lacked dignity. The lodges in many of the smaller cities so strenuously objected to the abolishment of the goat that it was brought before the Ritual Committee a second time for consideration. The committee refused to recede from its action and was upheld by the Grand Lodge.

PRESERVING THE ELK.

The Committee on Preservation of Elk in its report today stated that the Federal government had appropriated $7000 for the preservation of existing herds and that bills are pending in Congress for further protection of the animal.

The Grand Lodge put consideration of the reconstruction of the national home over until tomorrow. The Committee on National Home, it is understood, will refer back to the Grand Lodge the queston of rebuilding the home at Bedford, Va., or constructing a new home in some other city. It is the general opinion that the whole matter will be laid on the table for at least another year.

The principal amusement feature today was a great salmon barbecue, which the local Elks' lodge gave in honor of the visitors. It was estimated that more than 20,000 partook.

The annual parade of the uniformed rank will be held tomorrow. Entries indicate that there will be over 15,000 Elks in line.

SUCCEEDS HIMSELF.

Robert W. Brown of Louisville, Past Grand Exalted Ruler, will succeed himself as chief justice of the grand forum for the coming year. The position on the board made vacant by the death of John F. Donovan of Milwaukee, Wis., will be taken by Edward W. Rightor of New Orleans, present chairman of the Judiciary Committee. The appointments have been made by the Grand Exalted Ruler Sullivan and confirmed by the Grand Lodge.

The task of the Judiciary Committee, which has been engaged for the present week wading through amendments, resolutions and suggestions relating to modifications or revision of the constitution of the order, has been completed and the Grand Lodge listened today to the recommendations of the committee. Deliberations were kept scrupulously secret. The reports of the elections and distributions committees were merely formal and were placed on file.

The most intense interest of the convention delegates centered in the report of the Repeal Committee because of the drastic revision advocated by certain subordinate lodges.

The report of the Grand Trustees also is likely to command attention. The report on the new Elks home project will consume probably most of the day tomorrow after the parade. How to raise the $500,000 necessary for the completion of the home with only $90,000 in sight is the problem facing the Grand Lodge.

SAN FRANCISCO'S BOOM.

Today's proceedings in Elkdom started sharply at 12:01 a.m. when the San Francisco delegations purloined Idaho's prize donkey, borrowed the big fife and drum corps of the Great Falls, Mont., delegates, and started a parade headed by their own military band in furtherance of their campaign to secure the grand lodge session and annual reunion of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks for 1915.

With the election of officers out of the way, San Francisco and Seattle held undisputed sway in the political field today and the big delegations from both cities worked overtime in setting forth the bright particular reasons why the Elks should visit each city in the year of the great Panama-Pacific Exposition.

ECHO OF AN ABDUCTION.

Young Wife Obtains a Divorce from Husband Serving Time on Conviction of Robbing His Mother-in-law.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Helen Whitson de Lorme, who achieved notoriety recently when Henri de Lorme was charged with abducting her from this city to the Santa Cruz Mountains with the police in pursuit, was granted an interlocutory decree of divorce by Judge Wood in the Superior Court today.

Following the failure of a jury to convict De Lorme of being a white slaver, subsequent to the abduction, the couple married here in October.

De Lorme now is serving a sentence of six months in the County Jail for burglary committed in the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Catherine Johnson.

Mrs. Johnson was the supporting witness for her daughter in today's proceedings. De Lorme, although served with the complaint at the time the suit was filed, failed to answer and was not represented in court.

Mrs. De Lorme, who is but 18 years of age, testified that before and after their marriage De Lorme tried to induce her to enter a dance hall. She said he told her she could earn $100 a night.

Pinch attempted to get into the stage door of the theater, but was refused admission by Emery, whereupon Pinch shot the stage manager, the bullet entering the lower abdomen. Pinch, who was captured soon after the shooting, is said by the prison officers to appear insane.

SACRAMENTO, July 10.—That a movement is on in the southern part of the State, at least, to have prohibitionist party candidates at the State primaries September 3, is indicated in letters received today by the Secretary of State from the County Clerk of Los Angeles county and from A. A. Phelps, county chairman of the party in San Diego. The Los Angeles County Clerk states that a movement has been started in that city by the party leaders, and the letter from Phelps asks for copies of the State primary law.

The Tuscarora was inward-bound.

DEFENDS WITH TEETH.

COLTON, July 10. — Officers searched the countryside today for a young man who escaped after his hands and fingers had been severely mutilated by Mrs. Maria Egan, who bit him when he tried to attack her last night. Mrs. Egan met the man on the road to her home. As is customary in the country she accepted a ride in his buggy, but instead of letting her out, the assailant drove to a lonely spot, where he attempted to choke her. Mrs. Egan managed to sink her teeth in the hands of the assailant, and she said she nearly bit them off before he jerked away and fled. The woman's waist was covered with blood from the wounds inflicted on the man's hand by her teeth.

Landis and Mrs. Bradford quarreled over business matters. He said he shot her in self defense.

BRIBERY OF BELL BOYS.

comment upon the stories told by the boys and even declined to give out their names. A stenographer was called to take down every word of both boys' stories and it was said in the evening that they varied widely. It was noted that Deuter left the Criminal Court building unaccompanied and this led to a report that he had not admitted he swore falsely when he testified at the trial that he had seen Mrs. Henning and Mr. Funk in the Grand Pacific Hotel.

On the other hand Enright, who is known to have told much that he knows, was kept under continuous surveillance. He was brought to the Criminal Court building by a law clerk in the offices of the firm employed by Mr. Funk, and was kept under careful guard to prevent any agents of Attorney Donahoe from talking to him.

BEFORE THE GRAND JURY.

It is said that Slavin is due to tell what he knows to Mr. Wayman tomorrow, and he may be taken straight before the grand jury.

"I think it will be shown that overtures were made to practically every bell boy in the hotel to become a witness for the crowd," a detective who has worked on the conspiracy plot for weeks, said this evening. "It has been said that Slavin was paid $1000 and then failed to show up as a witness. I don't think he got that much, but he got hundreds all right. The other fellows did, too. It will be shown that the bell-boy item of the Funk prosecution ran into the thousands, or close to it.

"We have evidence also tending to show that attempts were made to get bell boys of the Congress Hotel, where both of the Hennings used to work, to go on the stand as witnesses against Mr. Funk. The agents didn't stop with the bell boys.

"They talked to chambermaids and porters—any employees whom they believed would serve their purpose to blacken the name of the man they were after. The surprise to us is that with all their scouting only one boy, Eddie Deuter, was found who stuck as far as the witness stand. We are now trying to get a trace of several hotel employees who left the city when the trial became hot, and whom we suspect were spirited away to prevent them from telling what they knew."

Besides the bell-boy feature, it was learned that friends of Mrs. Henning, who has already confessed her part in the frame-up, are willing to come to the front and corroborate her in many details.

LORIMER CASE GOES TO VOTE.

Concluding Speeches Will Be Made During the Day.

Senators Protest Against the Clamor of Hysteria.

Find Food for Sober Thought in Henning Confession.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 10.—When the Senate took up the Lorimer case today it was indicated that all speeches except Senator Lorimer's would be concluded and that a vote would be reached tomorrow.

Senator Johnston of Alabama, opened today's session. He conceded a popular demand for Lorimer's unseating and said he knew he would be on the unpopular side in supporting the Illinois man.

ROOSEVELT CONDEMNED.

Senator Johnston condemned as "un-Christian and un-American" Col. Roosevelt's course in declining to sit with Senator Lorimer at the Hamilton Club's dinner at Chicago.

Senator Jones of Washington, who opposed Lorimer at the first trial, but who supports him now, said he had changed his convictions because he had personally heard the witnesses against Lorimer. He complained of public clamor in the case and charged it was having too much influence in determining the votes of Senators.

IRRITATION.

This statement aroused William Alden Smith of Michigan, who confessed to irritation as to what he characterized as "covert and insinuating intimations in the press in support of Mr. Lorimer that those in opposition lack honesty and courage and are subject to influence by public clamor."

Senator Jones denied any intention of criticising the attitude of others, but asserted there had been too much effort to control public sentiment in opposition to Lorimer. He admitted there also had been perjury on both sides.

The two Senators discussed the evidence at some length, and Mr. Smith finally referred to the recent lawsuit brought in Chicago by John Henning against Clarence Funk, general manager of the International Harvester Company, in which Henning charged Funk with alienation of his wife's affections.

Henning lost his case and his wife is said to have confessed that the charge was a conspiracy to injure Funk for his sentiment against Lorimer. Senator Smith said he thought the suit had been brought to affect the Lorimer case.

Reference to perjury brought out a vigorous statement from Senator Jones. He expressed the opinion that the money distributed by Lee O'Neil Browne had been contributed by "whisky interests."

"There is no positive evidence, but from the record it is the most probable theory as to where the money came from," he said.

"Isn't it just as reasonable to suppose that the corruption fund was used to elect Lorimer as to influence legislation?" Senator Pomerene asked.

"I do not think so," replied Mr. Jones. "It was a legislative fund and there is nothing in the record to indicate that the money was used for any other purpose."

TOUCHED BY HER POEM.

PRESIDENT PARDONS WOMAN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 10.—A prisoner-mother's poem, woven about the desolation of her only child, so touched President Taft's heart that he today commuted to expire at once the five and one-half-year sentence of May E. Brown, convicted at Salt Lake City, June 20, 1911, of violating the white slave law. The trial judge and United States Attorney indorsed the woman's appeal for clemency, the first granted in a white slave case.

WILL OF COGHLAN FOUND.

Next of Kin Who Have Been Dividing His Estate May Have to Make Restitution to Administrator's Son.

[BY CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 10. — [Exclusive Dispatch.] A dispatch to the Star from Cheltenham says the will of the late Henry Thomas Coghlan, who died in 1892, leaving an estate valued at approximately $5,500,000, and for which a reward of $52,500 was offered, has been found. Coghlan lived the life of a recluse in a house in Hyde Park Gardens. When he died the house was ransacked for a will, but none was found. The fortune was divided among the next of kin.

The estate has been administered since 1892 by the late Baronet Sir Henry Delves Broughton.

Details of the will have not been divulged, but it is stated everything was left to Sir Henry Delves Broughton. Hence the relatives who got a part or the estate will have to make restitution to the present Baronet Sir Delves Louis Broughton.

MODESTO VOTES "DRY."

MAJORITY IS FORTY-TWO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON, July 10.—Modesto voted to go "dry" today by a majority of forty-two votes. The "wets" cast 1046 votes and the antis visited the polls to the number of 1088. On the question of "strict regulation," 1146 voters declared against that plan and 894 voted for regulation. All of the licenses expire within five days and none of them will be renewed, as under the terms of the ordinance calling for the election the result was to go into effect within ten days. Stanislaus county, of which Modesto is the county seat, will now be dry throughout, save at Newman, where a few saloons are open. All told fifteen saloons will be closed in Modesto.

CUT COST OF DYING.

GARY (Ind.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The problem of the high cost of dying was solved in a way by two Gary families today when a joint funeral service was conducted in an undertaking parlor. Mourners and members of the bereaved families went in one procession to the graves, with the result that the funeral costs were cut down considerably. Last Monday, Rosie Mila Drakulich, a 6-year-old girl, died of burns received while playing near a bonfire. Later, Mrs. Rose Vukmanovich, wife of a steel-worker and mother of three children, passed away after a lingering siege of tuberculosis. As is customary in Gary's foreign quarter, the relatives of the dead decided to give them every honor possible. But a brass band, carriages, flowers, church services, etc., come high. After several consultations, it was decided to hold a joint funeral service and bury the bodies in the same grave.

HOLD-UP NEAR COFFEYVILLE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARSONS (Kan.) July 10.—Missouri, Kansas and Texas passenger train No. 9, known as the "Katy Limited," which left here at 10 o'clock last night, was held up by six masked men near Coffeyville, Kan., early today, according to a report received at the local headquarters of the road. The bandits held the train two hours, during which time the passengers and trainmen were guarded in the coaches by two of the robbers, while the others exploded nine charges of dynamite in their unsuccessful attempt to open the express safe in the baggage car. No effort was made to rob the passengers and no one was injured. Apparently the robbers became alarmed and left of their own accord, fearing the approach of another train. The bandits boarded the train as it left Coffeyville. When the train was about ten miles north of Barlesville, Okla., at a lonely spot in a cut, two of the robbers broke into the express car, placed a guard over the employees, and rolled the safe out to the embankment, where successive charges of dynamite were used ineffectually. Others of the gang fired shots into the air to intimidate the trainmen and passengers, few of whom ventured to peer from the windows.

HOLDS UP THIRTY MEN.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 10.—George Rodgers, 33 years old, alias George Cook, said by the police to be a former convict, attempted a daring holdup in a South State-street saloon early today when he compelled thirty men drinking at the bar to throw up their hands at the point of a revolver. He then called them before him, one by one, and commanded them to give up their valuables. Patrolman Loock arrested the holdup man after an exciting struggle, in the course of which he was the target for several bullets fired by Rodgers.

Printy and Deutschman were the two obtained today. H. L. Williams, No. 411 North Harvey avenue, Oak Park, and William L. Friedel were in turn tendered by the defense. Both were released by the State. Friedel was excused because of his admission that the sex of the defendant might have weight in forming an opinion as to her innocence or guilt. Williams was challenged for cause when he said he did not believe in circumstantial evidence.

Adolph E. Stearns was excused by agreement when he declared: "I don't believe I could be a competent juror in this case."

Christian B. Sunds, No. 2122 Tripp avenue, was excused by agreement for lack of knowledge of the meaning of "chimerical," "conjectural conclusion," "hypothetical."

At this juncture the venire was exhausted and court adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Senator introduced an amendment to the sundry civil bill calling for $1,250,000 with which to build works to restrain the Colorado River from overflowing in the Imperial Valley. The Secretary of the Interior urged the appropriation and the President sent a special message to Congress advocating the appropriation.

"That seemed to be as good support as any one could ask," said Senator Works. "However, the Appropriation Committee gave me to understand that the bill will have to go over until the next session."

Third-Termers Are Trying to Bluff Governor of Illinois Into an Indorsement of the Roosevelt Conspiracy.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 10.—[Special Dispatch.] Gov. Deneen is to be made one of the issues of the third-termers in their pro-Roosevelt campaign in Illinois.

The enemies the Governor has made as the State's chief executive are expected to rally to a third candidate for his office. The war has really been started by Roosevelt himself, according to Medill McCormick, who returned to Chicago late last night from Oyster Bay. The third-termers want the Governor to declare himself for Roosevelt, but it is not expected by Illinois politicians that he will take the radical step.

POLITE POKER UNPROFITABLE.

Woman Says in Answer to Suit for Divorce It Has Only Poverty.

[By Pacific Wireless Telegraph.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10.—Mary Frances Bell took oath today that there is nothing but poverty in petticoat poker. In her answer to her husband's suit for divorce she affirms that she is destitute. She asks $300 a month alimony from Chester A. Bell, who she says, owns a ranch near Los Angeles, has money on deposit here and receives $10,000 a year from theatrical rights. The fact that Mrs. Bell ran a polite poker game for women in a fashionable hotel became public when her husband filed his suit. She does not deny it.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Attorneys for Mrs. Beachey and her husband, Lincoln Beachey, the aviator, whom she is suing for divorce, announced to Supreme Court Justice Gavegan today that a reconciliation had been effected. The court then said he would sign an order discontinuing the case. Mrs. Beachey brought suit on June 24, alleging on many of his flying engagements he went away with another.

PRINCESS SEEKS DIVORCE.

Proceedings Are Under Way in London Court Against Relation of Austrian Imperial Family.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

LONDON, July 10.—The divorce court was busy yesterday with a suit for the nullity of the marriage of the Princess Jeanne Marie Louise del Porte de Bourbon against Prince Charles Albert Edgar Serge Caesar de Bourbon, who claims relationship with the imperial family of Austria. The couple were married in London in March, 1910. According to the papers, Prince Charles deserted Princess Jeanne in September of the same year. This happened in Paris, where the Prince was seen with another woman, who said she was his wife. He afterwards disappeared.

INVOLVED IN AMERICA.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 9.—[Special Dispatch.] It is believed the Prince Charles de Bourbon, mentioned in the cable dispatch is the man described as an "adventurer" in the affidavit by Henry F. Ritchey, former manager of the Hotel Latham, New York, who was referred to in the dispatches recently in connection with an application by Ritchey's wife, Mrs. Sarah Purdy Ritchey, for alimony, pending a suit for divorce.

In his affidavit Mr. Ritchey said:

"My wife allowed herself to be made the victim of the social fascination of a certain adventurer known as Prince de Bourbon, who with his wife and son stopped at the Latham until he had incurred $1000 obligation for board. This was allowed because I was weakly influenced by Mrs. Ritchey's intercession and their asking me to extend credit. Meanwhile, she bestowed upon these people cash and valuable gifts against my wishes and advice."

Mrs. Ritchey admitted that she was interested in the Prince de Bourbon and his family, but said she understood that one Frank Howard was liquidating the claims against the Prince.

The man styling himself Prince Charles de Bourbon and claiming to be a cousin of Prince Henry of Bulgaria and successor to the latter's throne of Bulgaria, was heard of in this country eight years ago, when he and his wife and young son were drifting from one high-class boarding-house in the city to another.

Henry F. Ritchey came here from San Francisco and for a number of years was manager of the Latham Hotel in 110th street.

ADDRESSED BY GOV. WILSON.

Democratic Nominee Makes First Public Address Following Baltimore Convention in Atlantic City.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) July 10.—What Atlantic City lacks and needs most is moral pride, in the opinion of Gov. Woodrow Wilson, who addressed a throng of 5000 persons at the laying of the cornerstone of the Y.M.C.A. building here today. It was the Democratic nominee's first appearance on the platform since the Baltimore convention and the crowd cheered him enthusiastically.

The Governor was introduced by John Wanamaker, former Postmaster-General, who referred to him as a "plain man and a learned statesman."

Among the men who met Gov. Wilson at his hotel today was William Cramp, retired ship-builder of Philadelphia.

"I have voted the Republican ticket for over forty years," he told the Governor, "but in 1912 I will vote for you."

William J. Burns, who investigated the alleged councilmanic graft cases in Atlantic City, talked with the Governor for a few minutes about the local situation.

Modern Treatment For Drink Habit

The Neal Drink Habit Treatment Makes Sober, Useful Men of Alcoholic Wrecks.

Drinking men should not be treated for a disease of a willful habit, but for a general poisoning of the system with alcohol.

When men drink until the appetite and craving for alcoholic stimulants become stronger than the will-power to stop at once, and never take another drink, they need the Neal Treatment.

There is good in all treatments, but the Neal has many advantages over the old time methods of ten and twenty years ago.

For instance the Neal is a harmless vegetable remedy, always administered internally—no powerful, dangerous hypodermic injections are ever used—and will relieve all craving and necessity for drink in three days' time.

The Neal Drink Habit Treatment is now being successfully administered at fifty-three Neal Institutes in the United States, Canada and Australia.

If you are drinking too much yourself, or, if you have a relative or friend who is a confirmed drinker, call at the Los Angeles Neal Institute, 945 South Olive Street, for full information, or write or 'phone G. U. Neal, Manager, for Dr. Neal's free booklet. Phone Broadway 4602, A4072.

One Hundred and Twenty-Five Pennies

The most pleasing subscription on our books at the close of business last night was represented by these precious pennies, a first payment on 100 shares.

It is a subscription of which every one of our twenty-seven hundred and sixteen shareholders can be justly proud.

These pennies, wrapped in packages of twenty-five each, were the mean used by a thoughtful woman to arouse a man to the value of THRIFT.

Of the entire THREE HUNDRED and FORTY-EIGHT THOUSAND DOLLARS now subscribed for the shares of our Company, no other sum means as much to us.

It represents the very thought itself that this enterprise stands for.

Not merely the saving, but the putting of these savings where an actual living interest can be taken in their successful growth to something larger.

Our pride in this subscription is two-fold.

Pride in what the subscription means to the subscribers and pride in their selection of our Company.

It has given us an even broader and better view of the position we have reached and what we mean to this community.

It truly shows that money is not of the first importance in building up a great business.

From twenty-two shareholders to twenty-seven hundred and sixteen in less than five months, and from $30,000 to $348,000, shows that the right kind of shareholders count most.

Teachers.

WOMAN BEATEN BY KANSAS MAN.

Topekan, President of the Educators' Association.

Brooklyn Miss, Defeated, Charges Underhand Methods.

Pedagogues Resolve to Favor Universal Suffrage.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 10.—Aside from electing E. T. Fairchild of Topeka president, after a heated contest, in which Chicago teachers were severely criticised by New York members for "behind-the-curtain tactics," the National Education Association went on record today as favoring:

Woman's suffrage "because women teachers realize the responsibility of training youth for citizenship."

Promotion of international peace.

Investigation of teachers' salaries throughout the country with reference to the high cost of living.

Uniform Federal law for marriage and divorce.

Promotion of plans for a national university.

Extension by Congress of plans for training in agriculture, domestic economy and other industrial work.

Greater attention in the public school to health of pupils.

Extension by Congress of the work of the national bureau of education so as "to embody a group of competent men and women to study thoroughly the problem of rural education, city school administration, vocational education, sanitation and hygiene and higher education, including the training of teachers."

That school playgrounds provide at least one square rod for each pupil.

"BEHIND THE CURTAIN."

The candidacy of Miss Grace C. Strachan, district superintendent of schools, Brooklyn, N. Y., for president in opposition to Mr. Fairchild, brought on the fight of the day. After the Nominating Committee had reported in favor of Mr. Fairchild, Miss Strachan's friends charged he had been selected at a caucus to which New York members had not been invited.

Miss Katherine D. Blake and Mathilda Coffin Ford of New York accused Chicago teachers of conducting their campaign "behind the curtain" of the auditorium where the convention was held. They said a delegation from the Chicago Principals' Club had gone to New York to induce Miss Strachan to withdraw.

FROM MAYNOR GAYNOR.

Miss Strachan charged Chicago teachers had attempted to make capital out of the fact that she brought a letter of introduction from Mayor Gaynor of New York to Mayor Harrison of Chicago.

Miss Margaret Haley of the Chicago Teachers' Federation circulated an affidavit giving her version of the meeting of Chicago teachers with Miss Strachan. Miss Haley said that a Miss McLeary urged Miss Strachan to induce a good friend of the book company to help her out. Miss Strachan charged the Chicago teachers with attempting to "control" not only the present election, but the future elections.

DECLARED ELECTED.

Whatever friends she had in the book business, Miss Strachan declared, were those who had known her for years. She said it was inevitable that any teacher in her position should know someone in the book business, but to intimate that she might be influenced by them was unjust. A motion to substitute Miss Strachan's name for that of Mr. Fairchild was lost and Mr. Fairchild was declared elected.

Superstition in Morocco.

[Wide World:] There is no country in the world where witchcraft is so deeply implanted as in Morocco, and to eradicate it will be the most difficult task that the French, in their endeavors to open up the country to European trade and civilization, will have to face. The tables are so thoroughly convinced of the truth of their practices and doctrines that they even attempt to convert educated Europeans. Dr. Mauchamp himself, as M. Jules Bois relates, was approached by these maitres des tenebres with that object in view. In the hope of making a convert of the French hakim, they told him of the methods which they employed to injure and even kill the enemies of their clients. Finding that their task was hopeless, and that the young savant was questioning them merely with the object of satisfying his curiosity, they finally turned against him and signed his death warrant, for there can be no doubt that his assassination was directly due to the perfidious maneuvers of the wizards of Marrakech.

CURIOUS CHINESE RITES.

Much Noise a Part of Funeral Occasions With Other Ceremonies Born of Peculiar Superstition.

[Westminster Gazette:] In most Chinese funerals professional mourners are employed. They cover up their heads and faces and yell and sob and scream and groan at the top of their voices, not with the idea so much of showing grief, as with the intention of driving away the evil spirits from the soul of the departed.

With this notion also the mourners bang trays, beat gongs and play weird musical instruments. Another precaution taken is that the funeral cortege passes over running water before the dead is actually buried, as this may be the means of throwing the pursuing fiends off the scent.

At the graveside a precaution is taken which is typical of the ingenuity of the Chinese mind. A large packet of thin rice paper containing some hundreds of leaves is stamped all through with seven peculiar slits like those made with the nib of a pen. The whole mass of paper is burned and the ashes scattered around. When, therefore, the fiends arrive, presumably very exhausted with their efforts to catch up with the Chinaman's soul, they find to their dismay that they have first of all to piece together all the scattered ashes of paper, and then to go in and out of the seven holes in each individual sheet of paper.

As you can readily understand, even a very slick fiend finds this rather a tedious task, and by the time he has accomplished it the soul of the departed has arrived in the land of the blest.

There is little or no ceremony actually at the grave, but food is cooked in the carcass at a sort of altar, and is left for the deceased in case he may feel peckish, and a quantity of joss sticks is left burning round the grave.

Another important point is, if possible, to bury the deceased in his or her native village. When we were waiting for the harbormaster's launch to take us home by water we found on the wharf a poor, shabby coffin laid out alongside a roasted ox, over which friends and relatives had mounted guard, and were moaning and playing music, which din and tumult had to be kept up until the boat arrived to take the wanderer home. Directly the boat started, water having been crossed, the spirits would be done and the efforts could be relinquished.

The Chinese are never in a hurry to bury their dead—it is only the government regulations which force them to do so. The other day a Chinese party, comprising husband, wife, several children and an old mother, started off for a short holiday trip up river by steamboat. On the way the mother died, but do you think this put an end to the jaunt or made the party leave the launch at the next stopping place? Not a bit of it.

They just screwed up the old lady in a box and took her around with them, determined that at any rate she should be given the opportunity of enjoying herself; and so it continued for several days till the coffin fell overboard by mistake and they lost it.

DAZZLING BEAUTIES IN FESTAL REGALIA.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND BY WIRELESS FROM CHICAGO TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 10.—The dress rehearsal of the Elizabethan tournament at Earls Court today was witnessed by Dowager Queen Alexandria, Princess Henry of Battenburg, Princess Christian and a great array of smart society.

The Queen of Beauty, Viscountess Curzon, looked dazzlingly lovely in white satin, gorgeous diamonds and a resplendant diamond on her hair. She proceeded to smoke a cigarette. The tilting in the lists was late and uneventful, while the knights suffered terribly from their armor and suffocating helmets.

The Earl of Craven, who married Cornelia Martin, wore ancestral armor made of the first gold Damascened work, worth millions. He became faint after a few minutes and, dropping his lance, flung his helmet to the ground, exclaiming: "I am choking," and gasped for air.

The spectators thought it exceedingly funny, despite the lack of color in Craven's cheeks.

The Duke of Marlborough refused to wear a helmet at all. He titled it an unbecoming, close fitting skull cap. He afterward said that the armor was impossible and his suffering, stiffness and soreness from grubbing of the armor on his joints made him sorry he ever took the job.

Redondo Beach.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORK BECOMES A FINE ART.

REDONDO BEACH, July 10.—At the grammar school of the Los Angeles diocese of the Episcopal Church, in session in the parish hall of Christ Church, this city, a conference regarding important questions concerning Sunday-school teaching was one of the most interesting features of the day.

Rev. E. L. Parson of Berkeley led the conference and a large number participated in the discussions. One of the questions was the age at which the segregation of the boys and girls should take place in the Sunday-school. It was the general opinion that this segregation should be made when the children were promoted from the primary department, between the ages of 7 and 9.

All favored keping the Sunday-school open through the summer, but of introducing special features.

There were different opinions regarding whether it is advisable to have religious services before the Sunday-school lessons or to begin the lesson as in day school. It was argued that if service were held prior to the lesson the child regarded this as an equivalent for the church service and so did not attend church.

Dean E. R. Colladay of Salt Lake City, who is giving a series of lectures at the summer school on the gospels, talked today of the gospel of St. John, and by request continued his talk in the afternoon at the close of the regular programme.

Bishop Johnson, who attends all of the sessions, created a ripple of surprise today when he said that, while he believed the Sunday-school teacher should be familiar with the work of the day school teacher of the child, he did not think the day school-teacher should be called upon to teach in the Sunday-school. He stated he thought the latter did her work during the week. This statement was made during the discussion on "Principles of Sunday-school Teaching," which was preceded by a talk on the subject by Rev. E. L. Parsons.

Rev. Leslie E. Learned, D. D., gave a talk on child study and Rev. Robert L. Windsor, who is treating the subject of the "Christian Year," at the summer school, today took up the origin and history of Christmas, Epiphany, Easter, Pentecost and the Ascension.

This evening a lantern slide lecture on "The Conquest of the Continent" was given by Rev. E. L. Howe.

PTOMAINE POISONING.

This Cause for Illness Is Probably Given to Obscure Troubles by the Attending Physician.

[New York Sun:] Serious and sometimes fatal illness is so frequently attributed to so-called ptomaine poisoning that public interest in this subject is quite natural. Recent litigation to obtain damages from the proprietor of a restaurant in which a customer claimed to have been poisoned by chocolate, whipped cream and cakes partaken of in this establishment again directs attention to ptomaine poisoning. The restaurant proprietor was mulcted in $100 damages, the Supreme Court of Louisiana deciding that he was liable for knowledge of the quality of food sold in his restaurant.

It is remarkable that the attorneys for the plaintiff succeeded in convincing the court that the food obtained by him was actually poisonous and that the manifestations occurring after the meal were really attributable to the latter. It would seem to a medical view very difficult if not impossible to establish this proposition with sufficient clearness to set aside every reasonable doubt and to warrant a verdict for the defendant.

Unless the defendant proved the unwholesomeness or poisonous condition of the articles which entered into the composition of the cakes, chocolate and cream it would appear unfair to accuse this menu of providing the poisoning alleged to be due to them. An acute gastric intestinal catarrh is so often caused by sudden temperature changes, as in the cholera morbus of the summer months, that ptomaine poisoning should be the least probable diagnosis based upon the symptoms mentioned if the physician is at all fair and indisposed to "snap diagnosis." In a summer hotel cases of cholera morbus have been observed which were charged to lobster salad, but which were readily traced to energetic dancing with intermissions on the veranda swept by cool sea breezes. A large number of so-called ptomaine poisonings from ice cream was traced to the cold breezes enjoyed on the return from the hot city on a swift boat and followed by cold surf baths. A health board investigation failed to discover "ptomaines" in this "evidence."

Ptomaine poisoning is often a facile cloak for impossible diagnosis, like acute indigestion and heart failure. The fact is that ptomaines have rarely if ever been chemically isolated. The word, derived from the Greek ptoma, corpse, indicates its origin in animal decomposition. This material has been scientifically studied by the great medical chemist Prof. Brieger of Berlin, who is called Pfeilgift (arrow poison) Brieger because he discovered for the German government the toxin contained in the arrow poisons of the Africans. Brieger found no less than twenty-one chemical substances, poisonous and innocuous, producing the most varied symptoms, the enumeration of which would bewilder the reader, in decomposed meat and fish.

Supported by a physician acquainted with these and other data, a skillful attorney would seem to have no difficulty in establishing the fallacy of ptomaine poisoning beyond a reasonable doubt at least.

THE CIGAR THAT FAILED.

Mr. Hardrocks Found a Match for His Cool, Calculating Business Disposition in His Son-in-law.

[Chicago Record-Herald:] "Billy," said Horatio Hardrocks, addressing his son-in-law, who just finished his wedding journey, "do you know that you had a mighty narrow escape before you married my daughter?"

The cool, calculating business man had a cigar that he liked and he was, therefore, in good humor. Billy Munson looked at him rather curiously for a moment and then replied:

"Oh, I've had a number of narrow escapes in my time."

"But this one," said Mr. Hardrocks, "was probably the narrowest of them all."

He blew out a few rings of smoke and contemplated them with pleasure as they floated toward the ceiling.

"Yes," he continued. "I had made up my mind to discharge you. Your work wasn't satisfactory, and I had even gone so far as to notify my secretary to inform you that your services were to be dispensed with."

Billy Munson was silent, but he did not seem to be at all disturbed.

"Well," the older man said, "you don't appear to be astonished."

"No. The fact is I knew it at the time. Your secretary told me."

"He told you, did he? And you had the presumption, knowing how I felt toward you, to ask my daughter to be your wife. I am surprised to hear you say so."

"I can't see why you should be surprised, sir. You see, I realized that it was time for me to do something to make my position secure."

For a moment Horatio Hardrocks gazed steadily at his son-in-law. Then he tossed his cigar into the grate. It had ceased to be comforting.

Handy Bits of Paper.

[Baltimore American:] A Yorkshire farmer was paid by check for some cattle he had sold. It was the first time that it had ever happened.

"What's this?" he said.

"Why, money for the beasts," said the cattle dealer.

The farmer stared and had to be assured that if he took it to the bank they would give him gold for it.

"Well," said he, "A'w'll try, but it's a wrong 'un thou'll hear about it."

The check was cashed, of course, and the farmer went home happy, but he could not sleep. He had seen a wonderful thing and it had excited him. As soon as day broke he made for the cattle dealer's house and woke the dealer.

"It's me," he said. "Where's tha get thim bits of paper from? Aw cud do wi' half a dozen myself."

CHINESE ARRESTED.

Los Angeles Inspectors Believe They Have in Custody Promoters of Contraband Seized on Island.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OAKLAND, July 10.—In the arrest tonight of Ah Chuck and Lee Gip Sam, Immigration Inspectors Adolph R. Nellsen and Ralph Conklin of the southern Federal district with headquarters in Los Angeles, believe they have in custody the agents who were to dispose of the ten contraband Chinese seized on San Clemente Island as they were preparing to start northward on the launch Starlight. The arrest was made after the inspectors had caused the Chinese to believe that the inspectors were engaged in the smuggling affair and had been intrusted by Ah Chuck with a letter to the coolies held aboard the launch.

William Gerald and Harry Lloyd, arrested at San Clemente Island, have been formally accused of conspiracy to smuggle Chinese as have Ah Chuck and Lee Gip Sam. Further arrests are promised by the immigration officials.

Heat is a necessity. Everybody must have it. When we can give you perfect heating adapted to your individual wants and requirements, vastly superior to steam, hot water or hot air, and at a cost of from 25 to 50 per cent. less, you are certainly going to do business with us. This is exactly what we can do, and this is why we say we have a monopoly in the heating business in Southern California.

The deluge of orders with which we have been swamped is the very reason why you have an opportunity to make an investment with us. Nowhere can you make an investment under such favorable conditions. Four weeks ago no one in Southern California had ever heard of the RECTOR SYSTEM. Nevertheless, so startling are the results which it accomplishes, and so eager is every one to have this System installed in their own homes, once they know about it, that we have in these four short weeks booked orders enough to show 7 per cent. dividends on our entire capital stock, and over 100 per cent. on the stock issued. If we can do this in the first month, without any selling organization, what will we do as the result of an aggressive, persistent campaign?

Can you not see why an investment made now, at the beginning, whether a few hundred or a few thousand dollars, will return a comfortable income yearly and increase in value by leaps and bounds?

We make no claims we can not prove. The Bribery Trial.

SHARP QUERIES TO HARRIMAN.

District Attorney Asks Him Several of Them.

Witness Tells of Brands of Socialism.

Aguirre Relieved as Bailiff by His Request.

During the cross-examination of Job Harriman yesterday by Dist.-Atty. Fredericks in the Darrow trial, the witness was asked if he had not had a close knowledge of the events leading up to the blowing-up of the Times Building. Alleged conversations had with Edward Adams Cantrell, another Socialist, were related by the District Attorney in which Harriman is supposed to have said that "the boys are on the job" and to have laughed heartily over the details of the horror in which twenty employees lost their lives. Harriman denied any knowledge of the plans of the dynamiters and declared that Cantrell has become his personal enemy through a split in the Socialist party.

The witness concluded with a long statement of the various wings of the party and showed how some advocated what they called "direct action," that is, acts of violence such as destroying machinery, blowing-up buildings and killing employers of labor. Harriman said he did not belong to that class, but on the other hand advocated the use of political persuasion and the union of the trades union with the Socialists. Capt. Fredericks several times sought to interrupt the talk on the principles of Socialism as not being responsive to his question, but Judge Hutton ruled the witness was entitled to explain his position. Several of the jurors seemed greatly impressed with the recitation of Harriman.

Mrs. Darrow was out again yesterday after an absence of a week from the courtroom. She looked pale and thin, but took her accustomed place beside her husband.

HARRIMAN'S BANK CALL.

Harriman was asked by Rogers where he was on the morning of November 28. He replied he was in his office about 8 o'clock. He said on the way he stopped at the German-American Savings Bank to get $500 from the safe deposit vault. He said he gave the money to I. H. Russell, his stenographer, to pay on a note.

The note was produced. It involved a transaction between Mary Dobbins and Harriman. The witness also produced a bank book of the First National Bank, showing the deposit of the $500 by the stenographer.

Capt. Fredericks interpolated that he did not deny that Harriman had been to the safe deposit vaults on the morning in question, but he insisted that the witness drew out $4000, $500 of which was applied on the note and $3500 "for other purposes."

However, the defense went on with its evidence and introduced a check showing the payment to the woman client.

On cross-examination, Capt. Fredericks asked several long impeaching questions which went to prove that Harriman is accused of having a knowledge of the plan for the destruction of the Times Building before it occurred.

A QUESTION.

"Did you not know that the Times Building was to be blown up?" asked Capt. Fredericks.

"No sir," said Harriman, with much emphasis.

"Did you not state to Edward Adams Cantrell at San Luis Obispo on the same day as the destruction of the newspaper plant: 'My God, The Times has been dynamited and twenty people killed?'"

The court did not think the question should be asked in that form. Capt. Fredericks explained that in his judgment, the witness was very close in his associations with those who were responsible for the dynamiting of the Times Building and that he had been associated also with the defense of the McNamaras. Finally when the question was asked, Harriman admitted there was a general conversation, but he asked leave to explain. This he did.

The witness was also asked if he was not found, bursting with laughter, in his room at the hotel, and that in response to questions by Cantrell if he did not say: "The boys are on the job," Harriman denied it and said Cantrell was his "bitter personal enemy." He also asserted that Cantrell had boasted he would put him "behind the bars."

A slight disturbance in the courtroom was quickly quelled and one man who applauded the sentiments of the witness was put out of the room. The court stated that no disorder would be permitted and that he would uphold the efforts of the officers.

DIFFERENT BRANDS.

Harriman was then allowed to go and explain the different brands of Socialism and show how the dissipated ones would sometimes resort to "direct action" as the witness put it.

Harriman denied he had ever made the statement that "I have known for some time preparations were being made to pull off that job," or words to that effect.

He also denied he had ever made the statement that he personally had dictated postponing the dynamiting of the newspaper plant until after the labor union convention held here the week in October, 1910.

He also denied he had ever held a conversation with Frank D. Merriam in which he had stated that the "job had been pulled off by the boys by the use of dynamite," or words to that effect.

Frank E. Wolfe, a Socialist and writer for labor-union publications, was the next witness. He was examined by Darrow personally. He said he remembered talking with Darrow on the morning of November 24, at about the hour that Franklin says he was getting the alleged bribe money from the defendant.

Wolfe said while they were talking Darrow had a telephone message to go to Main street. He was subpoenaed by a searching cross-examination by Capt. Fredericks.

The District Attorney developed the fact that Wolfe had not talked of this matter until after Franklin's testimony in the present case. He said he was in charge of a press clipping

The witness also produced a bank book of the First National Bank, showing the deposit of the $4000 by the stenographer.

Capt. Fredericks interpolated that he did not deny that Harriman had been in the safe deposit vaults on the morning in question, but he inquired if the witness drew out $4000, $3000 of which was applied on the note and $1000 "for other purposes."

Frank P. Wolfe, a Socialist and writer for labor-union publications, was the next witness. He was followed by Darrow personally. He testified he remembered talking with Darrow on the morning of November 1, about the hour that Franklin was getting the alleged bribe money from the defendant.

Wolfe said while they were talking he received a telephone message to go to Socialist headquarters, which were in Main street. He was subjected to a searching cross-examination by Capt. Fredericks.

The District Attorney developed the fact that Wolfe had not talked of this matter until after Franklin's testimony in the present case. He said he took charge of a press clipping bureau for the McNamara defense, and also sent articles relating to the arrest of the two dynamiters to various Socialist and laborite publications. He freely admitted his sympathies were with what he called the "working class" and that he was a great admirer of Darrow.

Wolfe was under cross-examination at the afternoon adjournment.

CHANGE OF BAILIFFS.
CONFIDENCE IN AGUIRRE.

In response to a veiled accusation appearing in a local morning paper to the effect that Martin Aguirre, bailiff of Judge Hutton's court, was unduly friendly to the defense, the judge, Attorneys Rogers and Appel, and even two jurors came to his defense yesterday. Aguirre, former warden of the State Prison at San Quentin, has been in charge of the Darrow jurors. They room at Hotel Trenton with several officers keeping watch at night. The article was called to the attention of Judge Hutton yesterday morning. Aguirre offered at once to resign, but the court declared he would not permit it and began a thorough investigation.

In open court Judge Hutton reverted to the insinuations that Aguirre and Appel were too friendly, and declared that the fullest investigation on his part had completely exonerated his officer. He said that only in response to a personal appeal from Aguirre would he allow the bailiff to be transferred, but under the circumstances he would assign the officer to duties directly under his own supervision, thus showing the absolute confidence the court places in him.

The matter was not brought to an issue until after the morning recess.

"A matter has arisen," said the court in substance, "in a sense outside this case. Information came to me last night and again this morning that one of the officers of this court in charge of the jury had some prejudice or feeling on one side or the other. I went to each juror separately, Juror Leavitt alone not being present (I saw him afterward) and asked each man certain questions. They have unequivocally stated that no one has attempted to influence them or cast any slurring remarks against either side.

"Martin Aguirre, in charge of the jury, has stated to me that it would be embarassing to continue in his present position after what has been said. Very much to my regret he has asked to be transferred. He has the entire confidence of this court."

Rogers arose to say that the defense wished to make some statements. He then charged the newspaper in question with publishing the criticism of Aguirre for the purpose of getting rid of the officer, and to disgrace him in the eyes of the public.

"It was a shame and an outrage," said Rogers. "The article was written by a man in the pay of the District Attorney's office. It is a scandal and a shame. I call for the author of the article. In two minutes I will show where he got his information."

Judge Hutton, addressing Rogers, said he had the utmost confidence in Aguirre.

Appel declared that Aguirre had long been a friend of his and that he proposed to stand by his friends. He offered to withdraw from the case if the fact that his known friendship for the bailiff would tend to prejudice the defendant in the eyes of the jurors.

The court assured Appel that such action was unnecessary.

Juror Golding then stood up to say that he did not want Aguirre to be displaced and that he thought he voiced the sentiment of all the jurors present. He was seconded by Juror Moore.

Capt. Fredericks said he thought Aguirre had taken "a strong, manly course" in asking to be relieved after what had been said against him by innuendo.

George Van Vliet was appointed by the court as custodian of the jurors.

ON COMMISSION HUNT.

Mayor Expected to Name Marble and Woodman as Members of the Harbor Board Today.

Edward Johnson, who owns a small block of stock in the Union Oil Company, which has contracts with the city, has decided to dispose of his holdings and take up the duties of Harbor Commissioner. W. S. Lysle, the other appointee, told the Mayor yesterday that he does not feel justified in sacrificing his oil stock and he declines the appointment.

The Mayor will resume his task today of trying to build a Harbor Commission. Yesterday he conferred with several Councilmen as to various prospective appointees, and it is understood at least one is tentatively decided upon, and the second, if his consent is secured.

Those the Mayor will next name are understood to be William Carey Marble, who was a member of the Board of Education a year ago, and who is vice-president of the J. M. C. Marble Company, and F. T. Woodman of No. 4123 Budlong avenue, an attorney. It is possible these names will be sent to the Council today.

At the conference yesterday eight of the nine Councilmen gave their approval to the Mayor's plan of securing Maj. Fries to serve as Assistant City Engineer for a term of three years at a salary of $500 per month.

As soon as an agreement on this line was reached the Mayor sent a telegram to Maj. Fries, asking him if he would enter such a contract, and received a reply stating that Fries would accept the position, provided he could obtain leave of absence without pay for the necessary time. The reply stated, however, that this may take Congressional action.

"I have never visited Great Britain," he said, "and I look forward to the trip with great pleasure. My wife will have entire charge of the party, so you may be assured I shall take no business cares with me."

Referring to prospects of Harriman lines, Kruttschnitt said:

"The outlook for crops in all the territory is good, except in Louisiana, which is affected by floods.

"There is nothing in the way of a new construction programme for our system. There's nothing in the trend of railroad earnings to justify expansion."

Stomach Trouble of 12 Years' Standing Gives Way to Duffy's

MR. FRED F. ZINK.

Mrs. Fred F. Zink, 2228 Saratoga St., New Orleans, La., writes of the great good done her husband:

"My husband suffered with stomach trouble for over 12 years, during which time he doctored with three doctors who gave him no relief. He kept growing worse, had to be very careful as to what he ate, as things always soured on his stomach, but, thank God, after taking three bottles of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey he was entirely cured. He still takes it as a tonic and we would never be without it. He now looks fine and weighs 180 pounds. I can highly recommend it to any one afflicted with stomach trouble."

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

Few diseases inflict upon their victims greater suffering than do dyspepsia, indigestion and other stomach troubles. If you have dyspepsia or indigestion in any form you should use Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. Its action is most natural. When taken at mealtime it stimulates the mucous surfaces and little glands of the stomach to a healthy action, thereby improving the digestion and assimilation of the food and giving to the system its full proportion of nourishment.

Sold in sealed bottles only by druggists, grocers and dealers, or direct, $1.00 a large bottle. Be sure you get Duffy's and that the seal over the cork is intact. Our doctors will send you advice free, together with a valuable medical booklet on application.

--Some Homes at Beverly Hills

There's a lot of thought going into that new home you're planning—
It's going to be quite an expense, too—

And you don't want to find—just as you get comfortably settled in it—that the man next door is going to put up an apartment building or that the view from your front porch is going to be cut off by an ugly, built-in-a-night "shack."

Aside from the annoyance—you know how the value of your property is depreciated by such atrocities. You'll have no fear of this in building your home at Beverly Hills.

Lots are all 80x200 feet, or larger. And you know BEFORE YOU BUILD just what the man next door CAN and CANNOT do.

You know that any new building in your neighborhood is going to add to the value of your property—just as the million dollars' worth of improvements already put into Beverly Hills adds to the value of your property.

A $300,000 hotel — the fashionable Los Angeles Town and Country Club on a neighboring hill, extra wide, smooth, petrolithic boulevards, lined with ornamental trees, shrubs and flowers—a water garden in itself worth your trip to Beverly Hills—cool mountain water, gas, electricity, a modern sewer system, excellent car service.

All these things have been established for you at Beverly Hills at tremendous cost.

Turn your motor car in the direction of Beverly Hills today—take a spin through those scenic canyons—run up on the sightly mansion-covered knolls. You'll also enjoy the trip out on the P. E. car. The revolt against the Committee of Fifteen appointed by Lissner to select candidates for the Legislature and for Supervisors has come to a head in the Sixty-Ninth Assembly District among his own followers. They have refused to accept the man that the committee intended to foist upon them, and on Tuesday night a meeting was held at South Pasadena of representatives of Monrovia, Alhambra, Sierra Madre and South Pasadena, at which the revolt was fairly started. John D. Reavis, who presided, declared that the citizens of the Sixty-ninth intended to name their own candidate, and his declaration was received with applause that indicated the temper of the delegates. G. Barry, editor of the Monrovia News, was elected permanent chairman, and William F. Axtman of South Pasadena, was chosen to be secretary.

To enlarge the scope of the movement, it was decided to hold a meeting next Monday night, at which ten delegates will be present from each of the communities in the district—those already in the movement, and Arcadia, Huntington Park and all the growing precincts lying just east of Los Angeles city. Every town is expected to present the name of a candidate from within its own borders and the entire convention will get behind the man who shall finally be selected.

Peter Milliken has been persuaded by the Republican leaders of Riverside county to make the contest for the party nomination for the Assembly in that district. He is admittedly a strong candidate. For several weeks he has not been well, and this has kept him from declaring himself, but now he is in the contest till the end. There is no Republican candidate against him and it is not likely that there will be one.

In the Thirty-ninth Senatorial District, of which Riverside is a part, the friends of C. C. Chapman are making the effort of their lives to induce him to seek the Senatorial nomination. Former Senator J. N. Anderson and present Senator Estudillo are in the contest already, but it is conceded that Chapman can win in a walk. In an effort to run for the Assembly nomination and try for the Senatorial at the same time, J. R. Newell of Placentia, who was originally promised the Assembly job at the Fullerton love feast of the Johnsonites, has lost all chance of winning either. Lew H. Wallace, nephew of the Lieutenant-Governor, has definitely withdrawn from the Senatorial race, despite the fact that he was handed the nomination on a silver platter at Fullerton by the self-constituted managers of Orange county's Republican party affairs.

This leaves T. E. Stephenson of Santa Ana as the only candidate for the Assembly nomination. If his Republicanism proves to be straight and not hyphenized, Orange county leaders say, he may have no opponent, although the coast towns are clamoring for representation.

Straight supporters of President Taft and the Chicago platform are to be named in every district, by the loyal Republicans of those districts, as candidates for the Assembly and the State Senate, and these names will be announced by the voters' committees by the end of this week. The time is too short to hold district conventions or conferences now, as every candidate must have his name filed within thirteen days from today. For this reason canvassing committees are doing the work as far as possible. The same plan is being followed in the Congressional districts and loyal candidates in the Ninth and Tenth districts will be named. The Ninth is the new district. Stephens, the present Los Angeles representative at Washington, is a resident of the Tenth.

Sloan Pitzer, City Attorney of Alhambra, candidate for the Republican nomination in the Ninth Congressional District, filed the names of his verification deputies yesterday with the County Clerk. They started on the work of procuring signatures to his nominating petition in the afternoon. Pitzer has not a wide acquaintance in the other precincts, but he is assured of a heavy vote in his own town.

Bert L. Farmer announced himself as a candidate for the Republican nomination to the Assembly in the Seventy-third District and filed the names of his verification deputies yesterday. There is a Socialist candidate out in the district, but otherwise Farmer is the only man to announce himself, and it is considered to be a foregone conclusion that he will be the party nominee. He has had experience at Sacramento as a Legislative attache, and is an expert on the city and county governments and laws.

There is to be a warm fight for the Assembly in the new Fifty-fifth District, which consists of Tulare county. G. W. Wyllie, author of the local option law, is out trying to win the Republican nomination for Congress away from J. C. Needham, and for Wyllie's shoes in the lower house of the Legislature, George W. Rush of Tulare, who has just turned 21 years of age and has only recently been admitted to the bar, is fighting with G. W. Conner of Lindsay. Conner has been a justice of the peace in his home town for years and is a well-known business man there. Aubrey M. Lumley of Porterville is out for the Democratic nomination. Lumley served two terms in the Assembly before. He and his brother publish a good paper at Porterville, the only thing the matter with which is its politics.

Practically the only San Diego candidate for Congress left in the new Eleventh District is Lewis R. Kirby, but S. C. Evans of Riverside is facing opposition from a new direction. Orange and Imperial are not over favorable to him, and Orange may enter one of its residents in the race. In the meantime, Kirby declares that he has spent months in his canvass and believes he will win the Republican nomination. George M. Cooley will probably make a fight for the Democratic nomination from the district. He is a resident of San Bernardino. San Bernardino has another possible Democratic candidate in Judge Bledsoe, while City Attorney Irving and H. H. Craig of Riverside are both frequently mentioned. San Diego has in William Kettner a Democrat who will probably have that county back of him for his party's nomination.

RIGHT HERE AT HOME BE A TIMES PICTOGRAPHIST.

It Will Be Great Fun, and It Will Pay Great Dividends!

Some of the world's most learned men, after years of education in universities all over the globe, are spending their lives trying to solve pictures, scratched and scrawled on the walls of caves and temples by savages ages ago dead and gone.

Did you ever stop to think of that? It's rather a peculiar pursuit to which to devote a lifetime, eh? Why do they do it?

That question a German scientist has endeavored to answer in a treatise recently published. He gives these wise men credit for an inordinate desire to uncover the secrets of the past, and so throw more light on the history of Mankind, and on the age-old problems of life, death, and eternity.

But he declares that the chief reason why these men bend their minds to solving the rude scrawls dug in the rock is that the pictures represent something—and the scientists want to find out what that something is!

Those scientists are quite human, you see. If they were living near Los Angeles they would probably be found, within a few days, busily engaged in a great picture contest that The Times is going to conduct. And not only the interest of solving the pictures would appeal to them, for those most successful in solving the pictures will get something more than the victory—they will be awarded splendid prizes.

All plans for starting this game very shortly are being perfected, so watch The Times closely for further announcements.

A series of pictures will be published in The Times. Readers will solve these pictures. Each picture will be drawn to represent one certain thing, and each picture will be honestly, clearly, cleverly drawn to represent that certain thing. No subterfuges, no catches, no tricks!

Keep your eye on The Times!

Makes Us Proud.

SURPRISE 'EM, DO OUR WOMEN.

Easterners Are Astonished at Their Progression.

Los Angeles Is the Imogene of American Cities.

Manhood and Womanhood of City Make It Great.

The culminating social function of the week set aside for the eighteenth annual convention of the National Municipal League was held in the main banquet-hall of the Alexandria Hotel last evening when the guests from every compass-point met with 150 Angelenos interested in the aims and objects of the league.

The beautiful weaving of natural flora with human artifice made of the banquet-hall a beautiful setting for the brave gowns of the women—for at least one-half of the guests were women, a fact which the eastern guests appeared to find difficulty in assimilating—and to which the highest encomiums of leweled speech paid tribute.

Meyer Lemar presented the president of the league, and toastmaster of the evening, William Dudley Foulke, who applied himself wittily and eloquently to the theme nearest his heart, "The National Municipal League." He urged a larger share of autonomy for the cities of the country, and congratulated California upon more nearly approaching the ideal in this regard than any other State.

Prof. Hart of Harvard assumed the place assigned on the programme to Mrs. Crane, who was injured Tuesday. His theme was "Work."

"You can't propel a reform government," he said, "and then say to it, 'roll on.' It requires work to keep it moving."

Mrs. Andrew Stewart Lobingier, president of the Los Angeles Woman's Club, measured up excellently well to the requirements of her subject, "Los Angeles," which she proved "the Imogene of American cities, because, like Shakespeare's heroine, in it are all of the advantages of the others combined. The success of suffrage," said Mrs. Lobingier, "excites in the secret souls of thinking women."

F. S. Spence comes all the way from Toronto, which fact failed to dim the luster of his wit or the eloquence of his application to the toast, "Reciprocity in Municipalities." "You have your way, and we have our way, and each of us doubtless does better in his own way," he said.

Robert S. Binkard of New York happily discussed "Our Right to Misgovernment." He finds that the business of politics needs an uplift, and that the manhood and womanhood of a city is what makes it great.

Mrs. Owen Wister responded to the toast, "The East," and reminded her auditors that the National Municipal League itself "came out of the East." Chester H. Rowell of Fresno concluded the programme near the morning's early hours by a response to the sentiment, "Government by Newspapers."

WINE FLOWS.

Interest in the convention was about evenly divided yesterday between the technical discourses upon the proper way to secure and operate a model municipality, and a division of sentiment between the "wets" and "drys" of the gathering, who found much food for argument in the controversy between the Entertainment Committee headed by Mrs. John R. Haynes, and the W.C.T.U. Federation, over the proposed serving of wine at the banquet last evening.

Mrs. Katherine Pierce Wheat, president of the Federation, went on record against the injection of the bubbles into the serious affairs which brings the league together, and during the day got a resolution sustaining the protest adopted by the Federation. The resolution declares that the use of intoxicants establishes an "unwise precedent," although members of the league council say the serving of light wine at the annual banquet is customary.

About the time the returns began coming in from the White Ribboners a committee, representative of the Unitarian and Universalist churches and the Fellowship, unlimbered its artillery and plunged into the fray with resolutions signed by C. Elwood Nash, E. Stanton Hodgin, Mrs. Edwin M. Williams and F. M. McReynolds.

The document is addressed to the National Municipal League and views with alarm the banquet preparations which "include the use of wine and other useless luxuries, bringing the price up to $5 per plate, and making it prohibitive to many of those most interested in the things the league stands for." The resolution concludes: "They (the two churches and Fellowship) therefore, not in censure but as a protest and note of warning, pronounce this action extravagant, exclusive and undemocratic, and trust that such cause for protest may be avoided in the future, as it is surely detrimental to the best interests of the league."

The battle raged through committee-room, corridor and banquet hall all day, but finally the "wets" won, and the wine flowed.

PROFOUND AND TECHNICAL.

Such profound topics as taxation, excess condemnation, effective housing campaigns, regulation of public utilities, commission government and city planning each presented to the league in long and learned essays occupied the entire day, broken only by a ray of lighter hue about the luncheon round-table at the Alexandria, where staid college professors unbent in more jovial banter.

In the morning "Municipal Finances and Taxation" offered a wide range for the browsing of the expert interested in this particular branch of municipal reform. Assistant Tax Commissioner Heydecker of New York, had a paper upon "Municipal Finances;" John Mitchell of the California State Board of Equalization, read a paper prepared by Prof. Plehn of the University of California, on "Municipal Finances, With Especial Reference to California." Dr. Burks, director of the Philadelphia Bureau of Municipal Research, discussed "Budget Making, Its Necessity and Significance."

At the round-table luncheon Prof. Reed of the University of California, presided. Prof. Hart, of Harvard, argued that the city's power of government should lie within itself. "It is not important," he said, "who does the things, but is important that the things get done."

This Is Minnie Quinn,

The victim of the Arlington-street murder mystery, one phase of which was reopened yesterday by a demand upon the local police for the jewelry worn by her. So far as known this is the only picture of the murdered woman in existence. It was brought from Dublin, Ireland, for purposes of identification.

BLOODY JEWELS STILL GLITTER.

ARLINGTON STREET SLAYING CASE GEMS WANTED.

Sanguinary Memories Dragged From the Grave by Réquisition on Local Police for the Ornaments Dillon Stripped From Victim's Battered Body After the Slaughter.

The Arlington-street bungalow murder case, which the local police have considered closed since the victim was positively identified as Miss Minnie Quinn of Chicago and Norfolk, and the murderer, C. C. Dillon of Chicago, was ground to death under the wheels of a train on the outskirts of the Windy City, has been reopened by a letter from Loftus Bros., a jewelry firm of that place.

They claim to hold a lien on the jewelry worn by the murdered woman, and taken from her by Dillon. The letter, which is in the hands of Captain of Detectives Flammer, says that Miss Quinn purchased the jewelry some months ago from the firm on the installment plan and that there are several payments yet to be made. The brothers make a formal demand upon Capt. Flammer for the goods.

The jewelry consists of a woman's gold watch, diamond ring, a small set gold ring, a bracelet, and a gold chain with a stone-set slide. The jewelry is valued at about $400. It is now in a safety deposit box of a local banking concern, the key to which is in the possession of the Public Administrator.

Capt. Flammer is also in possession of a copy of the only known photograph of the murdered woman. It was sent him by the police authorities of Dublin, Ireland, where Miss Quinn was born and lived the greater part of her life.

This picture has been shown to a number of Los Angeles merchants and others who came personally in contact with Miss Quinn and Dillon before the murder and has been identified by them.

The Los Angeles police also have Miss Quinn's trunk, which is filled with her clothes and personal belongings. It was sent to Capt. Flammer by the Chicago detectives. Why he does not know, nor what to do with them.

Dillon was a married man, with a family. He brought Miss Quinn to Los Angeles the latter part of April and on May 7 killed her in the Arlington-street house by fracturing her skull with a beer bottle. He then attempted to burn the house and body, but failed. He went to Chicago that night, and returned to his wife and family. To Mrs. Dillon he gave Miss Quinn's jewelry. She turned it over to the Chicago police after her husband was killed by a train as he was walking home after visiting some women friends on the outskirts of Chicago.

TWIXT JAIL AND PLAYHOUSE.

Great Christian Science Church to Be Built on Costly Site, Hill Street, Near First.

The Fourth Christian Science Church decided yesterday to rear a magnificent building on Hill street between the City Jail and the Mason Opera-house. John C. Smith, architect, was authorized to prepare tentative plans for the fine church. The site, bought several months ago for $75,000, is 120 feet south of First street. It has a frontage of ninety-seven and one-half feet on Hill street, extends back 150 feet, and fifty feet from the street line impinges upon the jail property a distance of ten feet, reducing the rear width that much.

The plans upon which the architect is to work at once contemplate a handsome fire-proof, concrete-and-steel structure, embracing all that is modern and artistic, capable of seating 2500 persons, and costing approximately $100,000. The proposed building will practically cover the entire ground space, with a basement for Sunday-school purposes, and the great auditorium level with Hill street. There will be a spacious foyer, cloakrooms, readers' and musicians' rooms, secretary's office and other conveniences.

The improvement will be of such a character as to add materially to the value and attractiveness of First and Hill streets, and is expected to be the forerunner of other notable projects in the same neighborhood.

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

The County Charter.

LOS ANGELES, July 9.—[To the Editor of The Times.] I was fortunate enough to attend the meeting called by the county freeholders and desire to sum up the matters discussed, in a few words.

In the first place, while I had a carefully-arranged address ready to deliver to the members of this board, I was unable to place before them certain valuable questions because of the numerous speakers who occupied more than the time allotted them. Many impracticable suggestions were made because of the inexperience of the speakers, who seem to have no idea as to the use of the short ballot as applied to the election of the county officers, who now are elected by the people.

These speakers never have had any experience as a county officer, otherwise they could not be in favor of it. They claim that more harmony would prevail in the various county offices if the board appointed the officers. Each county office is an office by itself, and the harmony only has to exist in this individual office.

If the Board of Supervisors has the appointive power, then three men appoint the officers. It is a well-known fact that during the past eight years three Supervisors—that is, the majority—have dominated this county.

This appointee is the servant of the three men, and only responsible to them, but has no responsibility to the people at all. I believe if the county officers are elected by the people they are more interested, as they are under no obligation to a certain clique as they would be were they appointed by three men.

If you want to have a short ballot then divide the county offices and elect one-half of the offices every two years. EMIL BLOCH.

GRADING WITHOUT PERMITS?

Chief Engineer of One Concern and President of Another Made Defendants in the Police Court.

C. L. Mowder, as chief engineer of the Los Angeles Investment Company, and L. E. Shepherd, as president of the Southwest Land Company of Los Angeles, together with their respective corporations, were made defendants in complaints filed before Police Judge Williams in the University court yesterday, in which they are charged with having made street excavations without having first obtained permits from the Board of Public Works. Thomas B. Curley and A. C. Webb, inspectors for the board, swore to the complaints.

It is alleged that these two corporations have graded streets in large tracts handled by them without permits for so doing, in violation of the ordinances.

The investment company is charged by Inspector Curley with having made an excavation on Seventy-sixth street between Vermont and Budlong avenues. Inspector Webb swears the Southwest Land Company violated the ordinances by building streets in the New Vermont Square tract.

"These companies have been in the habit of building streets with surface soil, rolling them, wetting them down with oil and advertising them as improved thoroughfares," said Inspector Doyle of the Board of Public Works. "Many of these streets have been illegally constructed, and are not, strictly speaking, what is generally understood as improved streets."

At the offices of the investment company it was said the complaint directed against it is the result of a "bad steer," and that the whole matter can and will be amicably adjusted. Shepherd of the Southwest Land Company made emphatic denial of the allegations set forth in the complaint directed against him and his company.

SOME "DON'TS" FOR TOURISTS.
By One of Them.

Don't conclude that the Los Angeles street car conductor is an unaccommodating beast because he is not always courteous in answering your questions. Remember this may be the result of long wrestling with a certain class of travelers. Even tourists are not always reasonable in their demands on public servants. It is of no advantage to the latter to allow themselves to get grouchy, of course; but charity is often due them.

Don't go home and disparage everything in the East or in the home town. You wouldn't like to have one of your neighbors go to some other country and turn up his nose at your locality when he returned. Praise California and the great Southwest all you please—it would be hard to overpraise—but remember that too much of a good thing might get monotonous, and that comparisons are sometimes odious. Remember that not everybody can come to California—more's the pity—and it is cruel, as well as ill-bred, to constantly refer to the drawbacks of the locality in which your friends live and which they love.

You can appreciate California without depreciating the East. It is not necessary for a man to intimate that all other women are homely in order to prove that his wife is beautiful.

Don't exaggerate the attractiveness of California. It is not necessary. The plain truth is quite wonderful enough, and the cause of western veracity will be advanced if you stick to it. Your friends will find it hard enough to realize the simple truth about this wonderful country, so don't put undue strain on their credulity by overdoing your praise.

(It is just possible that these "don'ts" might not come amiss even to resident Californians.)

Capture Mascot.

CATALINA GOAT "GOATED" BY PROUD "TIMES" CAMP.

AT 7 O'CLOCK yesterday morning Catalina's trophy of trophies was brought into The Times Camp at bright Avalon.

Arthur Lee, manager of The Times Camp, and Eddie Morris, chief newsboy on the island for The Times and known to the fraternity as "Frisco," were the proud captors of the first live mountain goat to have been brought into this sunny resort for several seasons. It was only after a terrific hand encounter that the goat was captured and led on a long forced march from the mountains to the bay. Instantly it was enthusiastically acclaimed to be the mascot of the camp, and it now views life dourfully from a stake driven with profound security in the very center of newsboy activities.

When Lee and Morris started on their goat hunt immediately after their lunch Tuesday, they were accompanied by fifteen riotously exuberant youngsters, but the pluscky little fellows fell by the wayside long before the actual chase began. Lee and Morris were six miles from The Times Camp and about the same distance from the Middle ranch when both men saw a young but fully-grown goat bounding through the brush on the hillside not a hundred yards away. At the same moment the goat spied them and goat and men fixed each other for a few seconds of general appraisement.

William apparently weighed about fifty pounds. His black whiskers hurled defiance at mankind, his great dark eyes were eloquent with fright and confident of speed, his horns were graceful as the antlers of a deer and his shiny brown coat possessed the soft brilliancy of a seal.

After he had fixed the two men with a stare of turbulence and daring, the little beast gave a great bound and the hot chase was on. It led them through narrow gorges which cut the Catalina hills into ribbons of verdure and in the five hours of hard running which followed the man saw much of the seamy side of life. It was with torn clothing and bruised bodies that they finally drove their wild quarry against the fence, where Lee made a desperate head-on lunge of perhaps eight feet and, piling upon the intrepid little rascal, grappled with him in a struggle in which goat and man tested their strength to the utmost.

Rolling and plunging, they landed in a canyon fifty feet below the point of Lee's great tackle and there they lay in a breathless condition awaiting developments. Morris was the first development and, while Lee was very proud of his goat, he was perfectly willing to let "Frisco" hold him for a while. "Frisco" undertook the delicate task of soothing a wild goat in an agitated state of mind while Lee went to Middle ranch for a rope. Then each held the goat for an hour while the other went to the ranch for supper.

Afterward the long march of ten and a half miles to Avalon began. The men were tired out and the goat should have been, but a goat without training for emergencies of this kind has no way of knowing when it is tired. It was late at night by this time and the goat by a subtle magic was transformed into a nightmare which neither man could ride, but which rode both of them until they were exhausted.

Finally Lee sat down and talked philosophy with the goat while "Frisco" made his solitary way to Avalon for a hand-cart. In pushing the hand-cart up the wireless station hill, "Frisco" decided that he was the goat and he left the push-cart to take care of itself until he and Lee could tie the goat to a tree and bring the cart up the hill together. The goat enjoyed being pushed into camp and the boy apologized for not coming for it in an automobile. Arriving at The Times Camp, William awoke a choice pajama brigade by his bleatings and the youngsters built a bonfire to celebrate their roaring luck until dawn and breakfast.

OCCIDENTAL'S WOMEN'S HALL.

President Baer Declares He's Taken Cost Off to Keep It Off Until He Gets the Money.

Now that work on three new buildings for Occidental College is arranged and contracts awarded, President Baer is turning all his attention to securing money for the new women's dormitory, which is needed at once. Yesterday Dr. Baer and J. Darfeuil and Miss H. Miranda, announced that Myron Hunt had instructions to prepare preliminary plans for what shall be known as the woman's hall. In size it will be a companion of the splendid James Swan Hall, which is the first dormitory to be erected for men. The first floor is to have a large reception and reading rooms; headquarters for the Young Women's Christian Association, and a girls' central dining hall. The second and third floors will be made into rooms for women students, with one complete suite for the house-mother, who will have charge of the young women living in the women's hall. The building is to be the most complete and modern structure of the kind, and the estimated cost is $40,000.

"We have not yet received the money but I am confident that it will be forthcoming," said Dr. Baer, "The satisfaction expressed over the maintaining of co-education at Occidental is so widespread and enthusiastic that I expect the friends of co-education to rally around us in our new building plans, which are compelling splendid co-operation and genuine enthusiasm. From now on I am giving my whole time to securing the money for the women's hall, and we can not be satisfied until it is built and paid for. Now that it is a settled policy that the college is to welcome women as well as men students, I am going to see to it that the young women have as good if not better quarters than the men. So, you see, I have my work cut out for me and have given up my vacation trip and will gladly remain on the job. Please make it plain that the young women are to be provided for and that the provision will be worthy. I give them my word for it and my coat is off, and will remain off, until the women's hall is more than a building on paper."

Midway Union.

Joseph Ball, president of the Midway Union Oil Company, writes:

Midway Union well No. 1, on section 28, 32-24, Midway, was finished with the rotary. Consequently the hole was full of rotary mud and water. On July 1, while the crew were working on the well, the oil shot over the crow for several minutes, when it was decided to at once remove the boilers to a safe distance. This is now being done. The well was responding to the cleaning out and will no doubt fulfill the early predictions of 1000 barrels per day.

In regard to the gravity, one test gave a return of 25.3 and 1-10 of 1 per cent. water. This sample came through 400 feet of rotary drilling mud and water. The upper sand is much lighter than the lower sand and one sample was obtained which ran 29.5 gravity, which was wholly from the upper sand. One from the lower sand was 23.75 gravity. The indications strongly favor the oil going twenty-six or a little better.

MUCH ADO OVER BABY.

Grandfather Takes Child to Denver and Is Charged With Abduction. Counter Charges—Conference.

Whether Baby Mathews's grandfather shall be returned from Denver on a charge of abduction is to be determined at a conference this morning, at which the mother from whom the child was taken, the father, and Constable Woodbury will be present with a representative of the District Attorney's office. The child, so the mother charges, was stolen from her deliberately by the grandfather, who at once went to Denver with the little one in his care.

"He came to the house where I was living," says the mother, "awaiting word from my husband whether I was to join him in Portland, Or. It was at No. 519 East Seventh street that I was living with little Harold, who is 3 years old. The grandparents were always fond of the child and I thought nothing strange about it when the elder Mr. Mathews took Harold out as he said to Long Beach, a week ago last Monday. But he did not return with Harold by 10 o'clock, suspecting that all was not right, the police were told."

Mathews was arrested in Denver last Saturday night and is now held there. He says he did take the child and that he intended to do so because he says the mother is not able to care for the baby. He says that he expected to face a charge for taking the child.

The father of the child, who is on his way to Portland to take a position, and his wife and baby have to join him later, will arrive today and it will be settled whether the child shall or his parent shall be prosecuted. The child's grandfather will take the youngster back to Los Angeles.

EAGLE ROCK CITY TRACT

is in the foothills which make up the town of Eagle Rock, northeast of the city. This section has had a phenomenal growth. It is a very picturesque locality, also, with its winding auto drives and views of mountains and valleys. The home builders of Eagle Rock have taken great pride in adding to the natural beauties by the arrangement of their shrubbery and flowers.

Water for all purposes is abundant. Gas, electricity and telephone service are available for all home sites. Schools, stores, churches and a bank are within a few moments' walk.

OCCIDENTAL COLLEGE.

The new site for Occidental College is just a short distance southeast of the tract, and the completion of three halls is promised by September, 1913. This will greatly enhance the value of all lots in Eagle Rock City Tract.

MUNICIPAL LEAGUE.

Prof. Hatton of the Western Reserve University at Cleveland, thought that the relation of the city to the State is not so important as acquiring the technical knowledge of the features of municipal government, and in showing the rank and file how the city is being conducted. Robert S. Binkerd, secretary of the New York City Club; Chester Rowell of Fresno, and Chairman Dunlap of the Municipal News Commissions, also addressed themselves to the problem of bringing up a municipality in the way it should go.

At the afternoon session of the league, held in the Auditorium, the relative rights of State and municipal governments over the conduct of the city provided a curtain-raiser. President Eshelman of the Railroad Commission, cracked open the big talk with a 10,000-word dissertation upon the duties, purposes, and authorities of his commission. He talked of the problems arising out of the division of the power to regulate public utilities between State and municipal authorities, and declared that the city of Los Angeles has no more right to charge "all the traffic will bear for her Owens River water when sold to non-residents than a railroad has to make a similar charge against its patrons."

To this allegation Lewis R. Works, who followed, demurred, denying the right of the State to regulate the prerogative of the city to make such charges as she sees fit. Works then plunged into his alloted subject which he denominated the "Regulation of Privately-Owned Public Utilities Between City and State." The argument is for municipal home rule free from State influence, except in cases where the public utility is general in its character and partially beyond the ken of the municipality. "The cities in every country," said the speaker, "are responsible for the future of that country."

An address followed, by Robert S. Brinkerd of New York, on "Excess Condemnation," which means the condemnation by a city of more land than it requires for the work in hand. This is most desirable in the case of city planning, according to the New Yorker.

John Ihlder of New York, field secretary of the National Housing Association, and Dr. Bartlett of the Bethlehem Institution, discussed the housing problem nationally and locally, and Dr. Bradford, of Washington, D. C., found much to praise and little to condemn in the commission form of government: "It does not necessarily make city dwellers more public spirited," he said, "but the experience of commission governed cities is that it increases interest in civic affairs."

Mrs. Caroline Bartlett Crane, who was to have addressed the league on "Municipal House-keeping," and who was injured Tuesday afternoon by falling from the stage to the orchestra pit at the Auditorium, is recovering from the effects of her experience and expects to be able to leave soon for her home in Kalamazoo.

TOURISTS' MECCA AT NORTH BEACH.

EXTENSIVE PLANS FOR HOTEL AND NEW PAVILION.

Other Projects to Keep Pace With Those Already Arranged For. Citizens to Ask for Owens River Water as Best Solution of Shortage Problem.

SANTA MONICA, July 10.—By virtue of a contract signed today by the North Beach syndicate and Contractor J. D. Keen, old North Beach, for several years the mecca of the interior tourists, but recently decadent, will be rejuvenated along the lines never dreamed of in the old days. In front of the site of the ancient bathhouse and plunge demolished last year will be erected a plaza forty feet wide, with an ornamental balustrade and bulkhead, which will eventually extend 1400 feet north of the Municipal pier. The present contract calls for the first 240 feet of the plaza.

A large pavilion and and reinforced concrete hotel will soon be erected on the site of the bathhouse according to officials of the North Beach syndicate. They even hint at a third and much larger project which is to attract the eyes of this part of the country to North Beach. Work on the cement plaza will be begun in two or three days, the cement forms being already on the ground.

FAVOR OWENS RIVER.

Where to get an adequate and permanent supply of water was the subject most discussed here today. Although the officials of the Irwin Heights Water company claim that 500 inches may be developed by the city on their property, those who are conversant with local hydrographical conditions state that the levels of existing wells are being lowered rapidly. It is the opinion of the majority, it seems, that the city should make immediate application to Los Angeles for a portion of the Owens River flow. This is declared the only real solution of the water problem. But until the Council Committee reports on the advisability of buying the Irwin Heights property, the matter will be held in abeyance.

BABY INCUBATOR.

A tiny mite of humanity is struggling for life at the baby incubator concession on the Fraser pier, and the institution, which has heretofore relied principally on apparatus for its demonstrations, has real work to do in bringing the youngster back to life. The baby, prematurely born, was brought from Los Angeles today by Miss Lowery, head of the institution, after the nurses at the hospital where it was born declared it could not live. Dr. Case of this city, after an examination of its condition tonight, declared that the infant had an excellent chance to live.

POSTAL CLERKS IN HOT DEMAND.

LONG LINE LOOKING FOR MAIL WHICH MOVES SLOWLY.

Washington Has Allowed More Help for Distressed Postmistress. Boosters Seek Reduction in Beach Fares and Join Santa Monica in Demanding Relief.

VENICE, July 10.—With her chief clerk, Josephine Molitor, ill in bed because of overwork, and unable to get clerks to wait upon the flood of summer visitors who call daily for their mail, Mrs. Calla J. Westfall, postmistress of Venice, is put to her wits' end to take care of the transient business of the local office. It is estimated that the general delivery business has increased 200 per cent. since the opening of the summer season.

After telegraphing twice to Washington to get an authorization to employ more help in the office, Mrs. Westfall yesterday secured the desired permission. She may now employ all the temporary help that she sees fit. But for two days she has been unable to find anyone to work as clerk. The summer visitors say they came here for a vacation, not to work, and the permanent residents are seemingly satisfied with home life or other occupations.

This morning a line of anxious people stretched from the general delivery window, along the wall of the postoffice and out into Windward avenue. Some persons have waited twenty minutes for their mail. After tomorrow, two windows will be opened by Mrs. Westfall, and the beach residents will be given better service, clerks having been taken from the assorting and distributing departments to wait upon the transients.

AFTER THE BUSINESS.

At the meeting of the Venice Boosters Club last night, the stand of the Santa Monica Bay Chamber of Commerce on the reduction of fare to Los Angeles was indorsed. A determined effort will be made to corral all the picnics for this summer for this beach. F. K. McCarver and Ward McFadden were appointed a committee to see to this matter. McCarver announced that the County Supervisors would get busy immediately on that $9000 highway from Venice to Palms, a statement that was received with smiles and favorable comments.

Several petitions to the Pacific Electric Railway asking that corporation to cut the return trip fare to Los Angeles in half were in circulation in Venice today, and up to 6 o'clock tonight 400 signatures had been appended to the documents. It is stated by those who are circulating the petitions that not one person they have approached has refused to sign the petition. In Santa Monica 1000 have signed.

VENETIAN NOTES.

Saturday evening the Venice of America Band will render a special programme including the latest from the pen of Maestro Chaffarelli, "The Titanic." The concert will consist of ten numbers, and will include the Copellia suite of six parts, which Chaffarelli says has never before been played in America.

Salt pork as bait for fish of all kinds, including the luscious pompano, came into favor with a bound today, when fishermen who called on the pork barrel for their bait hauled in the finny denizens where those who used shark or salt bonita for a lure went fishless. Butchers say that there is an unprecedented demand for salt pork recently among their fishing customers.

Principal Cree T. Work of the Venice Polytechnic High School is busy superintending additions, repairs and alterations to that building, which is the old Venice plunge. New rooms for forge work, household arts, drawing and study will be made from the old dressing-rooms. More than $4000 will be expended in the improvements.

Charles Luther, who resides at the Drexel apartments, was haled to the police station tonight to tell why he fired a gun in the early evening. He states that a man tried to climb in his window, a supposed robber, and he fired. He does not know whether he hit the fellow or not. He will be heard in the recorder's court tomorrow.

SOUTH PASADENA DOINGS.

Board of Education Calls for Mass Meeting to Discuss Feasibility of Calling for Bond Issue.

SOUTH PASADENA, July 10.—At the request of the representatives of several civic organizations and Parent-Teacher Associations, the Board of Education has called a mass meeting for Friday evening, July 12, to be held in the High School auditorium, to discuss the feasibility of calling a bond issue to provide more room for the numerous classes. It is considered the duty of every taxpayer to be present at this meeting and voice his or her opinion on the matter, after having heard the plans discussed and after having looked over the data which will be presented by competent officials.

If the sentiment at the meeting is favorable to a marked degree, it is promised that the necessary proceedings will be started at once to call a bond election, to raise funds to build a domestic science and manual training building on the High School grounds, a little to the rear of the present building, and to enlarge the auditorium, which is by far too small.

DEFENSE SLATED HERE.

United States District Attorney McCormick left San Francisco last night for Portland, where he will consult with D. B. Townsend, special assistant of Atty.-Gen. Wickersham in relation to the Southern Pacific land suits. The case of the Elk Hills district has practically closed in San Francisco, so far as the government is concerned, and the defense is to follow. This evidence will probably be taken in Los Angeles.

WILL IS VALID.

The Supreme Court has affirmed the decision of Probate Judge Rives in the estate of Fanny Dombrowski, involving property valued at about $20,000, of which $17,000 is cash. The will and codicil of Mrs. Dombrowski was filed by R. E. Lovett and J. W. Maple, as executors, and later ordered probated. The heirs appealed on the ground that the documents were not legally executed, but Judge Rives did not approve that view, and the Supreme Court has sustained him.

ALARMED ABOUT AMERICA.

Dutch Lieutenant-Governor From Java, Says We've Lost All Our Ideals as a People—Canal Outlook.

Herr J. Von Aalst, Lieutenant-Governor of the Dutch Province of Modjokerto, Java, declared yesterday that America is far beyond the bounds of her own control, that the socialistic trend is stronger than anywhere else in the world, and that as a people the Americans have lost all their ideals. "The lack of common etiquette in this country is absolutely incredible and comes only from the too democratic spirit which prevails, he said.

"The scramble for money is almost unbelievable in its intensity and the idea of equality in all classes is laughable," said the Hollander in his disection of the people of this nation. "I have heard waiters in hotels and restaurants call their patrons by their first names when they are liberal, and then again have seen them look surly and ugly because no tip was forthcoming."

Herr Von Aalst believes that the opening of the canal will mean a great influx of Europeans, particularly those from the southern countries and said it is possible that the English tongue will have to give way to a polyglot tongue of nations. After a brief sojourn at the Van Nuys, where he is registered, he will leave for the East and then Holland, where he will pass his leave of absence.

THE WAR IN TRIPOLI.

London Has No Direct Confirmation of the Report That Negotiations for Peace May Be Under Way.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 10.—There is no direct confirmation of the possible peace settlement between Italy and Turkey, but the idea prevails in Berlin and other continental capitals that Mahmoud Shefket Pasha's resignation is perhaps a prelude to this. It is rumored that Turkey is inclined to yield Tripoli if Italy renounces claim to Benghazi.

Sir Edward Gray, the British Foreign Secretary, in the House of Commons tonight made a statement covering a wide range of foreign affairs, but made no reference whatever to the Turko-Italian War. The chief point of his speech was that Great Britain had no intention of abandoning her position as one of the naval powers in the Mediterranean.

A RUMOR OF PEACE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 10.—It is stated on reliable authority that there is a good prospect of the conclusion of peace with Italy. The departure of the president of the Council of State, Said Harem, for Vienna last Saturday, is supposed to have some connection with peace negotiations.

PANAMA SITUATION.

President Flatly Refuses to Deposit Arms of the Republic With the American Supervisors.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

PANAMA, July 10.—[Special Dispatch.] The American Minister, Dr. Hodge, in the name of the International Committee, has sent to the government asking it to deposit under control of the American supervisors all the arms of the republic.

The President answered today, refusing to do so, as he considers that he must respect the Constitution and there is no reason to justify such an act. He adds that with the naval force he can keep order.

LUTHERAN CONFERENCE.

The conference will be continued until Sunday night. Each church is represented by a minister and by a layman. The business tonight was purely of a devotional nature. What Food shall I give Baby?

Every mother must sooner or later ask herself this question, and it is one which must involve a good deal of anxious consideration. It may be that on the advice of friends various foods are tried to see if baby takes kindly to them.

Now, is it not reasonable to assume that an infants' food that has been in general use for upwards of fifty years, and that has been used, in preference to others, in most of the Royal Nurseries of Europe, is likely to prove a suitable diet for the average infant? Such a food is Savory & Moore's, and all mothers who decide in its favour may be congratulated on the wisdom of their choice.

Infants reared on Savory & Moore's Food are characterised by strong, sturdy limbs, firm flesh, plenty of bone and muscle, easy teething, freedom from infant ailments, and that happy disposition which is the surest sign of perfect health. Ask your Druggist to get you a tin.

DOG DAYS HAVE COME TO STAY.

Pup-Protective League Born With the Bark On.

Initiative, Referendum and Recall Its Weapon.

"Repeal Muzzling Ordinance; Beat Wire Trust!"

The dogs of Los Angeles are about to come into their own.

Four hundred enthusiastic and purposeful owners and lovers of dogs met in Symphony Hall yesterday afternoon and after breathing undying defiance to the Mayor, the Council and especially Health Officer Powers, formally organized the Dog Owners' Protective Association of Los Angeles City and County and arranged for the circulation of a referendum petition against the muzzle ordinance.

The new organization went off with a whoop. It was organized with by-laws, constitution, a name, officers and committees complete within half an hour after the convening. What is more, it was practically financed at the meeting.

The object of the organization is to look after the welfare and rights of the dogs of Los Angeles. Its first step will be to have the ordinance repealed. But it will not stop there. That will be but the beginning. It will go after the forces which it claims annually pass an ordinance which later is repealed and which is passed "solely in the interests of the wire dog-muzzle trust."

AFTER LOTS OF 'EM.

"It will also seek to get the "hide" of Dr. Powers in the Health Office. It even goes further in its oill of particulars and declares that vaccination, vivisection and so on are brought about by the activity of the American Medical Association and the American Veterinary Surgeons' Association, and that these two organizations have an undue influence over the local health authorities.

It was an exciting meeting and the grievances of hundreds whose dogs had been peeved by being compelled to wear muzzles were aired.

The meeting was called by Norton F. W. Hazeldine, who was elected permanent president of the new organization. Mrs. Lizzie Belle Cross was elected secretary and J. W. Dunlap, treasurer.

By a dozen different speakers the muzzling ordinance was denounced as arbitrary and inhuman. It was declared that dogs never perspire through their hide, but only through their mouths. This was said to be almost impossible when a dog wears a muzzle. It was set forth in speeches that there has not been an authentic case of hydrophobia in Los Angeles.

President Hazeldine took a whack at the "wire trust," the American Medical Association and the American Veterinary Surgeons' Association in his address. He said that 25,000 wire muzzles had been ordered by one local hardware house a month or two before the ordinance was ever heard of. He intimated that this house knew all about what was about to occur and that it was back of the ordinance. He swatted the alleged activity of the American Medical Association and the Veterinary Association, saying that they fathered just such legislation for profit to themselves.

WOULD RECALL POWERS.

He suggested that a recall petition

SECOND BIG HOTEL.

Architect Buys at Sixth and Figueroa and Says He'll Build Within Year—Large Acreage Deal.

The southwest corner of Sixth and Figueroa streets was purchased yesterday by John Parkinson of the architectural firm of Parkinson & Bergstrom, from Robert Marsh and F. H. Edwards, W. B. Merwin & Co. acting as agents in the transaction. The consideration named is $130,000. The lot is directly across the street from the nine-story hotel which is now nearing completion for Carrell W. Gates, and Parkinson declares his intention of starting a modern hotel on the lot within the present year. The site has a frontage of ninety feet on Sixth by 120 feet on Figueroa, and the building contemplated will be at least ten stories in height.

Another noteworthy realty transfer was consummated yesterday when Oscar B. Smith sold to Lucy Wilson and Lester Patterson, through Bryan & Bradford and W. A. Potter, 160 acres on Western avenue, just south of Manchester, for a consideration of $190,000. The buyers contemplate the subdivision of the tract just as soon as railway facilities are available. This is the sixth large acreage deal concluded through Bryan & Bradford in the same vicinity since March 1.

These Are Who Will Protect This from Now On.

Officers of the newly-formed "Dog Owners' Protective Association of Los Angeles City and County," which came into existence yesterday for the primary purpose of doing away by initiative and referendum and, if necessary, recall proceedings with the dog-muzzling ordinance and other things supposedly detrimental to the dog. Norton F. W. Hazeldine, president, is standing. The others are J. W. Dunlap, treasurer, and Mrs. Lizzie Bell Cross, secretary. In the bird cage effect below is Towser, Jr., very sore.

CHRONIC THREATENER?

Wife of Brandt, Arrested in San Francisco, Tells District Attorney's Office About His Shortcomings.

If C. T. Brandt will pay the debts she contracted on his account, his wife says she does not care to bother with him any more. Brandt is the man who was arrested on a fugitive warrant in San Francisco on Tuesday and who, on being searched, was found to have in his pocket sufficient cyanide of potassium to poison a score of men. He is charged with failure to provide.

Mrs. Brandt told the District Attorney's office that Brandt is the son of a Mrs. Paxton, who, she says, is well off, but that he will do nothing for her, nor will his mother pay his debts. She says that six years ago he actually did try to shoot himself and that ever since he has continually threatened to do so.

"When he went to San Francisco this time," said Mrs. Brandt, "he rushed in to a friend and told him that he had forgotten his bank book and to advance him $6.50 and I would pay it. Last year he got into trouble in Bakersfield and I had to borrow $125 to get him out of it. There are many other small debts of that kind that I've got to pay, and I want him to pay them since they were all entered into for his account."

"Lend me a dollar or you'll never hear from me again," she says he telephoned her just before starting for San Francisco.

"Well, don't try a pistol this time, 'cause you don't know how. Better try poison," she says she advised him, for she declares his threats are only a bluff. The warrant is in the hands of Constable Woodbury, who will go to San Francisco for the prisoner.

SEALER MAKES REPORT.

Thirteen Short-Weight Prosecutions Made During Past Fiscal Year. Eight Convictions.

J. D. Irons, City Sealer of Weights and Measures, made his annual report to the Mayor yesterday for the fiscal year just closed. A summary of the year's work states that during the year there were inspected 4361 scales, 1421 yard measures, 1720 extensions and 414 liquid measures. Four inspections each, were made on the sixteen public weight stations. A total of 7916 inspections.

The total expenses of the department were (exclusive of salaries,) $567.09, as compared to $774.81 for 1910-11. The total receipts were $3,417.60, while that of the previous year was $2,198.60, a gain of $1,219, or about 55 per cent.

FIGHT ON FOR HUNT MILLIONS.

Will of Late Angelus Owner Verbally Macerated.

Legal Technicalities Basis of Bitter War.

Argument in Federal Court May Conclude Today.

The contest involving the validity of part of the will of John W. Hunt, millionaire hotel owner of this city, and the question whether the bequest of about $1,000,000 for the establishment and maintenance of a charitable institution in Georgia shall stand is being argued in the United States District Court. It is expected that two days will be needed for presenting the case.

The complainant in the case is Bunyan Lucas of Oklahoma, a half-brother of Hunt, who under the will is bequeathed $1000. The defendants are John E. Harris of Jacksonsonville, Fla., and Robert Lee Lucas of Dallas, executors and trustees. The value of the estate is alleged to be $1,197,000, of which the Angelus Hotel property constitutes about $1,000,000. The hotel is now held under a lease by the Angelus Leasing Company. The complainant is represented by F. M. Etheridge of Dallas, Tex., and the defendants by J. M. Cooper of Jacksonville, ex-member of Congress from that district, and ex-Attorney-General of Florida.

The will of Hunt was drawn August 16, 1910, when he was living at Asbury Park, N. J. On November 7, 1910, he executed a codicil, the will and codicil being admitted to probate by Superior Judge Rives in this city, December 26, 1911.

THE DEFENDANTS.

The defendants in the case are devisees under the will. With their respective legacies, they are as follows: Bunyan Lucas, Shawnee, Okla., $1000; John B. Lucas, Dallas, $10,000; Robert Lee Lucas, Dallas, $20,000; Charles P. Lucas, Atlanta, $5000; Henry G. Lucas, Ft. Worth, $1000; John P. Lucas, Charlotte, N. C., $1000; Ambrose Lucas, Highlands, N. J., $1000; Theodore Lucas, Charlotte, $10,000; Lois Lucas, Charlotte, $20,000; Mrs. Monticello Lucas, Charlotte, $5000; Rosamond Lucas, Charlotte, $20,000; Ruth Peake, Ontario, Can., $5000. All of these heirs are children of the late Henry D. Lucas, a half-brother of Hunt. These bequests and other small remembrances amount to $174,505. Under the will the balance of the estate is to go for the carrying out of item fourteen of the will. Under the terms of the codicil, the nephew, Robert Lee Lucas, is given $50,000 and the interest of Hunt in the Southland Hotel, Dallas, Tex.

Item fourteen of the will, the object of attack, is as follows: "I give, bequeath and devise all the rest, residue and remainder (after the payment of the bequests named) of my estate of whatsoever character and wheresoever situated, to my executors herein named, in trust, for the purpose of using the proceeds (after the sale of the real and personal property) therefrom in establishing and maintaining such charitable and benevolent institution as they may see fit, as a memorial of myself, the same, however, to be established and maintained in the State of Georgia, preference being that the same be established either in the middle or southern section of said State of Georgia."

The attack on this item is based on the contention of the half-brother, Bunyan Lucas, that it fails to define the nature or uses of the attempted charitable bequest; that a benevolent institution may be a non-charitable institution; the objects of the testator's bounty are too vague, indefinite and uncertain to be susceptible of administration, either by the trustees or by a court of equity in the exercise of its chancery jurisdiction; that, should the trustees die before the execution of the terms of the will, no substitute trustees could administer the fund because of indefiniteness and uncertainty; that the attempted trust is violative of the law against perpetuities.

CUPID'S STEAM ROLLER FLATTENS MAMMA OUT

No Way at All to Keep Her Single.

All during a frantic chase from Pasadena to different city and county offices yesterday this young lady was Miss Lulu Segar. At 4 o'clock, despite the tearful pleading of her mother, who had caught up by that time, she became Mrs. Theras Marabelis.

AN OVERWROUGHT mother, sympathizing detectives and county officials, a rejected suitor, a persistent young woman, a determined young man, a trolley dash from Pasadena and a visit to the Central Police Station were the features of an unusual elopement which culminated in a marriage ceremony yesterday afternoon. It was performed by Justice Summerfield in spite of the tears and protesting pleadings of the half-distracted mother.

Miss Lulu Segar, 21 years old, daughter of Mrs. Nettie Segar, No 215 South Marengo avenue, Pasadena, and Theras Marabelis, 28 years old, No. 884 South Fair Oaks avenue, Pasadena, were the elopers. Fred Bundy, also of Pasadena, is the rejected suitor.

The mother objected to the marriage on the ground, as she told city and county officials, that she had been told that Marabelis had not been a proper person in Salt Lake City before coming to Los Angeles and Pasadena. She begged Deputy County Clerk Sparks to withhold the issuance of the license for a day or even a few hours, to give her time in which to prove or disprove the grave suspicions against her prospective son-in-law.

The clerk said, following an interview with the District Attorney's office and the County Clerk, that he was powerless to interfere, as the elopers were of age, sober and of apparently sound mind.

In the interim the girl laughed with her prospective husband, joked with his friends and completely ignored her mother.

Bundy said that he and Marabelis had alternately kept company with the young woman since April. A few days ago she centered her affections upon the latter and promised to marry him yesterday. Bundy learned that interesting fact Tuesday night and immediately notified Mrs. Segar.

When the mother ascertained that the license was to be secured in this city she telephoned to police headquarters, asking that a detective meet them. Mrs. Segar accompanied the couple and their friends to this city, and pointed them out to the detective. But successive interviews with the police, the marriage license clerk, the County Clerk and the District Attorney were futile and the wedding happened according to schedule.

Jolt for Candidates.

THEY MUST GET BUSY OR NAMES NO GOOD.

THE SEVERAL POLITICAL camps were jolted yesterday afternoon when the announcement was made at the County Clerk's office that whatever the practice may have been in other years and in other counties here verification deputies appointed by candidates for party nomination must qualify before the County Clerk before they start collecting signatures to nomination petitions.

"I know that it has been stated that there will be plenty of time to file the appointments of deputies when the nominating petitions are ready to file with this office," said Deputy Clerk McAleer, speaking for his chief. McAleer is in charge of registration. "Notwithstanding this opinion of several of the candidates, that rule is not correct. Verification deputies must be appointed before they start out on their work. That is the plain reading of the law, whatever others may hold its spirit to be. It is the practice of this county, too, and there isn't any reason why candidates should not file their appointments as deputies, anyhow. What do they gain by holding back to the last minute?

"If anyone wants to raise the point he will have to take it to court as far as this office is concerned."

The County Clerk is sustained in his view by Deputy District Attorney Hill, the election law expert of Capt. Frederick's office. Hill said yesterday that it is perfectly plain. "Until the verification deputy shall have qualified before the County Clerk or an authorized deputy," said Hill, "he can have no authority to administer an oath, and this is an essential function of his office."

McAleer quoted from the form of appointment of a special verification deputy and especially from the certificate of the County Clerk, that "said person so designated has qualified as said special verification deputy by taking the oath of office required by law, and is authorized and empowered to take the oath of any signer of a nomination paper," etc. "That plainly indicates," said he, and he was supported by Hill, "that the special deputy has no authority and is not empowered to do anything until he takes the oath before the County Clerk.

The effect of this ruling will be to force a cloud of candidates to take out papers at once. State Senator Thompson, in the Thirty-fifth; Senatorial District is one of the known candidates who has filed no appointment as verification deputy. Jay E. Randall, who is hustling in the Thirty-third Senatorial District for the Republican nomination, and who has strong support, is another whose deputies are yet officially to be named.

In the Ninth Congress District, a strongly Republican half of the county, State Senator Bell of Pasadena, former Mayor C. H. Windham of Long Beach, Rev. T. H. Woodworth of East Whittier, and Assemblyman Randall of Highland Park, all Lissner-Johnson Republicans, are candidates for the nomination, yet verification deputies of not one of them have been named. The only papers so far filed there have been those of Sloan Pitzer, Republican; Richard T. Blow, Democrat, and Ralph Criswell, Socialist. In the Tenth Congress District, represented by W. D. Stephens at present, no verification deputies have been named for Stephens, although he is a candidate for a renomination, and only one Republican and one Socialist candidate have presented themselves.

Socialist candidates have been named in all the Assembly districts, but candidates for the Republican or the Democratic nomination, so far as the County Clerk is concerned, are not known in the Sixty-first, Sixty-second, Sixty-third, Sixty-fourth, Sixty-seventh, Sixty-ninth, Seventieth and Seventy-second districts. As a matter of fact, in all these districts there are anxious candidates hard at work, but unless they appoint their verification deputies at once, the County Clerk declares their efforts will go for naught.

Public Service: City Hall, Courts.

In Addition to Passing a Resolution Against Use of Cigar Stand Checks in Saloons, Elimination of Liquor Advertising by Restaurants Is Ordered.

King Alcohol was given a few blows at the meeting of the Police Commission yesterday. The subject of legislation looking to the elimination of the treating system was taken up. The commission also adopted an order preventing restaurants that hold liquor permits from advertising this fact outside of the menus or bills of fare and one sign within the establishment, to be not larger than 11x14 inches and to contain only the words, "Liquors served with meals only;" and it postponed action on the elimination of the free lunch in saloons for one week so that salient points of the Gothenburg system that are believed to be applicable here may be considered.

The commission decided to invite B. R. Baumgardt and Dr. John R. Haynes to appear before it at its next session to present the features of the Gothenburg plan that they consider might be adopted to advantage in this city. This is supposed to have particular reference to the lunch-with-drinks provisions and the no-treating feature of this system — but there may be other clauses presented that will give the present movement much wider scope than first proposed.

The City Prosecutor presented the subject of adopting the no-treating legislation when the subject of the proposed ordinance abolishing the free lunch was put before the commission. He stated that he is convinced that the bit of eating when taking liquor is beneficial and that he believed the abolishment of the free lunch would not get at the root of the evil in the saloon. He urged that the main point of attraction in the saloon lies in the sociability to be found there, and that the adoption of a no-treating plan would eliminate this to a wonderful degree.

He stated that he thinks the proper method to bring about this legislation would be by the referendum, but admitted that the Police Commission has it within its power to adopt such rules as would accomplish the same purpose.

Expressions favorable to such a plan were made by the members of the commission, but each declared his belief that the burden of responsibility should rest with the patron of the saloon and not with the saloon-keeper.

Whether the Police Commission will be enabled to carry out the suggested reforms in connection with the adoption or rejection of the anti-free-lunch ordinance is a question, as the Legislation Committee of the City Council at its last meeting passed favorably on the elimination of the free lunch and instructed the City Attorney to prepare the necessary ordinance and report it to the Council. Therefore this ordinance may go before the Council at its session next Tuesday, while the next meeting of the Police Commission will not occur until next Wednesday.

Commissioner McDill of the Police Commission, and the Mayor, who presides at the meetings of this board, yesterday expressed themselves in favor of the ordinance, but Commissioner Akey stated that he believes it better policy to retain the lunch because of its physical effect upon the drinker.

These Get Licenses.

A situation of unrest among a considerable number of holders of permits to sell liquors is evinced at the sessions of the Police Commission these days, through the applications for transfers from old concerns to new ones, or the dropping out of partners and taking in of new ones, thereby necessitating a change in the permit issued. Several such applications were acted upon yesterday by the Police Commission. Several new permits were also issued.

Restaurant liquor licenses were granted to Achille Travaglini for No. 710 South Spring street; Claud Mathewson, for No. 325½ South Spring street; Vanderlinden & Hamacher, for No. 116 West Seventh street, and Louis Cendra, for No. 136 North Spring street. The Knickerbocker Club was granted a social club liquor permit for No. 437 South Hill street. The retail permit held by Pitcher & Cannon for No. 431 South Main street was cancelled and one was issued to William B. Cannon for the same location. The permit for a saloon held by A. P. Kelso for No. 655 South Main street was cancelled and a new one was issued for the same location to Dunkle & Mayfield. The retail permit of Harry R. Kelso for No. 621 South Spring street was cancelled and Kelso & Kelso were given a permit of the same character for this place. Edwards & Nelson get a retail permit for No. 2059 East Seventh street in place of the one held by Harding & Nelson, which was cancelled. The retail permit of Krouse & Nagle for No. 420 South Main street was cancelled and a new one for the same location was issued to Peter Krouse. Other similar applications were taken under advisement or continued.

HEALTH AFFAIRS.
COMMISSIONER'S REPORT.

Health Commissioner Powers yesterday filed with the Mayor his resume of the annual report of his department for the fiscal year ended the 30th ult. He reports there are now four physicians caring for the indigent sick in the city, and during the year they have attended 1073 patients and have made 1453 visits. Powers recommends that at least twelve district physicians should be employed by the municipality.

The school nurses have 103 schools to visit, with an enrollment of 45,788 children, and they also visited thirteen playgrounds. They examined 27,426 school children, gave baths to 853, visited 3993 homes and treated 4900 children for various causes.

A sanitary staff of eighteen inspectors has been kept in the field. The total number of inspections for the year was 46,235.

The report urges the establishment of a home with hospital accommodations for tuberculous children and an open-air school in connection therewith, and also the establishment of milk stations in the congested districts, where milk can be obtained at a minimum price.

The cash receipts for the year were $5719.86, and the outlays were $1,478.88. The total expense of operating all departments amounted to $90,077.87.

Expensive Railroad Work.

George J. Kuhrts, chief engineer of the Los Angeles Railway Corporation, while visiting the Board of Public Works yesterday stated that the work of changing the railway curves at Fourth and Spring streets, just completed, has cost the company $22,400, this being probably the most expensive bit of street railroad work undertaken at any one point in the city. The use of manganese steel in this work has been the particular element in causing such a heavy cost; but the labor difficulties have been great because of the fact that but three and a half hours per night were available for carrying on the work.

Will Present Demands.

The Board of Public Utilities held a public session in the Council Chamber yesterday to hear proponents of the much-desired extension of the Los Angeles Railway on South Main street to Manchester avenue, and to listen to the railway's side of the case. The people of this district want to pave the street for a distance of four miles and they desire the location of the street railway before this improvement is started. They make the offer that if the street railway extension is made the property owners will stand the entire cost of paving the street, exempting the company from paying its portion, as is ordinarily required. Superintendent Akin and Chief Engineer Kuhrts appeared for the railroad and stated that the attitude of H. E. Huntington is that it is necessary for him to hold up further railroad construction until he sees how liberal the people will be with their franchise provisions when the new charter is adopted, and that while under certain conditions it is possible the company would undertake to extend its line on South Main street, in any event it would not carry this extension farther south than Slauson avenue. The railroad representatives were asked by President Foulkes of the Board of Public Works to present a statement of features that would have to be incorporated in a franchise for this extension before it would be acceptable to the company, and they agreed to present such a statement within a few days. If the railroad extension is to be carried only as far as Slauson avenue, then the property owners from thence onward to Manchester avenue will probably ask that an unpaved strip be left in the center of the street for future railroad occupation.

Motorcycle Substation.

The Police Commission voted to accept the offer of the City Dye Works of a location for a motorcycle substation at No. 3000 Central avenue, free of rent as long as the concern owns the property, and a station house will be erected by the men of the department. It will be so constructed that it can be moved readily at any time the site must be vacated.

Better Wages Outside.

The Police Commission is troubled over the fact that better wages are paid by private concerns for mechanics than those allowed by the city, and that therefore there is difficulty in holding efficient men in mechanical positions. The particular cause of the commission's trouble just now is that it is about to lose its machinest and helper. The former gets $100 and the latter $78 per month. The commission will state the case to the City Council and ask that $25 per month be added to each salary.

Patrolman Exonerated.

On June 20 H. L. Emerson, a patrolman at San Pedro, shot Clyde Heller through the jaw when Heller refused to halt, after being commanded so to do by the officer. The affair happened late at night in a sparsely settled section towards Point Firmin. The patrolman was suspended pending an investigation, and the subject was carried along by the Police Commission until yesterday, when a public hearing was given it, and Emerson was exonerated and restored to duty with pay while out of actual service. Sergt. Smith of the San Pedro Police Station recommended this action, and told of the patrolman's previous good record, although admitting that Emerson had been too hasty in the use of his gun. He intimated that a demand would be made upon the city by the parents of the young man who was shot for payment of the medical services and young Heller's loss of time while recovering from the wound. Heller is still confined to his home.

Will Confer Today.

The Public Service Commission and the Board of Public Utilities will hold a conference this forenoon to discuss the large number of complaints coming from patrons of the smaller water companies in regard to the lack of proper service. The critical stage reached in some localities demands immediate attention, and these two boards will try to work out plans for general relief. It is probable that whenever possible the city water service will be extended, through the formation of assessment districts, and in at least one instance an offer has been made to turn over the use of the distributing system if the city will operate it.

Liquor Barred There.

Recently numerous property owners have taken advantage of the provisions of a city ordinance that allows the closing of any block for a period of two years against liquor permits upon the application of a majority of the property owners. Yesterday another case of this kind was acted upon by the Police Commission, it ordering the closing of Central avenue, between Seventh, Eighth and Palmer streets, to any additional wholesale or retail liquor establishments or to any social club licenses. Property owners on Howard street, between Macy and Ramerix streets, petitioned to close this block to wholesale, retail or social club permits, and this was referred to the Chief of Police to check the frontage.

Two Questions Arise.

Two legal questions arose before the Police Commission yesterday that were referred to the City Attorney for advice. One of these was in regard to the provisions of an ordinance requiring that no saloon be located within 600 feet of any school. The application of Eugene Machtig for a retain liquor license for No. 405 West Fourth street was before the board. Machtig wants to move his saloon from No. 132 North Spring street. It was shown that by the traveled route the proposed location is 602 feet from the Olive-street school, but that by a straight line it is within the 600-foot limit. The commission wants to know which method to use in measurements of this character. A question arose on another application as to whether the commission has the right to issue a liquor permit for a building that is not yet in existence.

TENDER MISSIVE LIVENS HEARING.

ROMANCE OF COUNTESS AIRED IN DIVORCE TRIAL.

Attorney Reads Love Message to Discredit Young Woman's Assertion that She Never Had a Sweetheart—Luxurious Toilet Articles Cut Figure.

Confronted with a letter dated January 25, 1909, less than four months before her marriage to Count Paul von Neindorff, Mrs. Von Neindorff, who had testified she never had a sweetheart, admitted in Judge Rector's court yesterday that she had known the writer since she was 13 years old, and had corresponded with him until the time of her marriage.

The letter was from Arkadelphia, Ark., and addressed to "My very, very sweet Cora." It was signed "with love and kisses," by "Wilburn." As read by Attorney Freeman, who tuned his voice to the sentiments expressed, the letter was fetching.

Freeman, who, with Attorney Culver is defending Von Neindorff, had sought to show that Mrs. Von Neindorff, far from being a recluse in her own home, had gone out with young men. She frankly admitted that she had, but she declared they were friends of her husband and he went with her. In the course of the cross-examination, when she was more than once overcome with faintness, Mrs. Von Neindorff declared she had never told her husband an untruth in her married life.

Freeman questioned her closely about luxurious toilet articles she had bought and charged to her husband three days after the separation. The list was read into the record and when Freeman stumbled over some of the French names of articles, Mrs. Von Neindorff smiled serenely.

She denied she had bought the articles to "get even" with Von Neindorff, but because she needed them, as her toilet articles had been left in the home at Hollywood and she declared she did not care to go back to get them. She naively said she did not think it would hurt her husband to pay for them. The case will be continued today.

FIGHTS DIVORCE SUIT.
OPERATOR RETURNS TO CITY.

The return of Charles Victor Hall, president of the Industrial Oil Company, to fight the divorce suit of his wife, has added zest to the proceedings, which, according to the complaint, are of a sensational nature. Hall has been absent more than a year, and in order to obtain service on him, Mrs. Hall traced him to Tampa, Fla.

She alleges in her complaint that Hall has an affinity who posed in Tampa as his niece. Hall denies the charge. It is alleged in his behalf that he is a sentimentalist. Music, art and talent appeal to him. If he hears a child sing and the voice promises to develop under cultivation, his nature is to send the singer to a conservatory of music and foot the bills.

When Mrs. Hall, who resides at No. 226 Andrews boulevard, filed her suit, she asked the court for a temporary injunction to restrain the Industrial Oil Company from disposing of any property belonging to her husband, who virtually owns the controlling interest in the corporation. The order was granted by the court, tying up the rich dividends Hall has been receiving from that source.

WATER FIGHT ON LAND.
THAT GETS THE WORST OF IT.

Deserted by their father, a striking union switchman, and left to the mercies of the street while their mother went out to earn a living, according to Probation Officer Devis's report, Matthew, Joseph and Francis Wehman, aged 6, 9, and 10 years respectively, became the worry of a neighborhood and landed in the Juvenile Court yesterday under peculiar circumstances.

The boys live at No. 1037½ West Sixteenth street. They adopted piratical habits it is alleged, and from pilfering small articles finally broke into a flat which had just been cleaned preparatory to receiving tenants. They turned on the faucet in the bathroom and wallowed in the bath tub, winding up with a water fight.

The tub filled up and when the water began to run over, the boys found they could not turn off the faucet. They sneaked from the house and said nothing about the matter. Meantime, the owner entered the flat and threw up his hands in horror when he saw the damage. The ceiling was soaked, plaster loosened and the walls stained. Electric lamps and glass shades were gone.

Judge Wilbur sent the offenders to the Belle White Home, as a more suitable place than their own home, from which the hard-working mother had to absent herself to get bread for them.

COURT SAVES TIME.
LEGAL ROLLER RUNS SMOOTHLY.

When Judge Conley of Madera county took the bench in Department Ten yesterday he had one case listed which the attorneys stated would take all day, and a bunch of other actions. Metaphorically speaking, he took off his coat, tucked up his sleeves, grabbed the pleadings of the first case, a book account, and absorbing their contents in a flash, asked the bookkeeper to take the defendant aside and go over the accounts.

The result was that the all-day case was tried in less than an hour, five other suits were disposed of by noon and out on the grand stand in Washington Park when the game was called, the man from Madero county was yelling to the pitcher to "put 'em over."

The expedited case was that of the Visalia Co-operative Creamery against C. D. Hayward. The latter had a contract with the creamery to furnish him 1000 pounds of butter a day until he desired the shipments discontinued by giving sixty days' notice. He alleged that the creamery refused to make shipments and placed his damages at $800.

The creamery alleged Hayward was indebted to it for $8218.11 and the question became one of bookkeeping. By going over the accounts amicably, under the instructions of the court, there was a great saving of time. Judgment was given for the plaintiff.

PASSES ON COMPROMISE.
PROBATE COURT MUST ACT.

Two suits against the Pacific Electric, aggregating $100,000, will be compromised for $5750. The story was unfolded in Judge Bordwell's court yesterday sufficiently to get at the merits of the case, the attorneys having agreed upon the compromise. Judge Bordwell, however, stated it will be necessary to have the authorization of the Probate Court, which is passing on one of the estates, and continued the matter until today.

The suits were brought in behalf of Hazel Kauffman, aged 14, by her guardian, A. F. Anderson, and by Anderson as administrator of the estate of Ivah O. Kauffman, mother of Hazel. The parents of Hazel were killed at the Downey crossing of the Pacific Electric on May 28, 1911, and Hazel was terribly injured, while Kauffman was endeavoring to cross the tracks ahead of a Whittier train. Hazel's recovery was considered remarkable. She had sustained a fracture of the skull, and fractures of both arms. She was called to the bench by Judge Bordwell, who asked her a few questions.

REMEMBERS SERVANT.
RANNELLS WILL IS FILED.

The will of J. W. Rannells, secretary and treasurer of the Rannells Land Company, who was fatally injured in an automobile accident on June 23 last, provides for Poncho, a Mexican servant. Poncho has been in the Rannells family many years and is bequeathed $1000. The will was filed for probate yesterday.

In his petition, J. M. Haff, executor, states that he has not yet ascertained the character of the property left by Rannells. A ranch in Riverside county, consisting of 1120 acres, is listed, and $2000 in cash is mentioned. The estate is bequeathed as follows: One-fifth each to Alfred W. and Evelyn Rannells, a brother and sister; one-tenth each to Burdette Wallace and Whitney Rannells, nephews, and the residue of the estate in equal shares to Alfred and Evelyn.

SETTLING DAY.
COURT PASSES ON BILLS.

Dick Ferris, promoter, had the center of the stage in Judge Cole's court yesterday in the suit of J. H. Sims against W. L. Frew, who sought to collect outstanding claims growing out of the aviation meet at Domingues Field last January.

Ferris had an agreement with Frew, who had leased the field, under the terms of which, it is alleged, Frew stated he would not be responsible for bills in excess of $10,000. Frew alleges he settled with Ferris and allowed 10 per cent. commission on the net receipts. Ferris, it appears, contracted bills above the agreement for dining and wining visiting naval officers. These claims and others were assigned to Sims, who is now seeking to collect them. The case will be resumed today.

PIONEER'S WILL.
SHOWS FAITH IN WIFE.

That the faith of Asa Hunter in his wife, Petra, was shared by his children was evidenced when the San Fernando Valley pioneer's will was probated yesterday. Hunter left an estate valued at $40,000 to Mrs. Hunter, knowing that she would look out for them. The children in court during the proceedings were attentive to their aged parent.

Hunter died at the age of 80 years, mentioning in his will the following children: William, Richard and Alexander Hunter, Emily Snyder, Keziah Gage and Josie Hall. He deeded most of his property to his wife before his death. At one time the Hunter family owned a large amount of land in San Fernando Valley.

REVIVES TRAGEDY.
HEARD IN DIVORCE COURT.

The underlying causes for the divorce proceedings brought by Jonathan Matthews before Judge Rector yesterday was the fondness of Mrs. Matthews for dancing and alleged attentions paid her by Sam Walker. The name of Walker was introduced by Attorney Robertson and revived a tragedy at a house on Ceres avenue on February 25, last.

Walker, it seems, quarreled with Mrs. Matthews over a letter Matthews had written her. He desired to see it and she refused to turn it over to him. Drawing a weapon, Walker cut Mrs. Matthews in the throat and on the wrist, and turned the instrument on himself, dying an hour later at the Receiving Hospital. Mrs. Matthews is employed by a restaurant. The decree was granted.

SUIT IS SETTLED.
WASHING-MACHINE CONTRACT.

A settlement was reached yesterday in the suit of Carrie French against the Domestic Utilities Manufacturing Company, alleging breach of contract. When the case was called in Judge Wilbur's court yesterday, the attorneys made a statement, but did not name the terms of the settlement.

Under the contract calling for an agency of the company's washing machine, $500 was to be paid, but in lieu of the money, a lot valued at $700 was deeded over to the concern. It was complained that the machine could not be operated without a certain handle and that an additional charge of 5 cents was asked.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.
BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

HOLLAND TREASURES. Paintings by Dutch masters and rich goods from the land of the dykes figure in the damage suit brought by Mrs. Josie Dekker against the Colyear Van and Storage Company, which was begun in Judge Bordwell's court yesterday. The goods, valued at $2000, were stored in the warehouse at Nos. 415-9 San Pedro street, October 13, last, and destroyed when the building burned December 17.

TUFTS CASE. Judge Cabaniss will instruct the jury in the Tufts case this morning, all of yesterday having been taken up in the arguments of the attorneys. The charge on which Gorham Tufts, Jr., was tried was that he obtained money under false pretenses, under an alleged power of attorney.

CALIFORNIA TO SHIP ASPHALT.

Will Take Eastern Business From Texas.

British People Prepare for Gasoline Imports.

Orient May Supply Shortage on Pacific Coast.

California instead of Texas will ship between 300 and 400 carloads of soft asphalt, to fill the order of El Oso Asphalt Company. This supply, which is constantly and rapidly growing, has in the past come mainly from the latter State, but owing to the superior quality of the local commodity it was decided to make the change. It is an almost entirely new departure for the local industry, opening up new avenues of trade.

The asphalt will have to be shipped in tank car instead of barrels used for the hard asphalt and handled in boxcars. The most of the shipments are to go to the Middle West.

The government in its last report on asphalt, showed that during 1911 there were 235,000 tons of asphalt shipped into the Middle West and that less than 50,000 tons came from California, the remainder coming from Kentucky, Trinidad and Venezuela.

The freight rates, it is said, may be reduced to eastern points from California, making it possible for the industry here to get a wider market. From Atlantic coast points asphalt pays $4.20 a ton to St. Louis and Mississippi points as against $11 from California, making it possible for only the superior California asphalt grades to compete. With better rates California would have at least 200,000 tons of this business a year.

State Highway Commissioners are rapidly becoming aware of the fact that California asphalt, when properly handled, will make a better road than macadam, and are beginning to use it. The soft asphalt is used for mixing with the hard kind and for several other purposes. Only the oil asphalt can be mixed for these requirements. For a long time the Oso company has been shipping some soft asphalt from California to the East and the demand is constantly increasing, owing to its superior quality. With the diversion of the shipments from Texas, if the anticipated freight reduction is made, the output from California will probably be increased to 400 barrels within the next eighteen months.

Will Import Gasoline.

After a recent meeting of the directors of the Shell syndicate it was announced that the Asiatic Petroleum would import to the Pacific Coast only gasoline, offsetting the reports current that all "burning oils" would be shipped here. Sir Marcus Samuel of the Shell has assured American refiners that kerosene, engine or stove distillate would not be included.

The gasoline imported will be marketed by the Indian Refining Company. No crude oil will be shipped in either, thus leaving the fuel market to the local producer.

The Shell people say they believe the present demand for gasoline is far beyond the local supply and is growing so rapidly that if every gallon was extracted from every barrel of California crude there would not be enough to supply the market.

It is said the Sumatra and Borneo gasoline is a very high grade product and wholly free from odor. It is popular in Europe. The first shipments of this gasoline will probably come to the Coast early in 1913. Three 3000-foot wharfs will probably be built to receive this oil. One of them will be at San Pedro, Los Angeles harbor, another at Seattle and a third at Martinez. Already the Indian has looked over land near Vernon for tankage purposes, but so far as known no sale has been made.

The tankers, that will bring the gasoline here, will return, probably, with water as ballast, no California crude to be exported, according to the latest advices.

Drilling is Held Up.

The Panama Oil Company in its well No. 1 has been successful in cementing. The well is 2796 feet deep. Drilling was held up for a time while repairs were made on the machinery, but everything is now reported to be in operation again. It is believed the well will be finished in another week.

No. 2 well continues to flow steadily, producing about 500 barrels a day. Five tanks of oil were delivered in June.

The Buick's new well, No. 4, is not maintaining the production that was first estimated, but is flowing steadily with a daily out put of 350 barrels a day. The management has decided to mill out with a rotary the eleven feets of tubing in well No. 3, which are packed tight in the sand. This is likely to be a slow and tedious job.

Field Notes.

The Maye Consolidated well, on section 28, 31-23, North Midway, which came several months ago as a gusher at a depth of 2500 feet, is holding its production to almost the original figure. The oil is of twenty-five gravity.

The Guaranty at Coalinga has resumed operations on section 14, 20-24. The wells will be cleaned out and put on the pump.

Well No. 6 of the Alberta Midway on section 14, 31-22, near Fellows, is now doing about 175 barrels a day. It was perforated at a depth of 1270 feet.

The East Puente, in Kern River, is putting in a new boiler and will erect a new boiler-house. Then work will be started on its property on section 4, 29-28.

The Tejon Oil Company, section 34, 27-23, Kern River, is rigging up for two new wells.

Pleads Ignorance of Law.

Miss A. C. Janne, superintendent of nurses at a local hospital, was arraigned before Police Judge Fredrickson yesterday on a complaint signed by Inspector William Teile of the State Bureau of Labor Statistics, charging her with having violated the State labor law by working Miss May Hotzel, a maid, seven consecutive days. Miss Janne pleaded not guilty, and was released on her own recognizance for trial on the 23rd inst. She said she did not know the law applied to hospitals.

The freight rates, it is said, may be reduced to eastern points from California, making it possible for the industry here to get a wider market. From Atlantic coast points asphalt pays $4.50 a ton to St. Louis and Mississippi points as against $11 from California, making it possible for only the superior California asphalt grades to compete. With better rates California would have at least 200,000 tons of this business a year.

State Highway Commissioners are rapidly becoming aware of the fact that California asphalt, when properly handled, will make a better road than macadam, and are beginning to use it. The soft asphalt is used for mixing with the hard kind and for several other purposes. Only the oil asphalt can be mixed for these requirements. For a long time the Oso company has been shipping some soft asphalt from California to the East and the demand is constantly increasing, owing to its superior quality. With the diversion of the shipments from Texas, if the anticipated freight reduction is made, the output from California will probably be increased to 400 barrels within the next eighteen months.

Will Import Gasoline.

After a recent meeting of the directors of the Shell syndicate it was announced that the Asiatic Petroleum would import to the Pacific Coast only gasoline, offsetting the reports current that all "burning oils" would be shipped here. Sir Marcus Samuel of the Shell has assured American refiners that kerosene, engine or stove distillate would not be included.

The gasoline imported will be marketed by the Indian Refining Company. No crude oil will be shipped in either, thus leaving the fuel market to the local producer.

The Shell people say they believe the present demand for gasoline is far beyond the local supply and is growing so rapidly that if every gallon was extracted from every barrel of California crude there would not be enough to supply the market.

It is said the Sumatra and Borneo gasoline is a very high grade product and wholly free from odor. It is popular in Europe. The first shipments of this gasoline will probably come to the Coast early in 1913. Three 2000-foot wharfs will probably be built to receive this oil. One of them will be at San Pedro, Los Angeles harbor, another at Seattle and a third at Martinez. Already the Indian has looked over land near Vernon for tankage purposes, but so far as known no sale has been made.

The tankers, that will bring the gasoline here, will return, probably, with water as ballast, no California crude to be exported, according to the latest advices.

Drilling is Held Up.

The Panama Oil Company in its well No. 1 has been successful in cementing. The well is 2796 feet deep. Drilling was held up for a time while repairs were made on the machinery, but everything is now reported to be in operation again. It is believed the well will be finished in another week.

No. 1 well continues to flow steadily, producing about 500 barrels a day. Five tanks of oil were delivered in June.

The Butcher's new well, No. 4, is not materially increasing the production that was first estimated, but is flowing steadily with a daily out put of 350 barrels of oil. The management has decided to shut out with a rotary the eleven joints of tubing in well No. 3, which are packed tight in the sand. This is likely to be a slow and tedious job.

Field Notes.

The Mayo Consolidated well, on section 33, 32-23, North Midway, which came several months ago as a gusher at a depth of 3500 feet, is holding its production to almost the original figure. The oil is of twenty-five gravity.

The Guaranty at Coalinga has resumed operations on section 14, 20-16. The wells will be cleaned out and put on the pump.

Well No. 4 of the Alberta Midway on section 14, 11-22, near Fellows, is now doing about 175 barrels a day. It was perforated at a depth of 1270 feet.

The East Puente, in Kern River, is putting in a new boiler and will erect a new boiler-house. Then work will be started on its property on section 4, 29-28.

The Tejon Oil Company, section 36, 32-28, Kern River, is rigging up for two new wells.

Pleads Ignorance of Law.

Miss A. C. Janne, superintendent of nurses at a local hospital, was arraigned before Police Judge Fredericks yesterday on a complaint sworn by Inspector William Telle of the State Bureau of Labor Statistics, charging her with having violated the eight hour law by working Miss May Foust, a maid, seven consecutive days. Miss Janne pleaded not guilty, and was released on her own recognizance for trial on the 23rd inst. She said she did not know the law applied in hospitals.

Cash of Los Angeles Real World-Beater

THE cash resources of Los Angeles are far greater than those of any city of like size in the world. They are greater than those of many states in the Union. They are greater than those of nations containing millions of people.

The deposits in all of our banks approximated $169,000,000 on July 1, 1912. The savings banks and trust companies deposits on the same date approximated $100,000,000. The report of the comptroller of the currency shows that the savings banks deposits in 1910 IN THIRTY-THREE STATES WERE LESS THAN A HUNDRED MILLION DOLLARS. THE FIGURES FOLLOW:

State.	Deposits.
Maine	$89,938,000
New Hampshire	84,836,000
Vermont	43,132,000

THE DEPOSITS IN ONE LOS ANGELES SAVINGS BANK ARE $43,643,329.67, AND EXCEED THE 1910 DEPOSITS IN ALL THE SAVINGS BANKS IN ANY OF THE FOLLOWING STATES: Vermont, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska, Kansas, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Utah, Nevada and Arizona. THE DEPOSITS IN THIS ONE LOS ANGELES BANK EXCEED THE DEPOSITS IN ALL THE SAVINGS BANKS OF SPAIN, A COUNTRY WITH A POPULATION OF 19,000,000, AND WITH A NATIONAL DEBT OF ALMOST TWO BILLION DOLLARS. The deposits in this one Los Angeles bank are almost twice those in all the savings banks of Chili, one of the most prosperous of South American countries. The deposits in all the Los Angeles savings institutions are about equal to those of the savings banks of Japan, the mistress of the Orient, with a population of 50,000,000.

These figures are so impressive in the showing of our financial strength that steps should be taken by the Chamber of Commerce and by our bankers to see that they are brought to the attention of every important banking house interested in international trade.

* * * *

The Prosperity of Los Angeles is well exemplified by the growth of the SECURITY TRUST & SAVINGS BANK

The accompanying editorial from the Los Angeles Examiner of July 4th sets forth in wonderfully forceful comparison with other states and foreign countries the tremendously prosperous growth of the city all Californians love so well and are so justly proud of.

In no better way can the desirability of a city as a place of residence and of business be finally proven than by such convincing figures as these.

Think of it! The Savings Deposits of any one of thirty-three States, according to the 1910 report of the U. S. Comptroller of the Currency, show LESS than $100,000,000. Yet, the last reports from the Savings Banks and Trust Cos. in Los Angeles show MORE than that amount.

Deservedly, this editorial writer uses the figures of THE SECURITY TRUST & SAVINGS BANK to exemplify and prove the city's solidity.

The $43,643,329.67 Deposits of THE SECURITY TRUST & SAVINGS BANK exceed the 1910 Deposits of ALL the Savings Banks in any of a list of thirty States of this country.

Of Importance to Depositors

The value and importance of these assets to the customers of the Security Trust & Savings Bank lies not so much in the Amount as in the Nature of these deposits.

The Security Trust & Savings Bank does not accept deposit accounts of other banks nor the funds of cities, counties or state, nor public funds of any character.

This grand total of $43,643,329.67 of deposits is made up of the accounts of 80,648 depositors, an average of about $500 to each customer. This absence of any great number of accounts with heavy individual balances strengthens the security and reliability of our bank and demonstrates the claim of the Security Trust & Savings Bank to be essentially the bank of the average depositor, and it is for such depositors that every possible facility is here designed.

CATCH SAFE IN SAN FRANCISCO.

BIG HAUL OF SMUGGLED MEN NOW IN CELLS.

Alleged Leaders of Desperate San Clemente Island Gang Arraigned Before United States Commissioner—One Says He Was Made to Take Part at Revolver's Point.

Immigration Inspector Conklin, in charge of the gasoline launch Three C's that went north from San Clemente Island last Sunday loaded with Chinese contrabands, wired Joseph Nardini, inspector in charge, yesterday that the ten Chinese had been delivered to Inspector Backus, in San Francisco. A portion of the telegram leads Nardini to believe that Conklin and his men have secured some inside information as to the identity of Oakland men interested in the smuggling trade.

Harry D. Lloyd, the alleged owner of the gasoline launch Starlight, now lying under libel action at Long Beach, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Van Dyke yesterday, and in default of $2500 bail was committed to the County Jail. His preliminary examination was fixed for next Monday. Lloyd and William Gerald, supposed to be the leader in this latest attempt to smuggle Chinese laborers by wholesale, were not allowed to communicate. Gerald's bail was fixed at $5000 and his preliminary hearing set for next Tuesday.

Lloyd claimed that about ten days ago he was hired by Gerald and a Mexican whom he did not know to make a fishing trip, receiving $10 from Gerald. He said that no sooner had they got fairly started toward San Clemente than Gerald declared that he must go to Ensenada to take on a cargo of Chinese. Lloyd said he demurred at taking the trip, but was induced to change his mind by the Mexican drawing a revolver and threatening to blow out his brains.

It is learned from Assistant United States District Attorney Archbald, who has the prosecution in charge, that Lloyd only has a partial claim on the Starlight, that he agreed to pay a man named John Smith $750 for the boat and put up $300 of that amount, but did not pay the balance. Smith, who still has a claim of $450 on the boat, wants to know where he will come in. The Starlight is in possession of a special government officer, and proceedings in libel, forfeiting it, will be started by the District Attorney's office.

JIU-JITSU STOPS ROBBERY.

Would-be Hold-up Is Routed When Jap Gets Nipponese Half-Nelson on Him—Second Job Successful.

T. Kataoka's knowledge of jiu-jitsu saved him from being robbed by a lone highway at an early hour yesterday morning on Alameda street between Turner and Banning.

The Japanese, who lives at No. 121 Wilmington street, was on his way home when a medium-sized man, who did not wear a mask, stepped out from a shadow and, pointing a gun in his face, commanded him to hold up his hands. Kataoka did hold up his hands, but in so doing secured a hold on the highwayman that frightened him. He broke and ran.

About three hours later, presumably the same man, for he answered the general description of the man who stopped Kataoka, held up N. Shilo on San Pedro street between Sixth and Seventh and secured $10.

WILL WIN IN FAIR TRIAL

Many Years' Experience Causes Mrs. Eells to Think She Can Predict Outcome.

New Hartford, Iowa.—"I think I am well qualified," writes Mrs. L. Eells of this place, "to recommend Cardui, and strongly advise all women to give it a trial. For the past 24 years, I had been afflicted with troubles peculiar to women. They made life a burden for me. I tried home doctors, and various remedies without relief. At last I began to take Cardui, according to directions, and now I am entirely cured of all my afflictions."

Do you suffer from any of those troubles to which all women are liable? If so, how would you like to be able to say, "Now I am entirely cured of all my afflictions," like Mrs. Eells does?

Take Cardui, the woman's tonic.

For more than half a century, this purely vegetable, gentle-acting, woman's remedy, has been in successful use in the treatment of just such troubles. Not only has it helped sick women to health, but as a strength-giving tonic for weak, debilitated women, it has been found of more than ordinary value.

Keep Cardui convenient in the closet. Buy a bottle today at the nearest drug store and begin to use it.

SAD TO CONTEMPLATE.

Atlantic City is now entertaining fourteen hundred delegates to the Prohibition party convention. It is a tragedy to think of that many thirsty persons.

DOUBLING UP.

Pomona, like South Pasadena, is to have only one telephone system. The influence of suburban towns in this respect is likely to reach the cities in the sweet bye and bye.

FOR EMERGENCIES.

Three hundred and fifteen warships of the British fleet were inspected Tuesday by members of Parliament. The English statesmen must have found great consolation in the review as they reflected upon the woman suffrage situation in that country.

KEEP MOVING.

Richard Harding Davis did not remain unconsoled for very long after his recent divorce. He has married an actress half his age, which does not mean, of course, that he possesses twice her wisdom. These divorcons do not need a policeman to keep them moving.

SHOOTING THE RAPIDS.

Two men have arrived in Los Angeles after having circled the globe in thirty-nine days. This is entirely too much like eating one's winter rations in a fortnight. Traveling at that rate would soon reduce life to boredom, even if the people on the earth had access to the stars.

UNDER SUSPICION.

After a long-drawn-out prosecution of liquor cases at Long Beach the trial jury disagreed. It seems that there is always a possibility that a Long Beach man with cloves and Sen-Sen on his breath may have visited Los Angeles where the tigers are not blind and where the pigs see daylight and night light, too.

THE POISONED CUP.

A countess who is suing her husband for divorce in this city fell in a swoon from the witness stand in the course of her cross-examination. The only excuse for a divorce should be the readjustment of lives. If such a situation is met with candor and courage it might also be met perhaps with kindness and conviction. Every experience must add a touch of poison or of leaven to the cup of life. Even a divorce might seem less ghastly if approached with the sort of decision that constructs. If men and women were kind, however, before they were selfish there would probably be fewer divorces.

THE CALL OF THE WILD.

When Senator Dixon of Montana issued his call for the national progressive movement to send delegates to Chicago next month to nominate a Presidential candidate on the Bull Moose ticket, the telegraph editor of The Times headed the item, "The Call of the Wild." There is a chance, of course, that before August 5 Marc Antony Johnson will be ready to begin his address, "I Come Not to Praise Caesar, but to Bury Him," and by all the gods of Herbert Spencer, Nick Longworth and Julius Caesar we think the political corpse will stay buried.

HATPINS.

Still the cry goes up against the unsheathed, murderous hatpin. And at last the legislators in Sacramento are beginning to take notice. Not long ago, in a crowd outside a moving-picture show, such a hatpin gouged out the eye of an innocent male bystander. And the owner of the weapon was fiercely indignant because her hat and hair were thereby disarranged.

So, perhaps, for the protection of women's hats, if not for the sake of other people's eyes, we may get an ordinance to regulate the length of the deadly hatpin. California is full of laws and regulations framed for less important uses.

GREAT PHILOSOPHY.

Judge Walter Bordwell did not study law until after he was 30 years of age. He went on the bench in this city in order to broaden his education and now he voluntarily surrenders his seat at the expiration of his term because he does not want to go to sleep on the job, but believes that if he wants to grow he must have a change of employment. A man who regards the expansion of personality and the enriching of it above dollars and cents and above position carries his own values wherever he goes and contains his own sense of position wherever he is. For such a man the center of the universe is wherever he plants his feet.

ECONOMIC CHANGES.

The tariff has had very little to do with the advance or diminution of prices in any article of general use. Scientific discoveries and invention of new machinery with resulting economic changes have affected prices more than any other cause.

Fifty years ago paper was made from the fibers of cotton and linen rags. The use of paper increased more rapidly than the supply of rags, and the price of rags constantly and rapidly advanced. The activity of paper manufacturers was stimulated in the direction of discovering and utilizing new fibrous material. It was found that pulp suitable for the manufacture of paper could be made from straw, from various grasses, from the yucca palm of the desert, and from the wood of willow, cottonwood, pine and fir trees. This caused a decline in the price of paper, and rags were proportionately cheapened. The average value of a pound of paper declined from 6.09 cents in 1880 to 3.95 cents in 1888, while the wages of paper makers were increased in the same period from $1.13 to $1.50 per day. The cost of labor required to produce a pound of paper from rags was 22 per cent. greater than the cost of producing it from wood pulp. The wages of labor increased, yet the cost of labor per pound of paper decreased.

Sulphite of quinine sold in 1865 for $1.07 per ounce; in 1873 it was $2.37 per ounce; in 1876 it was $1.68 per ounce; in 1877 it was $4.70 per ounce; in 1880 it was $3 per ounce; in 1883 it sold for 80 cents per ounce, and in 1887 it sold for 30 cents per ounce.

Quinine is manufactured from cinchona bark which, fifty years ago, was obtained from the forests of the northern states of South America. The increase in price caused by the rapid destruction of the native forests caused the planting of large tracts of land with the cinchona tree in the islands of Java and Ceylon and in Bengal. It was discovered that while the bark of the wild tree yielded but 2 per cent. of quinine that of the cultivated tree yielded from 8 to 12 per cent. The discovery and development of more economical processes of manufacture resulted in more quinine being made by a given quantity of labor in from three to five days than could have been effected by previous methods in twenty days.

Adams Smith, in his "Wealth of Nations," published in 1776, wrote of the wonderful achievement of ten men in making 48,000 pins in a day. Now, three men make 7,500,000 pins in the same time.

No. 1 pig-iron sold for $53 per ton at Philadelphia in September, 1872, $24 in 1874, $16.50 in 1878, and $41 in 1880. The tariff on pig-iron was the same during these years, yet the variation in price was more than 100 per cent. Clearly the tariff had nothing to do with the cost of iron.

Economies in transportation have had much to do with the cost of commodities. Prior to 1875 a 3000-ton steamer, bound on a long voyage, was obliged to carry 2200 tons of coal to transport 800 tons of freight. By means of compound engines this was changed to 2200 tons of freight with 800 tons of coal. The result of the use of compound engines was stated by an eminent authority on dynamic forces to be that "a small cake of coal which would pass through a ring the size of a shilling when burned in the compound engine of a modern steamboat would drive a ton of food and its proportion of the ship two miles on its way from a foreign port."

Another calculator computed that half a sheet of note paper will develop sufficient power, when burned in connection with the triple-expansion engine, to carry a ton a mile in an Atlantic steamer.

In 1860 the cost of transportation of wheat from New York to Liverpool was as high as 27 cents per bushel. In 1886 it was 5 cents per bushel and at one period in 1888 competition for ocean freights reduced the cost to ½ cent per bushel, which rate did not last long for it was below the cost of carriage.

In the manufacturing industries the cost of production and the cost of the product have been greatly lessened.

In making agricultural implements 600 men now do the work that formerly required 2145 men. In making boots and shoes 100 persons make, with the aid of machinery, as many women's shoes as 500 working by hand process. In the manufacture of flour there has been a displacement of nearly three-fourths of the manual labor formerly required. In the manufacture of furniture from one-half to three-fourths of the old number of persons is required. In the manufacture of metallic goods machinery has decreased manual labor 33 per cent. and in making wall paper the displacement is in the proportion of 100 to 1. In making sleeve buttons one skilled workman could make three dozen pairs per day, now a boy at one-third his wages can, with machinery, make 9000 pairs per day. In imitation gold jewelry the United States has been for many years an exporter, and in Germany, in despite of a heavy tariff, the American sells his machine-made product at less than similar articles produced by poorly-paid cottage hand labor.

Instances might be cited by the hundreds of changes in prices caused by inventions in machinery, by diminution in the cost of transportation, and by scientific agriculture. It must be obvious to the most casual observer that the cost of manufacured products is enhanced by the tariff to only a slight extent, and that such products are generally much lower in price than they were forty years ago. The increase in the cost of living is mostly in increased prices for food and shelter, and with such increase the tariff has nothing whatever to do.

PASSING OF THE LUXEMBOURG.

The Louvre in Paris has been for many years the storehouse of the ancient in art. No painter or sculptor, however gifted or however wonderful his work, could obtain a place for his production there until ten years after his death, and by that time he really did not care whether his work appeared in the Louvre, or in a wine shop on the Boulevard San Michel, or distracted the attention of Schwab, the steel magnate, as he bucked at roulette at Monte Carlo. There are many paintings in the Louvre of Madonnas and Crucifixions and suffering saints. They probably make up in piety what they lack in execution, but tourists, after hurrying through the Louvre, usually adjourn to the Luxembourg. In the latter may be found the works of living artists.

At the Louvre an art critic from Chicago or Kansas City can squint through a paper horn at a painting and gabble about "tone" and "atmosphere" and "color" and "expression." But let him not utter his Missouri criticisms aloud at the Luxembourg or he may receive a card from the artist or some friend of the artist's with an invitation to a debate with swords at the Bois de Boulogne at sun up.

Now the Parisian authorities are house cleaning, and shifting, and mixing things up, and they have decided to use the Luxembourg building for another purpose and to transfer its art treasures to the Rue de Rivoli side of the Louvre.

This will perplex John P. Morgan's picture buyer. He won't know whether he is gazing on a Madonna of the vintage of 1532 or a work of Johann Smythe of New Jersey painted in 1911.

A DARCENOUS SUGGESTION.

Article II section 1 of the Constitution of the United States, as amended in 1803 by Amendment XII, provides that—

"Each State shall appoint in such manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress."

In construing this section of the Constitution the Supreme Court of the United States decided in 1902, in the case of McPherson vs. Blacker (146 U. S. 25) that reference to contemporaneous and subsequent action under this clause shows—

"That various modes of choosing the electors were pursued, as by the Legislature itself on joint ballot; by the Legislature through a concurrent vote of the two houses; by a vote of the people for a general ticket; by vote of the people in districts; by choice partly by the people voting in districts and partly by the Legislature; by choice by the Legislature from candidates voted for by the people in districts; and in other ways, as notably by North Carolina in 1792 and Tennessee in 1796 and 1800. No question was raised as to the power of the State to appoint in any mode its Legislature saw fit to adopt, and none that a single method, applicable without exception, must be pursued in the absence of an amendment to the Constitution. The district system was largely considered the most equitable, and Madison wrote that it was that system which was contemplated by the framers of the Constitution, although it was soon seen that its adoption by some States might place them at a disadvantage by a division of their strength, and that a uniform rule was preferable."

In the same case, affirming 92 Mich. 377, 1 Hughes (U. S.) 571, 8 Fed. Cases No. 4336, the Supreme Court of the United States held—

"Congress is empowered to determine the time of choosing the electors and the day on which they are to give their votes, which is required to be on the same day throughout the United States, but otherwise the power and jurisdiction of the State is exclusive, with the exception of the provisions as to the number of electors and the ineligibility of certain persons, so framed that Congressional and Federal influence might be excluded."

In casting about for some sure, safe and simple larcenous method of stealing the Republican vote of California for President for somebody who was not nominated, why has it not occurred to Gov. Johnson to call an extra session of the Legislature to meet in August or September, repeal the present law for electing Presidential electors by popular vote, and enact a law providing for their election by the Legislature, or, simpler yet, a law empowering the Governor to appoint electors?

Then the job would be done so far as California is concerned. The spellbinders for the different parties could pack their speeches in their grip sacks and transfer their activities to neighboring States, and we would all be relieved of the wear and tear of a canvass and secure surcease of sorrow that otherwise might be inflicted by the antics of the swashbucklers.

The thirteen electors selected by the Legislature would of course not be actually, but only—so to speak—morally bound to obey the orders of the Governor in casting their votes for President and Vice-President. The general election will take place in November. The Electoral Colleges will not meet until January. If no candidates shall have secured a majority of the Electoral College at the November election and thirteen shall hold the balance of power, what an opportunity there will be for swaps—and things! Maybe Johnson himself might be tricked into the White House. Who can tell?

UNCLE WALT.

The Poet Philosopher.

So many are bound to write, who haven't the gift of pens! They labor by day and night, in mansions or attic dens producing their toilsome reams of limpid or turgid prose, or weaving their hopeful dreams in songs that nobody knows! Alas for that lure unkind, the lure of the printed page, that stirs in the yeoman's mind a counterfeit poet's rage! Alas for that inky hope, which bids, for a poet's wreath, the doctor forsake his dope, the dentist abandon teeth; the farmer desert his plow, the blacksmith neglect his fire, the milkmaid abjure the cow, and reach for the nearest lyre. Oh, sisters, may you ne'er know, the trouble, the grief, the pain, the carking, corroding woe, of poets who write in vain! Oh, nieces and aunts and sires, don't throw all your tools away, to kindle poetic fires, a-hoping to make it pay! Where one of the tribe succeeds ten thousand are chewing rags o'er sheaves of rejected screeds sent back by the monthly mags! And even the ones who win have trouble and grief to spare, and early in life begin to shed both their health and hair. Oh, cousins, your peace of mind is better than all the dimes you'd earn in the beastly grind of turning out deathless rhymes.

SOME SAYINGS OF CONFUCIUS.

Some of the sayings of Confucius, which are to the Chinese what our Bible is to us:

Fixing the Evangelists.

[Lippincott's:] An English clergyman visiting this country tells of a bishop in England who, when a new church in his diocese was to be consecrated, received many letters complaining that the architect had disfigured the interior with useless decoration.

The bishop decided to make an inspection of the new building, and accordingly summoned the architect to meet him there.

The bishop could find nothing wrong until, just as he reached the chancel, he chanced to catch sight of four wooden images apparently guarding the pulpit.

"What do those figures represent?" he asked.

"The four evangelists."

"They appear to be asleep."

"Do you think so?"

"I certainly do."

Whereupon the architect called out to a man who was at work on one of the pews:

"Henry, bring your chisel and open the eyes of the evangelists."

SOCIALISM DEFINED.

[The Philistine:] Socialism—A sincere sentimental, beneficent theory, which has but one objection, and that is, it will not work.

2. A plant by which the inefficient, irresponsible, ineffective, unemployable and unworthy will thrive without industry, persistence or economy.

3. An earnest effort to get Nature to change the rules for the benefit of those who are tired of the game.

4. A social and economic scheme of government by which man shall loiter rather than labor.

5. A survival of the unfit.

6. A device for swimming without going near the H2 O.

7. Participation in profits without responsibility as to deficits.

8. An arrangement for destroying initiative, invention, creation and originality.

9. Resolutions passed by a committee as a substitute for work.

ABROAD WITH BURDETTE.

The Forest of Fontainebleau.

The most extensive forest in France. A Californian can no more help telling how big a thing is than a guide can help telling how old it is. It contains an area of 41,600 acres. Not so big, nearly, as many a California ranch. Not one-third so extensive as the older ones. But history does not measure areas by metes and bounds. If it did, then would Texas have a greater area than France, and the "Life of Goliath" would occupy volumes where the biography of David would be complete in one chapter. Whereas, the life of Goliath is told in a paragraph of his killing by David.

Remember that, my son, when you want to cry because your six-foot friend smiles down upon your five-foot-three.

Fontainebleau is one of the most beautiful forests in the world. I expect to get shot for it when I come home, but I am an old man the sands of whose life are spilling the friction on the down grade, anyhow, and I'm ready to go to heaven any time. I wish we had a few beech forests in the loveliest State in the world.

Majesty.

Fontainebleau, or any other forest on earth, cannot compare for grandeur, statelliness, perfect majesty, the glory of uncounted centuries and the marvel of deathless old age, crowned with the evergreen grace of the morning time, with our great Sequoia forests. They are the gardens of God for majesty and glory. There is in their golden light and violet shadows an atmosphere of perpetual praise. You cannot hear the winds that breathe softly through the green coronets, far up in the silences, but you can feel that like "the living creatures before the throne, they have no rest day and night, saying "Holy, holy, holy Lord God Almighty." They are the trees of God's own planting.

Beauty.

But Fontainebleau, with its oaks, and chestnuts, and beeches, their wide-spreading branches reaching far out like the open fingers of a child's hand to catch the cascade of mellow sunshine running and sifting through the emerald fingers, to dance with the shadows on the grass. Fontainebleau, in the morning light, the afternoon sunshine and the shadows of the twilight, Fontainebleau is a place where age turns back to youth and youth runs down to childhood, and joy and laughter and love and happiness—the happiness of children—dance with the fairies.

This, too, is one of the gardens of God wherein he loves to walk in the cool of the day and call for his children by name—children too often made ashamed and afraid by sin and who run from him instead of to him when the tenderest voice in the universe calls to them.

Antiquity.

Seven hundred years before Padre Junipero Serra came to San Diego this forest was called Foret de Biere, in honor of a Danish chieftain, Bioern Ironside, who made his permanent camp here. But the glory and fame of the Fontainebleau began with King Francis First. Scientific and tasteful forestry was then in its infancy, in swaddling clothes, in fact, but it was a healthful infant. It was treated as a forest rather than a wood lot. Early conservation of forest reserves fared well that it was entirely in the hands of kings rather than in the capricious guardianship of changing secretaries, commissions, boards and State Legislatures. When a king found a corporation sawing up century-old beeches and oaks and pines into fencing, shingles and tooth picks he did not have to wait ten months until Congress came into session to legalize the depradations of the destroyers. He promply cut off the heads of the President and board of directors with their own gang saws, and established more firmly than ever his own policy of conservation.

Hence, one of the most beautiful forests on earth is today more extensive and beautiful than ever. While, had it not been for the women's clubs of California the Sequoias had long since gone humming through the saw mills.

Modern Conservation.

We of the United States, which, as you have been told on sundry Fourths of Julys, is the greatest, richest, biggest, mightiest and wisest country on earth, is now, always has been and ever will be for time everlasting, world without end, glory be to ourselves, double amen and then some, have had to fight and are still fighting for the palisades of the Hudson, the Indian mounds of Ohio, Niagara Falls, the Big Trees and all Yosemite. The king occasionally cut off the wrong head, but when he did go after the right one—which was usually by accident—we all cried, "God save the king!" And sometimes that was asking an awful favor of the Almighty.

Occasionally the guide, who spoke with equal and most fluent unintelligibility and atrocious badness English, German, French and Italian, called our attention to a "grand" tree—a sylvan giant, twenty feet in circumference. Whereat we all laughed. And that polyglot babbler then made remarks about us to his horse, which spoke English much better than the man did, which were unfit either to translate or to print. Hence, I do not ask you to print them.

Lovers of the Forest.

Victor Hugo, Baudelaire, Alfred de Musset, Beranger and Theophile Gautier have sung of the beauties of this forest. Artists like J-F Millet, Th. Rousseau, Daubigny and Corot have immortalized it on canvas. Genius and greatness, wealth and power have loved its shades. No one has ever exaggerated its beauties. And among its later lovers were those practical and artistic "foresters," M. Denecourt, who is surnamed "le Sylvain," who idealized the forest as a lover worships his sweetheart, and his worthy successor, M. Colinet. A monument is erected to the memory of M. Denecourt in the cemetery of Fontainebleau; a street in the little city and a "place" bear his name—these honors for a "forester," a man who saves and beautifies the woods—not the man who turns them into planks and sawdust.

They also show one some remarkable bits of rock scenery among the trees with special rocks worthy of individual mention. "La Roche qui Pleure," the rock which weeps; Rocher d'Avon, Rocher Denoiselles, etc. They are very picturesque, very striking, real nice little rocks which most strongly adorn the landscape. But a familiarity with the "Garden of the Gods," "El Capitan," "Cloud's Rest," "Half-Dome" and their stony sisters make it rather difficult to thrill over half an acre of dornicks very like a section of the San Gabriel wash, where the Pacific Electric stone crusher is chewing up into ballast rocks that would laugh to scorn the near-titanic pretensions of the "Valley of the Rocks" in the fairyland of Fontainebleau.

The Play.

"PEG" TIPS THE FRIJOLES AGAIN.

ANOTHER WEEK FOR MANNERS'S PLAY AT THE BURBANK.

Ruggles to Be Seen in Bowles's Role of Alaric, Which He Will Play in New York—Bennett Now Slated for "Taming of Alberta." Local Theatrical News.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

"Peg," the emerald rascal, has again swung her small hoof at the bean-pot, and once more the Burbank frijoles are all over the floor.

Peg is wid us for another week, be th' powers, all annouuncements to the contrary notwithstanding.

A line of people two dozen strong before the box office at the dinner hour last night influenced the management to the extension decision, although, in all honesty and good faith, this seventh week did appear to be the last of Manners's play.

The continuation of "Peg" not only postpones the first appearance of Dick Bennett here, but removes for good and all that possibility of Lew Stone and Muriel Starr on the Burbank boards in "The Taming of Alberta."

An interesting outcrop of Week VIII will be the appearance of Charlie Ruggles, now but two days from his long San Francisco engagement, in the role of Alaric. Mr. Ruggles will make his bow Sunday night, and will play the part just one week.

Mr. Morosco has signed a long Burbank contract with Donald Bowles, who created the role, and who has been playing it, and still is. Upon that contract, and its local meaning, arose a rather sharp tiff between author and manager.

Manners, who has been coaching Bowles, and watching his work, was so pleased with him that he wanted to take him to New York. Morosco, upon the other hand, felt that if Bowles was good enough for New York in "Peg," he was certainly too good for the Burbank company to lose. They compromised on Ruggles, whose successes in the north had reached Manners's ears, even as his local character triumphs were matters of good remembrance to Boss Oliver. Ruggles, according to present plans, is to play Alaric before the kill-joys of the big town, while Bowles is to lay off just long enough to allow him to get the "feel" of the role before he assumes it in eastern earnest.

Ruggles will return to San Francisco, along with Forrest Stanley, to play during Miss Taylor's engagement at the Alcazar.

Dick Bennett, who will be in town Tuesday morning for final "Deep Purple" rehearsals, will be seen in that play one week from next Sunday, on the Burbank stage.

Morosco, intent upon getting a vision of "Alberta" somehow, someway, will now try to place Bennett and Starr in it, as Bennett's last local part. In effectiveness, this combination should be just as potent as the Stone-Starr team first spoken of.

Bennett's plays here, in order, will probably number only three, viz., "The Deep Purple," "Money Moon" and "The Taming of Alberta."

The coming week will bring to the Orpheum one of the strongest and best known of American character actors, Frank Keenan, in a very virile and thrilling play by Oliver White, "Man to Man." The combination of star and author is a most happy one, as Mr. White has fitted Mr. Keenan with a perfect vaudeville vehicle—a play that sets man against man in a struggle which neither can afford to lose, but which in the nature of things only one can win.

It is not a "capital versus labor" play in the usual sense, but a human document, touching the vitals and full of strong passion and stern resolve. Mr. Keenan has an admirable company to assist him in it.

Princess Rajah, a true Egyptian, is a dancer with the fervor and sensuosity of her race. She will present sumptuously two series of dances, "Cleopatra's Death" and the Arabian chair dance with handsome costumes and proper settings. Princess Rajah is not of the usual so-called Egyptian type, but is a real daughter of the Nile, and gives the beauty and worth of the dances of that land.

Salerno is the unusual juggler, with a new line of material, and Kremka Brothers fetch another new thing, in the way of comedy athletics. The Mountain Ash Male Choir with a new programme, Bert Leslie and company, Al and Fannie Steadman, and the four Ritchies complete the bill, with the usual fine music and motion news views.

"Pop" Fischer, with a due regard for public demand, will revive in magnificent style, with an all-star cast, "Pinafore" for the coming week, opening Sunday matinee. "Pinafore" is the sensation of the East just now, returning to popular favor with immense success. "Pop" and his all-star cast intend to make it one of the memorable offerings of his season here so far, and the Lyceum stage will become the deck of the good old ship for the coming week.

He has especially engaged Edgar Temple, formerly leading tenor for Henry W. Savage, as Ralph Rackstraw, and the balance of the cast, including Texas Guinan, Bob Lett, Laura Oakley, Jane Urban, Madison Smith, Charles Dudley, and the rest, will be in most acceptable parts. Scenically, the opera will be put on magnificently.

Beginning Thursday matinee, Florence Roberts will present at the Orpheum for the first time on any stage Hartley Manners's one-act play, "The Woman Intervenes." Miss Roberts and Mr. Manners have been working together on this play for a long time, and it is pronounced a real gem.

The current bill at the Empress Theater of which fun is the predominating feature, is proving splendid warm weather entertainment, and with such fine features as Nat Carr, with his inimitable Hebrew characterization; Barrows-Lancaster Company in their lively vehicle, "Like Father, Like Son," and Eddie Herron and Madge Douglas in Will M. Cressy's comedy, the bill is attracting delighted audiences of capacity proportions at every performance.

One of the biggest bills that has been seen on the Empress stage in many weeks will open next Monday afternoon with the Famous Ehrhat Dolar Troupe; the Five Musical Nosses and the well-known black-face funmaker, Uno Bradley, as the three particularly fine features.

Others who will contribute are Grenier and La Rose in their laughable acrobatic talkfest; the dainty singing trio, the Three Dixie Girls; Richard Wally, the juggler, and the new comedy and motion news pictures.

The Sullivan & Considine Road Show is now only two weeks away from the Empress Theater, opening here two weeks from Monday. On the Road shows this year will be found that

Mr. Morosco has signed a long Burbank contract with Donald Bowles, who created the role, and who has been playing it, and still is. Upon that contract, and its local meaning, arose a rather sharp tiff between author and manager.

Manners, who has been coaching Bowles, and watching his work, was so pleased with him that he wanted to take him to New York. Morosco, upon the other hand, felt that if Bowles was good enough for New York in "Peg," he was certainly too good for the Burbank company to lose. They compromised on Ruggles, whose successes in the north had reached Manners's ears, even as his local character triumphs were matters of good sound remembrance to Tom Oliver. Ruggles, according to present plans, is to play Alaric before the hill-boys of the big town, while Bowles is to lay off just long enough to allow him to get the "feel" of the role before he assumes it in eastern armor.

Ruggles will return to San Francisco, along with Forrest Stanley, to play during Miss Taylor's engagement at the Alcazar.

Dick Bennett, who will be in town Tuesday morning for final "Deep Purple" rehearsals, will be seen in that play one week from next Sunday, on the Burbank stage.

Morosco, intent upon getting a vision of "Alberta" somehow, someway, will now try to place Bennett and Starr in it, as Bennett's last local part. Is effectiveness, this combination should be just as potent as the Stone-Starr team first spoken of.

Bennett's plays here, in order, will probably number only three, viz., "The Deep Purple," "Money Moon" and "The Taming of Alberta."

The coming week will bring to the Orpheum one of the strongest and best known of American character actors, Frank Keenan, in a very virile and thrilling play by Oliver White, "Kas to Man." The combination of star and author is a most happy one, as Mr. White has fitted Mr. Keenan with a perfect vaudeville vehicle—a play that sets man against man in a struggle which neither can afford to lose, but which in the nature of things one can win.

It is not a "capital versus labor" play in the usual sense, but a human document, touching the vitals and full of strong passion and stern resolve. Mr. Keenan has an admirable company to assist him in it.

Princess Rajah, a true Egyptian, is a dancer with the fervor and sensuosity of her race. She will present sumptuously two series of dances, "Cleopatra's Death" and the Arabian daily dance with handsome costumes and proper settings. Princess Rajah is not of the usual so-called Egyptian type, but is a real daughter of the Nile, and gives the beauty and worth of the dances of that land.

Palermo is the unusual juggler, with a new line of material, and Kremka Brothers fetch another new thing, in the way of comedy athletics. The Mountain Ash Male Choir with a new programme, Bert Leslie and company, Al and Fannie Steadman, and the Four Ritchies complete the bill, with the usual fine music and motion news views.

"Pop" Fischer, with a due regard for public demand, will revive in magnificent style, with an all-star cast, "Pinafore" for the coming week, opening Sunday matinee. "Pinafore" is the sensation of the East just now, returning to popular favor with immense success. "Pop" and his all-star cast intend to make it one of the memorable offerings of his season here so far, and the Lyceum stage will become the deck of the good old ship for the coming week.

He has especially engaged Edgar Temple, formerly leading tenor for Henry W. Savage, as Ralph Rackstraw, and the balance of the cast, including Texas Guinan, Bob Lett, Laura Walker, Jane Urban, Madison Smith, Charles Dudley, and the rest, will be in most acceptable parts. Scenically, the opera will be put on magnificently.

Beginning Thursday matinee, Florence Roberts will present at the Orpheum for the first time on any stage Shelley Manners's one-act play, "The Woman Intervenes." Miss Roberts and Mr. Manners have been working together on this play for a long time, and it is pronounced a real gem.

The current bill at the Empress Theater of which fun is the predominating feature, is proving splendid warm weather entertainment, and with such fine features as Nat Carr, with his inimitable Hebrew characterization; Barrows-Lancaster Company in their lively vehicle, "Like Father, Like Son," and Eddie Herron and Madge Douglas in Will M. Cressy's comedy, the two are attracting delighted audiences of capacity proportions at every performance.

One of the biggest bills that has been seen on the Empress stage in many weeks will open next Monday afternoon with the Famous Eight Dolly Dancers Troupe; the Five Musical Nosses and the well-known black-face funster, Una Bradley, as the three particularly fine features.

Others who will contribute are Hughes and La Rose in their laughable acrobatic talkfest; the dainty Leonard trio, the Three Dixie Girls; Richard Wally, the juggler, and the new comedy and motion news pictures.

The Sullivan & Considine Road Show is now only two weeks away from the Empress Theater, opening here two days from Monday. On the Road that will be found that famous travesty of prison life, "High Life in Jail;" Harlan E. Knight and Lillian Volkman in Una Clayton's comedy "The Chalk Line," the Olivotti Troubadours, McIntyre and Groves, the Four Mayos, Henry Cutler, and the Monarch Comedy Four.

Just a little bit the best hot weather show ever offered in local vaudeville is the claim made by the Pantages publicity department for the coming week's programme. The list is headed by the Caro Miller family, known as the Five Columbians, in their musical comedy and dancing act. The star of the occasion is Marrilyn Miller, a chic little beauty with all the Caro Miller talent as an entertainer. "The Ballet of Roses," a scenic fantasy, is the subtitle of the act.

Those well-known burnt-cork artists, Lew Pistel and O. H. Cushing, stars of many a minstrel show, bring "The Stranded Minstrels." Tailman, the fancy pool and pocket billiard expert, is the third of the triumvirate of headliners. The Musical Gordon Highlanders in Scottish music, songs and dances; Charlie Hasty, the Hoosier boy, and the Bel Conto Trio in comedy musical efforts make up the list. The Gaumont Weekly will continue the presentation of the latest world news in moving pictures.

But four more performances of "The Politicians" remain at the Majestic Theater and on next Sunday night Kolb and Dill will be seen in a revised version of their notable musical comedy success, "Dream City." Like "The Politicians," "Dream City" has been completely revised and reedited since it was last presented at the Majestic Theater by the German comedians and in its new form promises to be one of the most popular offerings of their present limited engagement at the Broadway playhouse.

"Dill's "Dinglebender," the farm lad who dreams the wonderful city about which the piece is written, and Kolb's "Haufbrau" are considered among their very best comedy efforts. New songs, brilliant new chorus numbers and much bright dialogue have been added to the piece, making it among their very best offerings. The sale of seats for "Dream City" will open this morning

Standard Building Investment Co. Stock at

20c Per Share

---a ground floor opportunity

For a limited time—a very limited amount of Standard Building Investment Company stock is offered to ground floor purchasers at 20c per share—all cash—or 10 per cent. down and 5 per cent. monthly. This is a genuine and unusual opportunity. This company, new as a corporation, is old in the experience, ability, financial strength and integrity of its officers and directors. It offers which protect absolutely the interests of the small investor at every point, no matter what ill luck may befall him. If you purchase stock in this company—you have the privilege at any time to transfer your stock to the purchase of any of the company's property — and at the same time, get full advantage of all value increase in the stock. For instance, if you buy stock now at 20c per share—and in three months—say it is worth 35c per share—and you then desire to apply it to the purchase of a home—you get advantage of the 15c per share increase in value.

On the other hand, any purchaser of a home from this company may, at any time, apply his cash equity in the home to the purchase of stock. Therefore, if he happens to have bad luck, he has absolute protection from the loss of his equity. Another valuable feature of this company is its "Protection Fund" for the repurchase of stocks outright.

The Standard Building-Investment Company already owns three splendid residence tracts—one at Moneta and Manchester avenues—another at Florence and Figueroa streets—another of fine half-acre lots near Inglewood.

Many modern homes have already been erected on Tract No. 1—and most of them were sold even before they were built.

If you are able to lay by a few dollars a month—and wish to put it where you absolutely cannot lose it—but rather where it will be the solid foundation of your independence—investigate the advantages of this company. The opportunities in home building are here now as they never were before—and the new features this company offers must appeal to your judgment.

OFFICERS—R. H. Mouser, Pres. and General Mgr.; P. J. McDonald, Secretary and Treasurer. DIRECTORS—Geo. W. Boden, P. J. Welsh, Minor Moore.

With Possibly One Exception

The Original HOME BUILDERS OF LOS ANGELES has produced more in cash dividends and increase in value on shares year by year than any other similar company in the world.

Hundreds of fortunes have been made in Los Angeles real estate in the past ten years. A good many fortunes have been made by the stockholders of this company during the past seven years.

Every stockholder shares equally in the profits and thousands of small fortunes are going to be made in our shares in the next ten years. Right now this company owns and controls real estate on which the improvements alone will aggregate more than three-quarters of a Million Dollars in the next few years. Probably a quarter of a Million Dollars in profits will be made by the stockholders on this land alone.

It takes money to make money, but with hundreds of small stockholders this is accomplished. Some have only $1.00 working, some have $100.00, some $1000.00. In all it amounts to quite a sum, and every one gets a profit on the amount they have invested.

Dividend No 19 will be paid August 10th, 1912, and every share you pay for this month will draw three months' dividends. Remember, it only takes a dollar to start.

Only a limited number of shares will be sold at the present price.

Send for the new issue of our free magazine, "The Maker of Homes." It is full of good information.

SOCIETY

Dr. and Mrs. Francis C. Ferry,

Who have returned from their honeymoon trip and who will be at home to friends after August 1 at No. 1633 Hobart boulevard, this city.

MR. AND MRS. E. K. FOSTER, who left for Europe early in May, are expected home in September. Friends hear they have abandoned the trip to Germany and will spend all their time in England, which is looking its loveliest, from all accounts, just now.

Mrs. Effie Covey is another Los Angeles traveler who is reveling in the delights of England. She is visiting her sister and nieces at Puck's Croft, Sussex, a famous old manor house over three centuries old. Mrs. Covey's brother-in-law is one of the heads of Trinity House, the British Customs Department and held a high position at the coronation in his official capacity, which, of course, his wife, Mrs. Covey's niece, shared. Naturally, therefore, the visitor finds herself in interesting society and is meeting many celebrities. She will return toward the end of the year by way of San Antonio, where she has many friends.

To Receive.

In honor of her mother, Mrs. M. L. Wyatt of New York, widow of the late H. C. A pretty arrangement of flowers prevailed throughout the home. In the dining-room American Beauties appeared to advantage and the living-room was radiant with red peas, while lavender and white blossoms were utilized elsewhere.

PRINCELY ORIENTAL GARDEN.

Chinese Told of Plan to Expend Millions Here or at Beach Resort in Luxurious Teahouse.

The Chinese Consolidated Association of Los Angeles, representing nearly all the Pacific Coast Chinese organizations for the establishment of a steamship line between Los Angeles and Hongkong, received word from San Francisco yesterday that a similar organization has been perfected in the northern city, and a branch of the Los Angeles Chinese League of Justice also has been formed there to co-operate in the pending struggle between the Chinese and Japanese for commercial supremacy.

The Chinese Chamber of Commerce of Los Angeles is conducting an advertising campaign by which it hopes to bring many wealthy Chinese importers and merchants from New York, Chicago and elsewhere to establish headquarters and branches in this city.

It was stated by Goon Lee, representing the steamship promoters at a meeting in Chinatown yesterday, that the plans of the Chinese Prosective Association for a large Cantonese tea garden and oriental court at the Plaza had been upset by the statement of city officials that plans are under consideration for a union depot and civic center in the vicinity of the Plaza, but Goon Lee declared a number of wealthy Chinese of San Francisco are planning to purchase one of the largest amusement enterprises in Los Angeles, to be transformed into a Cantonese tea garden, oriental circus and menagerie. In the event that the deal is not closed, the Chinese propose to buy a tract of land near Ocean Park or Long Beach for such an enterprise. If the oriental resort is established on the sea coast it is asserted that $5,000,000 will be expended in installing Cantonese, Manchurian and Mongolian pagodas, "mystery temples" and other attractions. It is urged by the Los Angeles Chinese that the promoters of the enterprise also establish a Chinese exhibit building, to be built and stocked by popular subscription, for the purpose of instructing Americans and other foreigners as to the industries, products and possibilities of Chinese manufactures and resources.

NO MONEY REQUIRED TO COMMENCE TREATMENT. Many patients have no confidence in their doctor because he demands pay before a cure has been effected, and there are many who have been misinformed about their condition, or through unsuccessful treatment have become skeptical and think there is no cure for them. Piles, Fistula, Fissures and Hernia

DR. J. TILLOTSON, M.D. [Established 31 Years.]

Kept Time Saving, Most Natural, Most Safe. No Detention from Occupation, Family or Home. A Radical and Permanent Cure.

I invite you to come to my office. I will explain my treatment for Hernia, Piles, Fistula, Varicose Veins, Pelvic, Nervous, Blood, Kidney, Bladder and Rectal Diseases.

Piles, Fistula, Rectal Diseases.

These diseases are very common; most frequently found in persons of middle or advanced age; are exceedingly annoying, often very painful, and sometimes very dangerous, and frequently unfit one for pleasure or occupation. My treatment and successes are the result of years of experience; my treatment is kindly applied. I cure Piles without cutting. If I do not cure your Piles, Fistula and other Rectal Diseases, my treatment does not cost you anything. Gentleness in treatment comes from treating many cases. I guarantee a cure of Piles, Fistula, Ulcers and all curable Rectal Diseases.

Trusses Seldom Cure Rupture.

Discard for existing Hernias has cost many lives. The smallest hernias are the most dangerous, because of the increased liability to strangulation. I cure with perfect safety, and entail no suffering, and do not detain you from occupation.

WRITTEN GUARANTEE.

Dr. Tillotson's written guarantee means a cure or no pay for services. I guarantee to cure certain diseases or refund every dollar you have paid me. My services cost you nothing unless I cure your Varicose Veins, Hernia, Piles, Fissures, Fistula or any disease I guarantee to cure. My terms are reasonable and no more than you are willing and able to pay.

WHITE AND MORAN WILL BATTLE IN EARNEST.

Regular Family Affair to Be Staged at Vernon on Twentieth—Almost a Race War if One Can Take Owen's Defi Seriously—Wolgast-Rivers Return Match Leaves Only Lesser Lights for Willie Ritchie.

BY OWEN R. BIRD.

THE opening gun of the race war, which will culminate July 20 in the Vernon Arena, will be fired Sunday afternoon when Jack White and Owen Moran go through their first hard day's work. White will be seen in action at Doyle's, while Moran will work at Venice by the sea.

This fight should be a bitter one for several reasons. In the first place, Moran has a grudge on the whole White family, since his battle with brother Charlie in Syracuse, at which time he broke his hand and lost on a foul. White, on the other hand, says that he can beat any beef-eating English cockney that ever stepped into a ring, and Moran says that there never was a Jew who could make him step sideways.

White is thanking the gods that it is Moran and not Harry Thomas, the little featherweight flea. "If they will stand up and hit with me I can beat any of them," said Jack, "but when they make a footrace out of a fight, I can't see it at all."

Jack does not seem to take much stock in the reports that Moran is on the water wagon and is leading the simple life. "That guy don't know what simple means when it comes to white lights," said Jack the other day before leaving for the mountains, "but, take it from me, he is a big rube on brains, and de only place he is simple is in de dome."

Now, despite the fact that Jack White thinks Moran is no better than before, we are forced to admit that he looks about 100 per cent to the good after seven weeks away from old king booze. His skin is clear and his eyes have the old aggressive snap, which marked him as a great little man when he was beating the best in the ring at his weight. Then again, in the preliminary work that he has been pulling off on the Venice sands for the past few days, he has shown more real life than any other time in his long and varied career. After deciding to reform, Moran has made a clean sweep of the slate, and has cut out all the bad stuff and is living at home with his wife, eating the old home cooking, etc., with the result that he looks fat and sassy for fair.

IN THE HILLS.

At the present time White is in the mountains, for the first time in his life, and Fred Gilmore says that he is having the time of his career chasing the rabbits over hill and dale. You know, Fred is a bear at this stuff, and for the first few days had Jack groggy taking him over the route, but now Jack has learned how to make a moving-picture mount and can ride like the best Indian at Glendale. There is one thing that has nailed Jack's goat to date, and that is the trout. These wily members of the finny tribe require considerable time and trouble in the catching, and Jack would rather have them jump out on the bank and be killed, than wade through miles of rocks and water to get a string of forty or more, but he takes a flyer at the whole line.

But, now, to get down to the fight end of the game, Moran is ready to work hard, and says that his bad thumb has not hurt him for the past four weeks. Now that he has recovered from the sunburn, caught on the first day at Venice, when he tried to make a lifeguard out of himself in one sitting, he is ready to go right on with the boxing.

Harry Thomas and Tommy Maloney will be his mainstays in this line, and with Arry to box and Maloney to slug, Owen stands in a fair way to cover all the angles of the coming battle, as it will be with a clever hard-hitter, and, further, with a man who is as crafty as a cat.

Owen has a great chance if he will keep his head and not get wild, as he did in the battle with Ad Wolgast. If he goes crazy, however, he is likely to step into one of the hard ones, and Jack White can hurt.

Moran has had a great deal more experience in ring craft, but he does not always remember the same under fire, for when the roast beef of "Hold Hingland" begins to run red, Moran loves to wade in and fight and when one does this, it evens up matters, as both fighters are swatters from the word go.

TWELVE SAYS MORAN.

Owen says that he is going out and get "dee guy," in twelve rounds or quit the game, while Jack says that if his brother Charlie can make a "stew" of Moran it should be easy for him, as he considers himself the king pin of the family. In fact it peeved Jack a little to see Charlie doing so well, as he wants all the glory himself, so for this reason is going after Moran with the idea of getting him on his back, dead to the world, before the fight has gone half its way.

Even if White says Moran is simple in the dome only, it must be admitted that the little Englishman has been going along for thirteen years at a pretty good gait. It looks as though

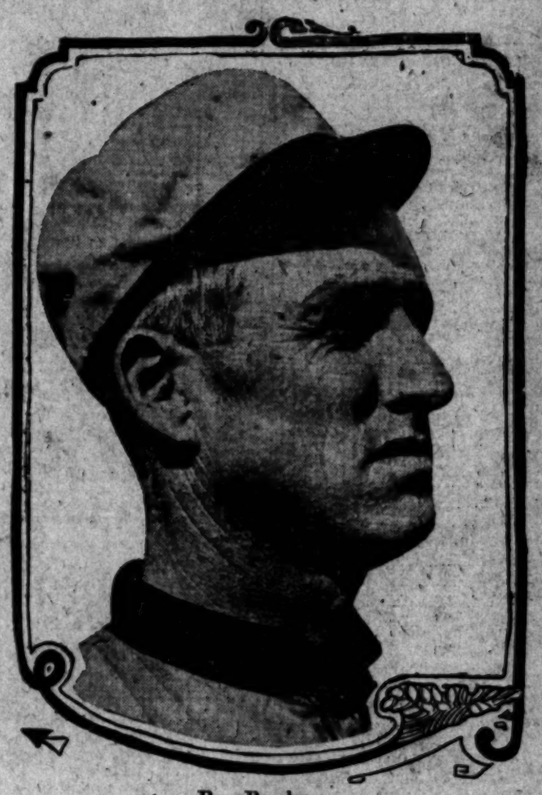
That Winning Run.



Roy Brashear,

Who slammed out a run in the last half of the ninth when there were two men out and the umpire had called two strikes on him. This tied the score for Vernon and the next man to bat won the game for Hap.

Dirty Stuff.

TOMMY RYAN SAYS FLYNN PRACTICED HITTING FOUL.

[BY FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 10.—[Special Dispatch.] Tommy Ryan, former middleweight champion, who passed through Chicago today, openly charged Jim Flynn planned to defeat Jack Johnson by the foulest kind of fighting, relying upon prejudice which exists against the negro champion to put through his scheme.

Ryan, who took charge of the Flynn camp under an arrangement with Jack Curley, and quit within a few days over money matters, brands Flynn as the foulest fighter and the biggest false alarm that ever battled for a championship.

"I saw him fight a second rater in Toronto the night Curley engaged me," says Ryan. "He looked strong and willing and I thought I might make a fighter out of him. But when I reported at Las Vegas and had not been in the camp forty-eight hours, I saw this was impossible. He refused to accept any of the fine points of the game. He disabled his trainers, but he disabled them the same way he planned to disable Johnson. All his preliminary work consisted of butting and shooting both hands low, as if for the stomach, but in reality for the groin.

"When I objected to this he told me he knew the only way to beat Johnson and he was training in that way. So my presence was unnecessary and moreover, I saw no money in sight, and I left the camp.

"Flynn is reputed to be game, but he is not. When he saw in the ninth round that he could not defeat Johnson even with his foul tactics, he became so extremely dirty that he really invited the State police to stop the battle."

Sidelights.

BITS OF THE PLAY THAT ATTRACTED THE FANS.

THE hitting of Litschi was real good to look at and the way he cracked out the singles was a surprise to some of the fans, who did not know he could hit. His final single in the last of the ninth was the thing that won the game for the Tigers.

Daley was put in to bat for Smith in the ninth and looked so dangerous to Carson that he was walked. This pass filled the bases, but Slagle proved to be a regular white hope for he fouled out.

Brashear and Howard were the infield stars, Howard handling eight chances without a skip and Brashear having six.

Bayless took Stinson's place in the ninth and got by with a hard single that put Brashear on third, whence he scored a moment later on Litschi's hit.

Another large crowd of fans saw the show yesterday and kept the excitement on the run all the time. It is this kind of stuff that makes ball players do their best.

Stinson was hit again by a pitched ball. Which shows that he is either too big to get out of the road or so big that the pitchers cannot help but hit him when they fling a ball up the aisle.

Heitmuller's neat catch of Carlisle's fly to right in the second inning with two out, cut off two runs for the Tigers, for there were men on second and third.

The two fence balls that Carson pitched to Heitmuller and Moore in the seventh will probably not be forgotten by him for some time, for they certainly did slam 'em. The one Heine hit never will be brought back, for it went too far over the left fence.

Tozer was warmed up in the eighth but was not used in the ninth. The Angels might have won if he had been stuck in.

Moore's fourteen outs and one assist shows that he was a very busy man all afternoon and all of these chances were handled in a high-class manner.

Some of the local fans were inclined to think the Tiger victory was a lucky one, but when you rap the ball hard five times in succession there is something else than luck mixed in. It's just baseball.

Nagle's call-down of the local fan on Tuesday seemed to have a good effect for few of the rabid kind made themselves known yesterday.

Some Hitting.

TIMELY SWATS BEAT ANGELS.

Tigers Grab Game by Batting Rally in Ninth.

Both Carson and Slagle Go Wrong at Finish.

Heitmuller Pleases Fans With Long Home Run.

BY GREY OLIVER.

Vernon, 4; Los Angeles, 3.

Talk about batting rallies.

The Tigers showed one yesterday when they sailed into Slagle in the ninth inning and beat the Angels by rapping the ball for four singles. No beating them when they had started that battery of swats.

The victory depended on that ninth inning, and the Tigers showed they had the class by hitting Slagle hard and often for four swats and a sacrifice fly. These made the two runs necessary.

To Litschi must again be given the credit for winning another game, for it was his swat to left center that won in the last of the ninth inning. He made no less than three hits and his final one in the ninth was the best one.

It was a fine little exhibition, for the fielding was spectacular at times, as was the pitching half way through.

Hap Hogan put in Carson to heave and he had about everything. Heitmuller was the only one to get a hit off him for six innings and Heine could not get by third base until he made his homer in the seventh.

Carlisle made the first run of the game in the first inning when he started off with Metzger's low throw to first of his grounder. Kane's out at first put Carlisle on second and Hoag's hit to right scored him.

This was all until the seventh, for the Angels, when with one out, Heitmuller hit a long home run over the left fence. Moore followed with a triple to the left center fence and was squeezed in for a score by Metzger's neat sacrifice toward first base.

The Vernons tied the score in their half of the eighth on Stinson's Texas league double back of third and Burrell's corking single to center.

Much to the surprise of the fans the Angels got another run in their half of the ninth on singles by Heitmuller, Moore and Metzger and Leber's sacrifice fly to center, but Carson cut them off when things looked very promising.

Going in to the ninth inning one run behind, Hap Hogan got out on the third base coaching line and began to give the war whoops. The best he could do with Carlisle was to make Walt strike out, but Kane slapped a single to right and stole second. Hoag's sacrifice fly put Kane on third and Brashear's timely single to center scored Kane.

Bayless, put in to bat for Stinson, hit to center, putting Brashear on third, and the game ended when Litschi knocked the ball to left for a single that scored Brash with the winning run.

Circus fielding stunts were as scarce as hen's teeth, and the only thing worthy of particular notice was Howard's assist to first of Kane's grounder in the third inning. It was a poor game for fielding, but a fine one to watch from a baseball standpoint, for the hitting was generally clean and the chances were handled easily.

There were no thrillers, except Heitmuller, who hit a homer and two singles in four times at bat.

"LOS ANGELES, July 10.

"Sporting Editor of The Times.

"Dear Sir: I have noted with some interest the remarks on 'big purses' on the first page of today's sporting section of The Times and can hardly agree with the writer's conclusions.

"Boxing is afflicted with the same disease that killed racing, namely, commercialized crookedness, and after the exhibition on the Fourth it would appear that the end is but a question of time.

"Wishing that I could see some reason for believing that I am wrong, I am

"Yours very truly, A. L."

• • •

Crookedness.

I don't know who my shrinking friend "A. L." is; but I do not expect anyone who spells racing "r-a-c-e-i-n-g" to agree with my profound and learned conclusions.

As to "commercialized crookedness"—why, I yaws—like that. It doesn't sound devilish enough to thrill me. It sounds too much like a muckraker making a speech about a trust. It may be as bad as he says, but if we must be wicked, for heaven's sake let us be entertaining in our wickedness. A. L. and his "commercialized crookedness" bore me. I prefer the "commercialized wickedness."

• • •

Rough Charges.

As to the "exhibition on the Fourth," I am as far from agreeing with A. L. as he is from agreeing with me.

As usual the decision of the referee was followed by a wild yell of "fixed fight" from all the short-enders. But I can't see where the fixed part came in. Unless the two were merely pretending to have been hurt. In which case they ought to abandon prize fighting and begin playing Ibsen. They have Alla Nazimova lashed to the mast for emotional acting.

• • •

Fixing Fights.

We should always judge men as we find them, and I have always found Ad Wolgast to be almost appalling truthful. I don't believe anything could induce him to commit an intentional foul or to fix a fight. I don't know Joe Rivers as well, but he has always seemed to me to be a square, honest, little fellow. And this will be about all for A. L.

• • •

Danger.

If Jimmie Coffroth comes down here to establish a fight club, it will be good night for fighting in California. Really, it's as serious as that.

Coffroth and all that, but the people down here will never stand for so much fighting. McCarey is, in my opinion, absolutely straining the limit now.

With two clubs, bidding against one another and about a million columns of publicity and a lot of talk about big purses, the fingernail of reform will proceed to flick the "game" off the map.

Fight promoters are always between the devil and the deep sea. Not enough publicity means empty houses and ruin; too much publicity means reform campaigns and ruin.

• • •

Olympiad for Los Angeles.

Milton Carlson, the Swedish Vice-Consul in Los Angeles, thinks that a strong effort should be made to secure the next Olympiad for Los Angeles.

But how is this strong effort to be made? There are two or three Los Angeles men on the American team and one young person was sent to Stockholm by a local newspaper because he had big muscles, or a good digestion, or something of the kind. They might all get together and ask the Swedes to please send the next show over here. But the method doesn't sound very effective, does it?

If Los Angeles wanted that Olympiad, she should have begun organizing the campaign two or three years ago.

The only Olympiad ever held in this country was a severe frost. The holding of another one would be a terrific undertaking.

• • •

A Great Series.

It is not likely there will be a more exciting series during the whole season than this one between the Angels and the Haps.

Both teams are going like a house on fire. Whereas every other team in the league is weaker this year than last, both Vernon and Los Angeles are stronger.

Hen Berry has the best team Los Angeles has shown for many years. His infield is simply corking. Berger is one of the greatest short-stops who ever played in this league. Hen's pitchers are also showing a wonderful streak.

HOW THEY STAND IN ALL EVENTS.

The points for the different countries in all events at the Olympic games are as follows:

Southern Championships.

RACQUETERS TO HAVE BIG TIME AT BEACH.

THE crack tennis players of Southern California will again be seen in action during the first week in August, when the championships of Southern California are to be held on the courts of Hotel Virginia, Long Beach.

The annual southern championship tourney brings out a larger number of players than any other tourney that is held in the South and for this reason it is necessary to have the playing continue six days.

The players will conjest for the championship titles in seven events: The men's singles, men's doubles, junior singles, junior doubles, women's singles, women's doubles and mixed doubles.

It is probable that several San Francisco players will enter the Long Beach tourney. Dr. Sumner Hardy and Carl Gardner, who played in the Pacific Coast doubles event at Beverly, are expected again to come south and Fottrell and Johnston, the crack doubles team, may play.

With Tom Bundy, Maurice McLoughlin, Hal Braly, Miss Mary Browne and Miss May Sutton in the East, interest will be detracted somewhat from the tourney, but, nevertheless, there will be plenty of high-class tennis. Ward Dawson, the singles champion, and Dawson and Sinsabaugh, the doubles title holders, are to defend their titles.

In the women's events, Miss Ina Young, Mrs. Burt Stickrod, Miss Lily Kingcade and many other good players are to compete.

Nat Browne is chairman of the committee that is managing the tournament.

LOCAL NET QUEENS BEAT EASTERNERS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LOUISVILLE, (Ky.) July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Playing in great form, the easterners and westerners here, participating in the bi-State tennis tournament, nearly eliminated all of the local players today. Miss Mary Brown of Los Angeles scored an easy victory over Mrs. G. F. Touchard, of New York, only two sets being required. The score was 6-3, 6-2. Miss May Sutton, the champion, defeated Miss Lillie Mason of Louisville in straight sets, 6-1, 6-0.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

PHILADELPHIA, July 10.—[Special Dispatch.] Overcoming a three-run lead, which the Athletics made by knocking Peters out of the box in the fourth inning, the Chicago Americans tied the score in the seventh and scored the necessary run in the ninth and won by 4 to 3.

Bill Lange, who succeeded Peters in the fifth, buried magnificent ball, holding the champions to three hits, besides fanning the side in the sixth.

Callahan, however, had to call on Ed Walsh in the ninth and when, with two on and two out, Lange showed signs of weakening, Walsh pitched one ball to Oldring, who tapped to Ed and the game was over. Score:

HARKNESS IS TOO STRONG FOR SEALS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The stellar twirling of "Speck" Harkness and a spectacular seventh inning rally gave the Portland Beavers a 3 to 0 victory over the Seals this afternoon, making the teams even for the series and likewise for the games played this season.

Fanning, the right-hander, with smoke galore, was introduced to the Elk's week crowd of 5000, and until the fatal seventh the twirling advantage was his. During the first six innings the hit column showed six against both Fanning and Harkness, but while Fanning was traveling along at an easy clip only the most sensational twirling saved Harkness from early scoring.

But in the seventh the cheering of the fans for the regulation rally seemed to unman the Seal moundman and four healthy bingles encompassed his downfall.

Gus Fisher, the first man up, singled sharply to center on the first pitched ball. Butler sacrificed to second and "Roaring Bill" Rapps, whose roaring was not confined exclusively to the voice, drove the ball over Mundorff's head in right center. "Mundy" toyed with the ball a few moments and Rapps went to third, Fisher scoring. Harkness fanned for the second out, but Doane rewarded his admirers by dropping the ball into short left, scoring Rapps. Doane stole second and scored when Lindsay lined out his fourth hit of the game, a drive between first and second, on a slow ball, meant to be deceptive.

In the sixth and the ninth innings the Seals made bids for victory. In the first-named period three men reached the paths but two were gone and "Speck" struck out Corhan.

In the ninth the Seal hopes took on a bullish appearance when Corhan beat out a hard grounder to Butler and Gedeon walked after Wuffli had fanned. But Williams, who was shoved in to bat for Fanning, struck out and Mundorff was unequal to his oft-repeated task of lifting the ball over the fence.

SENATORS PLAY POORLY DO NOT CARE TO WIN.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 10.—[Special Dispatch.] It would have been difficult indeed to frame up a more one-sided and less-interesting game than they staged this afternoon on the Valencia street lot. Had there been a single redeeming feature, the fans might not have been quite so hostile. But there were none save the possible pitching of Gregory, but the poor Senators were so absolutely helpless and hopeless that the fans were loath to heap any praise on the Oakland slabster.

Sacramento may as well be counted out of the pennant race, unless it can take some sort of a brace and give the fans the kind of ball which their good money calls for. The up-country aggregation never can expect to prosper when it comes through with such exhibitions as that of today.

Oakland will win the entire series unless something unforeseen happens. Pitcher Williams, late of Honolulu, was soft and easy for the Oakland batsmen and the men who were supposed to support him in the infield and the outfield forsook him in his hour of need. They did not seem to care what happened to them, although Oakland would have won handily enough even if Williams had received the proper kind of backing up. He did not toss anything that did not appeal to the appetites of the Trans-Bay sluggers.

Sacramento recorded the first tally in the first inning, but this is as far as it got. Shinn put a drive to the right field fence and was advanced on Heister's infield out, after which O'Rourke bingled safely to center. Some of the fans looked for this sort of work to be continued in the innings to follow, but they were doomed to disappointment.

Oakland quickly tied it up, after Patterson had been retired. Leard walked and was boosted on Hoffman's out and Coy sent him home by driving the ball into the center lot for a long single. Sharpe then led with a safe drive down to first. Mitze walked and Gregory singled to center field, filling all the cushions. Patterson polished it off by unloading a two-sacker to the center garden. Sharpe and Mitze arrived and the game was transformed into a joke.

There was a lull till the fourth when the Oaks vented more fury upon their unfortunate opponents, adding another pair. Gregory singled to center for the second time and Patterson singled past first. Leard cut loose with a drive out to left. The pill rolled past Lewis and made its way to the fence while Gregory and Patterson made their way to the plate.

The fifth was nearly as bad. Heitling got on by singling to right and Cook bunted the ball to Williams. He heaved to Miller who booted and both men advanced a station. Sharpe registered them with a drive to right and was bunted along by Mitze.

The fans saw visions of a record-breaking flock of Oakland runs in this spasm, but for once, the hearts of the Trans-Bay boys were touched and they laid off their brutal work. Another Oakland tally, unearned, came through in the sixth and then they called a halt.

TO TALK ON FISH AND GAME PROTECTION.

R. D. Duke, the legal adviser of the Fish and Game Commission, and a man who has taken great interest in stocking our streams with fish and our mountains with game, will speak in Assembly Hall, third floor, Chamber of Commerce building, on the objects of the fish and game protective associations, what the commission expects to accomplish for the people in re-stocking and re-habilitating our streams, and for fish and game protection generally, and legislation pertaining thereto.

Mr. Duke is a pleasing, fluent talker, thoroughly conversant with his subject and with a positive desire to remedy the present laws and conditions.

It is the wish of the commission that every member of the association as well as the general public will attend this meeting.

JOHNSON MUST FIGHT A NEGRO.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 10.—[Special Dispatch.] Jack Johnson was notified today by Manager Billy Gibson of the Madison Square Athletic Club, New York's biggest fighting organization, that he must either meet Sam Langford or Joe Jeanette in New York, or give up hope of appearing in Gotham.

The New York Boxing Commission has a rule which prevents colored men meeting whites. This rule is not evoked in the matter of the lesser lights, but Gibson has notified Johnson that he will insist upon its strict enforcement in the event of Johnson making a match in New York with Palzer or any of the white hopes. Gibson declares there is no white man who can last three rounds with Johnson if the latter extends himself, and rather than take a chance of the negro champion hippodroming, he will have him barred altogether unless he meets men who can really give him a good argument.

MURPHY OUT OF IT. DONE FOR SEASON.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

PHILADELPHIA, July 10.—[Special Dispatch.] The members of Connie Mack's world champion Athletics are all upset over the announcement just made by Manager Mack that Dan Murphy, captain and one of the heaviest hitters in the club, will not be able to play again this season, owing to a bad case of water on the knee. Murphy received this unfortunate injury by sliding into the plate in a game in Chicago on June 9.

Mack, upon the advice of a physician, has told him not to play again this year.

NO MORE TRUST FOR OVERALL.

"Me go back into organized baseball?" queried Boomer Overall, the Chicago pitcher in answer to a question yesterday.

"Well, I guess not, for I don't like it. I would like to be back with the Cubs to help Frank Chance, if I could, but not Murphy. I couldn't join the Vernon team for the good reason that they would not let me and they means Chicago, for I am on the Chicago reserve list.

"I don't know how much it would cost me to get back, but I suppose about $800. I think that's what they charged Kling when they took him back."

FINE RECORD KILLED BY WILD THROWS.

"Remember the time of the semi-professional tournament in this State sixteen years ago?" asked Overall yesterday. "Well, I'll never forget one experience I had that year.

"Our team was pitching against the Alameda Alerts and I was so good that day that I struck out twenty-one men, but they beat us 11 to 1. This happened because ev-ery time some of my ... the ball they would throw ... qrer, under or around the ... man and the runners ... around to the plate."

ALCO
Motor Trucks

5 P. M., or 11 P. M.—Which?

Philadelphia folks appreciate having their goods delivered to their homes on time.

Some of them get their day's purchases anywhere from 9 P.M. to 11 P.M.—the result of tired horses; overworked men; too much territory to cover. It goes back for the most part to horse delivery.

Others get their purchases before dinner. The goods usually arrive by motor truck, driven by an alert enthusiastic young man—a good living testimonial to the progressiveness of a business house.

The reason these families get their goods on time is because the motor truck covers an area of territory five times that of the horse vehicle; goes over ground in one-third the time and finally because motor delivery is scientific delivery.

Alco motor trucks hold three non-stop records, which classify the Alco as America's greatest endurance motor vehicle. They deliver the goods safely on time.

The business man who believes in service to his customers must be wise enough to look into the facts in the case of the Alco truck.

A letter or a 'phone call will bring an Alco expert to your place of business.

ENGLAND WINS MOST EXCITING RACE OF DAY.

Event Regarded as Sure Thing for Yankee Athletes Captured by Blooming Britisher Who Faints at Finish and Makes World's Record—Americans Score Plenty of Victories, However.

BY JAMES H. RANDALL.

(BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND WIRELESS FROM CHICAGO TO THE TIMES WITH SCORES, BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.)

STOCKHOLM, July 10.—To the surprise of everybody, the American team suffered defeat today in the events at least one of which, to represent the final started before the meet here, was believed to be just about as won—the 5000 and 1500-meter runs went not to the Stars and Stripes, but the first to the Finnish flag and second to England.

Not that every American kicked himself in putting it mildly. It was hard to lose after such a brilliant show of victory. Both races were close, and the Americans were forced to admit that victory went to the best man.

EXCITING RACES.

Great excitement hung upon the pit-pat footbeats on the cinder track, intensely than when the long distance men started off under the pride of favorite in the betting. It was the first race of the division ever run at an Olympic entertainment, and, while the mighty forces of the speedy Finn, Kolehmainen, was recognized, the Americans had done such wonders and the men who had qualified had such speed and stamina, that most expected was that the honors would be split with Finland or possibly France.

The actual outcome was that not a point of this race went to our team. The Finlander's speed was simply incredible. It seems almost incredible, but he averaged a mile in 4m., 10s., and covered the three miles and 188 yards in 14m., 36 1-5s. J. Brouin of France was second, and E. W. Hutton, the Englishman, third.

The Finns had better luck in the 1500-meter run, but even this was a sore disappointment.

Although the running was desperate, the time of the winner being 3m., 56s., which is 6 3-5 seconds better than the world's record, made by Shepperd, at London, in 1908.

FAINTS AT FINISH.

J. E. Jackson of England won his laurels by sheer gameness, with Kiviat and Taber of the United States trailing behind him at the finish.

Jackson sank to the track unconscious as he slowed down and was carried off the track in a dazed state. The judges could not decide whether Taber or Kiviat was entitled to the second place, when a photograph, taken automatically in connection with the electric timing device, was produced.

In examining the photograph negative the judges found Kiviat was a trifle ahead of Taber.

Jackson, the Frenchman, had the lead at the start. He held it for two laps, with John Paul Jones, the American, only a stride or two behind. Right behind Jones was Kiviat, the Irish-American pride and hope. The American slipped ahead with apparent ease at the end of the second lap, and the cheering for the Stars and Stripes began. Not so soon, for Jackson, who had been coming through the field unnoticed, slipped out of the pack and closed up on Jones and Kiviat. The Americans sprinted to stand him off, but Jones showed weariness and Kiviat, so that the crowd behind encouraged him up.

Kiviat seemed to be running on his nerve and was wavering, but was game. At the end of the very last lap Kiviat shot swiftly forward and almost passed the mark so closely that only the lens of the camera could tell between them.

Victory did not remain long with the Europeans. When it came to putting the sixteen-pound shot, the American team put it all over the ring. Ralph Rose of California was destined to win this event for the Stars and Stripes. Raising the shot in his mighty mitt he put it fifteen meters and twenty-five centimeters—under his world's record made in this country, but surpassing other marks until Patrick J. McDonald, a New York policeman, sent the shot fifteen meters, thirty-four centimeters, and that on a moisty morning. L. A. Whitney of Boston was credited with an excellent mark.

The triple win cheered the American Olympic fans, also the team. The cheering increased when Duke Kahanamoku, of Hawaii, swam away from Cavill, the Australian, in the 100 meters semi-finals, winning in 1m. 2 4-5s.

Sweden won third honors for the day in the 10,000 meters team.

Finland's going is still favorable, with Martin still in the lead and visions of further victories reigning supreme.

BATTLE FOR PLACE.

The finish of the 3000 meters race will rank after the 800 meters race in which, on Monday, James E. Meredith made the record time of 1m., 51 2-10s, as the greatest race thus far in the Olympic games. It was a wonderful struggle between J. Bouin, France, and H. Kolehmainen, Finland.

E. W. Hutson, England, who won third place, passed George V. Bonhag, N.A.A.C., at the last moment and crossed the tape a foot ahead of the American. The Finn and Frenchman were five yards ahead of the field on the fourth lap, fifty yards on the sixth lap, 110 yards on the ninth lap, 150 yards on the tenth lap, and finished 160 yards ahead.

The Finn led for seven laps, but the Frenchman was a yard ahead on the twelfth lap, when the Finn spurted on the home stretch and crossed the tape a yard in front of the Frenchman, who threw up his hands as if saying "I'm done."

During the first mile Bonhag took third place. At the end of the fourth lap the order was Bonhag, Scott, South Patterson Y.M.C.A., De Coteau, Canada. At the eighth lap, M. Karlsson, Sweden, passed Bonhag but was unable to stay and soon fell behind. On the ninth lap, Tel S. Borne, Cornell, was leading the field with Karlsson and Bonhag side by side, just behind him, and Hutson, the Englishman, next. At the opening of the tenth lap, the order was Bonhag, Karlsson, Scott, Berna and Hutson.

The American hopes of winning second place ran high, although the race belonged to any of the five runners.

Bonhag and Hutson made a fine effort in the last fifty yards, but the Englishman passed them ten yards from the finish, only a foot or two ahead, with Karlsson, Berna and Scott close behind.

POLE VAULT PRELIMS.

In the pole vault trials the following Americans qualified at 365 centimeters (twelve feet) for the finals tomorrow:

Frank T. Nelson, Yale University; Frank D. Murphy, University of Illinois; Harry E. Babcock, Columbia University; Mark S. Wright, Dartmouth; G. B. Dukes, New York A. C.; S. H. Beliah, Multnomah A. C., Portland; Frank J. Coyle, University of Chicago, and W. M. Fritz, Cornell University.

SHOT PUT SURPRISE.

The American delegation considered it had propriety rights in the weight putting. The result, although the points went to the representatives of the United States, furnished somewhat of a surprise.

Ralph Rose improved on his Olympic record in his first throw, but was outdone by P. J. McDonald in his third throw.

There were four Americans in the field of twenty-one competitors and not one of the seventeen came within sight of them except the brawny Finn, Knicklander, who put thirteen meters thirty-six centimeters. L. A. Whitney, Boston A.A., beat this by putting thirteen meters ninety-three centimeters. George W. Philbrook, Notre Dame University, was placed fifth. The only British competitor was far behind.

The victory of the American team was such a foregone conclusion that the performance had no interest except that which amounted to expectation of the record being broken. A great cheer went up when the three American flags flew from the flagstaff at the end of the Stadium.

There is considerable dissatisfaction here over the timing of the foot races which is done by an electrical apparatus. Several veteran English sportsmen who timed Drew in a trial heat of the 100 meters are certain he made a world's record by a fifth of a second.

The final heat of the 100-meter swimming was won by the Hawaiian, "Duke" Kahanamoku. Healy of Australia was second and Kenneth Huggah, Chicago A.A., third. Time, 1 minute, 2 2-5 seconds. This is one second slower than the world's record established by the winner in his previous heats. Bretting, Germany; Longworth, Australia, and Raume, Germany, competed.

The Hawaiian, who has become one of the most popular characters at the Olympic, had a distinguished assembly to witness his triumph. The royal box was crowded, the party including the King, Queen, the Crown Prince and the Crown Princess.

HAWAIIAN WINS.

When the pistol sounded the six bodies hit the water with one splash. The Hawaiian was soon ahead and half way down the tank, turned to survey the field. His nearest rival was ten feet behind. Kahanamoku let up after that and seemed to swim leisurely. The others extending them-

WHITE-MORAN FIGHT.

Moran had about five good fights left in his system and his manager, Jimmy Johnson, is planning a great campaign for these same five.

"After we get this White party," says Jimmy, "I want Moran to get a crack at Ritchie or Rivers and then we will want to see Ad Wolgast." Moran thinks he knows how to reach the champion now that he has been through the mill, but then, that is what they all say and the only person in the game who has a right to yell for an even break, is Willie Ritchie, for Willie was there in four rounds and hit the "kink" at will, almost.

Any way figured, this mill on the twentieth should be a short one, as with all the personal elements entering into the battle equation, mixed with the slugging type of the fighters and also the cleverness, marks some one for a sudden dumping off of this sphere of local activities quick. Again, both men have their eyes on higher game and consider each other as mere stepping stones, so it will be interesting to see who will get his foot the highest.

RITCHIE MUST KILL A FEW.

Now that Wolgast and Rivers are practically signed up for Labor Day, it begins to look as though our friend, Ritchie, would have to kill a few of the lesser lights until after the return match. McCarey is going to bring Mandot, K. O. Brown and several others this way and will let Willie have a chance at one of them and then let the winner go under the wire with the winner of the Wolgast-Rivers match. There is another angle, however, and maybe Ritchie will be given a chance with the winner of the Moran-White match, that is, if both the latter named knights of the circle still want to meet lightweights.

It is a cinch that any of these fighters will have an eager young man, if Ritchie gets into the ring with them. The San Francisco boy is just dying to get a crack at the title and says that he will fight any man in the world, so long as the champion is at the end of the lane.

HOW ABOUT NEXT TIME?

Joe Rivers is going on the stage for a few weeks, and then will break with the footlight bunch about the twenty-fifth of August and start work for the return match with Wolgast.

Joe says that he learned a lot in this last fight, and when we come to think of it, it was rather tough to send him in with the champion on the first time out, and he is therefore a lucky and a wonderful little fighter to come off as he did, on the short end of a very questionable decision.

Did you ever stop to think what it would mean to beat a man like Ad Wolgast? He has the record and the name of being the greatest lightweight in the history of the ring, and for a new boy to go out and make him worry, is some little game at that.

Of course Wolgast will improve for the coming fight. He admits himself that he was not right for the last battle, having to take one day of work and then one day of rest, so unless Rivers has learned a lot and then improved also, the going will be a little harder than it was on the Fourth.

AUSTIN GETS BELT.

Jimmy Austin is going to be the possessor of a real belt, given by "Our Own Uncle Tom" for being the best 105-pound lad in this end of the country. Jimmy will have one provision to contend with in owning this trophy and that is, he will have to defend it against all the boys that can make the weight. Jimmy is all swelled up over the prospect, and says that all will have to walk over his dead body to get into the safety vault where he is going to keep the belt. Tom did not know he was going to give the belt until he saw the story, but made good.

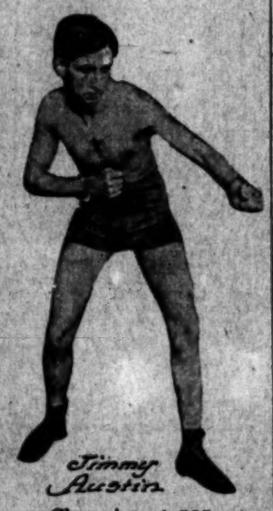
WHERE IS CHICO?

Speaking of the little fellow, we wonder what has become of Battling Chico, who was going to be our next bantam weight champion along with Joe Rivers as the lightweight leader. Chico has been out of a job for some time and it would be a nice little thing to see him work again. Of course we cannot expect Danny Webster to come out into the open and fight him, as Levy and Laga are at sword points and would rather die than make terms, as if ever the boys got together, somebody would have to give in. Levy seems to have the whip hand here. He has Rivers and Chico, while Laga has only Webster and a good job, so if Webster wants to fight Chico it looks as though he would have to make the weight, but then he does not have to fight, you know.

JOE RIVERS SPREADING.

Not only will Jose Rivira show his skill on the Olympic stage, but at the close of each work-out will make a nice little speech just to show the public that he is a versatile young man. This is a new role for the lightweight contender and when the subject was brought up, Joe said, "All right, I will make up the speech myself," and now Levy is guessing what he is going to say on the first time out as a public speaker. Let us hope he don't take up the suffrage movement.

Splinter-Weight.



Champion at 105.

Uncle Tom McCarey is thinking seriously of creating a new championship for Jimmy Austin, with a weight limit at 105 pounds. A handsome belt will be given and boys of that weight all over the world will be invited to compete for it.

It is rumored that Martin Beck is contemplating leaving vaudeville altogether. The local Orpheum has heard nothing of this report, and rather discredits it.

If he does leave vaudeville, Mr. Beck will remove, in himself, the biggest figure that western variety has ever known.

This report does not credit Mr. Beck with disposing of his interests in vaudeville circuits, but avers that he will leave the management of the Orpheum chain on September 1, and, while holding his Orpheum property merely as property, will himself enter the field of legitimate drama, or engage in some other business.

Reasons which Mr. Beck may have for backing out of his great institution are that its recent combination with the United Booking Offices leave the Orpheum general manager rather in the position of super-janitor, that he has already accumulated a fortune of more than $2,000,000, that he has an income of $150,000 annually, that he has often said he would like to make his home in Europe, and that the field of the "big play" has long tempted him with siren call.

Charles E. Bray is declared to be in the line of succession.

Local readers may not consider this item at its true value, but if the rumor is based upon fact, then every Orpheum patron is interested, for the Orpheum, superb circuit that it now is, was made exactly what it is, and has been maintained at its standard, by Martin Beck, and by no other.

Would Beck's successor have the same jealous eye for the supremacy of the West in all things vaudevillian? That remains to be seen.

Are old fiddles better than new?

In a recent contest in Paris, held in a darkened room, where expert musicians judged instruments upon their playing, the best marks were won—first, by a Belgian violin, 1912; second, a French violin, 1911; and third, a genuine Strad, worth $15,000.

The old story about not being able to price the cigar unless you can see the smoke.

David Belasco announces that in the future he will throw all play-manuscripts submitted to him into the waste-basket, unopened.

"Why?" asked an inquisitive would-be dramatist.

"Because," returned the very wise David, "I would, either willfully or unwittingly, steal any good idea you might have. At least, be sure that every good idea I might have would be loudly proclaimed in court by some green fellows, if I read any of your plays, and I suppose you would produce manuscripts to prove it."

Experience has certainly taught this shrewd one.

Laura Burt and her husband—Henry Stanford, now at the Burbank—have leased their Staten Island summer home, Stanford Lodge, to ex-Senator Casey of South Dakota.

With the lease went "Smarleyow," an excessively intelligent collie.

Lillian Albertsen has just recovered from another month in a hospital.

She evidently made a hit with the nurses, as she has played many return engagements. However, she has emerged in safety from all of them.

Paul Armstrong has purchased the Gideon & Daly stock farm at Holmdel, N. J., thereby acquiring a number of the famous Homer Davenport Arabian horses. So much for the profits of "Underworld" and "Deep Purple."

Henri Bernstein is rapidly acquiring a reputation as the first dandy of Paris.

When not writing drama of the strenuous type he is engaged in setting the fashions. He is said to give almost-room to 147 pairs of trousers, all of this year's make.

Charles Frohman has made arrangements with Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, J. M. Barrie and George Bernard Shaw, whereby these three playwrights are each to contribute a new one-act play, all to be presented at the Duke of York's theater, London, in September. The dramatists are to select their own casts and supervise their own rehearsals. This is an experiment on the public. If it does, it will probably be repeated in New York.

Mabel Hite, at the point of death from peritonitis two or three weeks ago, has quite recovered, is at her home in New York, and her husband, Mike Donlon, has rejoined the Pittsburgh ball team.

Regina Vicarino, who triumphed at the Auditorium with Bevani's company two seasons ago, is to be featured at Hammerstein's London Opera-house.

Joe Vion, here last winter with "Alma," will bring Tom Lewis to the Coast in "The Yankee Prince" this year, having secured the play from Cohan & Harris.

Raymond Hitchcock, who never smoked before, is now killing himself.

A New York firm unloaded on him 5000 lettuce perfectos bearing his name, and the comedian is endeavoring to learn or die. Friends think he is dying. Those to windward are also in a serious condition.

Marion Russell has returned to New York, from Los Angeles, bearing a Southern California play called "Her Letter." It will, allegedly, be produced in the metropolis this autumn.

Weber and Fields seem to have gone salary-mad. They have made offers, so far unaccepted, to both Lillian Nordica and Fritzi Scheff, for their music-hall. The offer to Nordica was for $5000 each week, but the veteran cantatrice replied that at any time she chose to engage in music-hall work she would have to give Lee Shubert first call on her services, by virtue of a previous promise.

"Variety" has a New Orleans correspondent of saturnine humor.

"The spotlight is serving a double purpose at the Dauphine," says he, "where 'Woman Against Woman' is being played. It is now used not only to illuminate the actors but to locate the audience."

Alexander Pantages has effected an entrance into Cincinnati. The Coast-managers are certainly invading the East.

The biggest new comic opera production in Paris is based upon a story of a telephone exchange and its girl operators.

Max Rheinhardt, the creator of "Sumurun" and "The Miracle," is to give his stupendous scenic ideas to a Martin Harvey production of "Hamlet" in London next spring.

Wilton Lackaye has achieved the summit of human ambition. A Pullman car has been named after him.

Casimir Perier, husband of Mme. Simone, returning to Paris, after a visit to New York, gave out an interview in which he said there were some very good American actors, notably the Irish players.

Robert Hichens writes that he will return to America this fall to be present at the Chicago premier of "The Garden of Allah" on Labor Day. He will also visit Yellowstone Park and the Pacific Coast.

Watch out for another wave of G.B.S. popularity. Robert Loraine is coming over at the head of a star company in the most brilliant of all Shaw's comedies, "Man and Superman," two new Shaw plays are announced for production, and Arnold Daly's storehouse-man is shaking the camphor out of the "You Never Can Tell" scenery.

George R. Hodgson, the star Canadian swimmer, captured the final of the 1500-meter swimming, free style. J. O. Hatfield of England was second and Hardwick of Australia third. In winning this event Hodgson broke three records. He covered 1000 meters in 14m. 37s. and the 1500 meters in 22m. flat. This beats Taylor's Olympic record made at London in 1908 by two minutes and thirty-three seconds. Hodgson continued, completing the mile in 23m. 34 3/5s.

The Germans, Bathe, Luetzow and Malisch, were first, second and third in the final of the 200-meter swim, breast stroke. Bathe covered the course in 3m. 14-5s.

FACTS, FEATURES AND FANCIES FOR WOMEN AND MEN BY OLIVE GRAY

DAILY BEAUTY HINT: "I wonder," asks one of my kind correspondents, "if lemon is squeezed into the last rinsing water all the stickiness caused by the hard water will be soft and lustrous."

When I met Elizabeth on Broadway yesterday, she was breathless in her eagerness to relate her latest experience.

"We were talking," said she, "about what an insignificant thing a dollar was nowadays and how little it would buy. Just to be contrary and argumentative, more than for any other reason, I declared that a dollar would buy many things, if you gave the matter enough care and really 'shopped.' So it was agreed that I should start out this morning and see for a fact what a dollar would buy on Broadway."

This sounded promising and I assumed the listening attitude.

"You needn't think that you can just stand there and take in all I have to tell," said she, "come into that adorable little tea-place—you know it, on the mezzanine, where the furniture is all wicker—"

"Oh, yes, I know," I replied and quickly assented, for it is a delightful place for a quiet chat.

When we were coolly announced with our favorite refreshment before us she began.

What First Choice?

"I made up my mind that I would be thorough and would first make the rounds and see what was possible and then I would return and buy the article which I thought the best value for the dollar, which I was to expend.

"The first place which I visited was a store which has at all times a large stock of pretty and well-made blouses—I think the best stock in town—guess it!"

I guessed and then guessed again and finally she said I had hit it right.

"Well, I determined to see what kind of a blouse I could get there for a dollar. You would never believe unless you have seen them, what a variety there was and how excellent was the quality. I wouldn't be ashamed to wear one of those blouses anywhere. Not even with the new tailored suit that —— made for me."

Or One of These.

"Next my fancy dwelt upon a very pretty white fabric handbag; for you know one must really have at least one of those bags to carry with one's summer frocks; and truly the only trouble would be to choose from among them, if one were to spend one's dollar thus."

Of Leather, Too.

"I also discovered," proceeded Elizabeth, "some very pretty and substantial bags of leather, in exchange for one of those big round silver pieces.

"While I do not think the bags of white leather quite so dainty as those of fabric, for summer use, still they are better than those of the darker kinds, which always seem to leave a stain when coming in contact with summer garments."

Tempted By.

"I was turned aside from the purely practical, in deciding how to expend the dollar, when I noticed some extremely handsome vases of crystal, which would serve to show the beauty of a long-stemmed rose, and to almost enhance the flower, if such a thing were possible," said my friend, in continuance of her "dollar quest."

Lingerie Daintiness.

"You know there never was a girl of any taste whatever, who was not fond of pretty and dainty underwear, and I next turned my attention to the question of what possibilities there were in this line which would come within the compass of that unsatisfactorily distending piece of money.

"I found nightgowns, pretty enough to take their place in the trousseaux of a bride—truly I did! And as for combinations and Princess slips—why I would be well satisfied with those purchasable for that amount. The

PROPOSED LARCENY

WE ARE now definitely advised by the leaders of the so-called Progressive party in California that it is proposed to use the machinery of the law, the hold-over senators, the newly-nominated Senators and Assemblymen, and the Congressional nominees; these under the new law to constitute the next State convention; for the purpose of naming electors announced in advance to support the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt for President, and, if elected, to vote for him as such.

Before proceeding to act in the face of this assumption, it is necessary to notice a few things. First, it may be suggested, and will not be denied, that the obligation of an elector to support the nominee of the party under whose designation and standard such elector may be chosen is purely a moral obligation. Under the Constitution of the United States, a Presidential elector has the unrestrained right to vote for any eligible citizen for whom he may desire to cast his vote, for President of the United States. However, very early after the adoption of the Constitution, definite political parties developed, and it became the settled rule of action that electors representing each of the political parties should be nominated and when elected, that they should cast their votes for the nominee of that party. So clear has been this moral obligation that at no time since it was established has any elector ever cast his vote other than for the nominee of the party under whose designation he was elected.

Discrete Daintiness.

"You know there never was a girl of any taste whatever, who was not fond of pretty and dainty underwear, and I next turned my attention to the question of what possibilities there were in this line which would come within the compass of that constantly distending piece of money.

"I found nightgowns, pretty enough to take their place in the trousseaus of a bride—truly I did! And as for combinations and Princess slips—why I would be well satisfied with those purchasable for that amount. The materials were good and the trimmings, instead of being coarse and ugly as the trimmings upon inexpensive garments were at one time, were of good quality and dainty patterns."

Or These.

"Just as a detour into a by-way, as I might say," continued the exponent of the "dollar's worth," "I stopped to look at a charming little set of silver deposit on glass, which I thought would make an excellent gift for any friend who kept house or intended to do so." "For the wish chest?" I suggested. "Quite so."

Cut It in Two.

"By the time I got that far," Elizabeth continued, "I began to think that a dollar could buy almost anything and I began to notice how many articles were purchasable for half that amount."

She thought I would protest, but I only waited.

"I mean really good articles."

"For instance?" said I invitingly.

"At an oriental store, where they are holding a clearance sale—you know the place—I saw silk crepe bags for evening use, beautiful little creations they were, all hand-embroidered, for—now hold your breath—for less than half of that dollar. My, the crowd that was in that shop. Do you know, I believe the people in Los Angeles actually smell a bargain."

"Yes, through our advertising columns," I hastened to say.

Yoke Slips.

"One article which I thought particularly practical," continued Elizabeth, "and it was only half a dollar, too—was a 'yoke slip,' as I would call it for lack of a more authentic name. It was a yoke and collar of fine net and had a heavier material extending nearly to the waist line and buttoning in the back, to hold the garment in place. You know how the separate yoke is determined to slip up and all around, and this was obviated."

I verily believe my friend would have continued for hours, telling me the possibilities of the half dollar and the unlimited scope of the dollar, in Broadway shopping, had I not reminded her incidentally and politely of course, that it would take almost as much time to select the article from the embarassment of riches as it had taken to discover them.

Improvement Sale.

As I hurried along, after our long and interesting conference, my attention was attracted by a large placard to the effect that one of the Broadway stores which always had many bargains is holding an "improvement sale," and I could see that the meaning which was meant to be conveyed is that the store is being enlarged. Knowing that bargains are so rife there, I made up my mind to explore another day, and see for myself what further reductions were possible.

Fashion's Frillery.

Although patent leather leads in the making of evening slippers, suede follows a close second, and glace kid in colors to match the costume are very smart.

Buckles have almost entirely supplanted the pump bow. All the evening slippers show a buckle of some kind, but those set with brilliants are especially chic.

Jackets that contrast with the costume are in much favor, especially in sporting costumes. A velvet jacket may be worn with a cloth costume, and vice versa.

The old-fashioned silk purses of our grandmother's time are back again. Some are knitted and some beaded, and always they close with two small rings.

The very latest style in bathing dresses, if you please, have narrow ruffles of silk around the bottom of the skirt and also for a finish to the short elbow-length sleeves.

PROPOSED LARCENY OF CALIFORNIA.

BY HON. FRANK H. SHORT,

President of the Fresno County Taft Club.

WE ARE now definitely advised by the leaders of the so-called Progressive party in California that it is proposed to use the machinery of the law, the hold-over Senators, the newly-nominated Senators and Assemblymen, and the Congressional nominees; these under the new law to constitute the next State convention; for the purpose of naming electors announced in advance to support the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt for President, and, if elected, to vote for him as such.

Before proceeding to act in the face of this assumption, it is necessary to notice a few things. First, it may be suggested, and will not be denied, that the obligation of an elector to support the nominee of the party under whose designation and standard such elector may be chosen is purely a moral obligation. Under the Constitution of the United States, a Presidential elector has the unrestrained right to vote for any eligible citizen for whom he may desire to cast his vote, for President of the United States. However, very early after the adoption of the Constitution, certain political parties developed, and it became the settled rule of action that electors representing each of the political parties should be nominated and when elected, that they should cast their votes for the nominee of that party. So clear has been the moral obligation that at no time since it was established has any elector ever cast his vote other than for the nominee of the party under whose designation he was elected.

It is now assumed that a course of action, unchanged for more than a hundred years, shall be openly and flagrantly violated. It seems to be contended that under the circumstances the present law, which provides that the hold-over Senators, the nominees for the Senate, and the Assembly, and the nominees for Congress, shall act as the convention representing the party decides, is a grievous mistake. It must be assumed that it was adopted with the idea and understanding on the part of the people who now propose to misuse it, that the work of such a convention was necessarily practically perfunctory. In other words, they were to meet to endorse a platform already adopted by the respective national conventions, and to name electors having no discretion in morals, other than to vote for the candidate or nominee already named. Under any other assumption, the law is indefensible. The people of the State, belonging to any one political party, have the natural right to choose any citizen of the State they may desire as a delegate to the convention representing the party policies, to adopt a platform, and name candidates. Under this law, all citizens of the State, other than those who are either hold-over Senators or candidates for the Senate or Assembly, or for Congress, are legislated out of the right to be candidates for or delegates to the State convention at all, and the people are deprived of the right to choose independently the delegates they desire to represent them in a State convention.

Even this is not the worst feature of the law, because Senators, Assemblymen and Congressmen should be chosen with a view to their fitness to fill their respective offices, and not at all with any consideration as to whether they favor one candidate or another, for President or for other offices, or whether they have one view or another upon a purely national question.

The whole thing is an abortion and an anomaly, and is but one illustration of which we shall have many, of the folly of passing innumerable laws without adequate, and sometimes almost without any, consideration.

The people of the State not only did not know that this change was proposed, but I think actually at least 90 per cent. of them did not know it had occurred until within the last few weeks. Nevertheless, we are told that the people rule! We suppose that is true, even when they don't know it.

Gov. Johnson submitted his cause to the arbitration of the national convention, and is now trying to repudiate its decision.

It is clear enough that no sane person now expects Col. Roosevelt to be elected President of the United States at the ensuing election. As to whether Col. Roosevelt expects to be elected or not, we do not know. But obviously his followers could not be afflicted with any such delusion. That he cannot carry California is certain. At a low estimate the total vote in California this fall will be at least 800,000. After a strenuous primary campaign, supported by all of the efforts of the State administration, heated newspaper advocacy, and popular demonstration, Col. Roosevelt received 136,000 votes. As to how many of these will follow him as a bolting candidate, we can only conjecture. It is certainly fair to assume that many will not do so, and if he should get enough additional recruits to make up for his loss, it would certainly be a surprising result. That the Taft supporters will not vote for him is conceded. That the La Follette followers will not vote for him is well known. That a majority of those that did not vote at all will not now vote for Roosevelt is obvious. It is therefore clear that if unnecessarily and wantonly his candidacy is injected into this State, it will be solely and only for the deliberate purpose of destroying the Republican party and assisting the Democratic party.

But even if some people could delude themselves into thinking that Roosevelt could carry California, they assuredly do not think that he can be elected President. Therefore, his candidacy has become one purely of revenge, wreck and ruin, and for no constructive purpose in the world. It is, therefore, not to be wondered at that a great majority of the prominent supporters of Roosevelt in the Chicago convention are now announced as opposed to him as a third party candidate, and the number of really distinguished Republicans who are still supporting him could be counted on the fingers of one hand, and the rest are merely excited, personal partisans, who appear to be willing to go to any length in the following of their discredited leader.

It may be that these people think they owe nothing to the Republican party, that has honored them and given them office, and whose support they have earnestly sought and thankfully received. But, if this is so, it is only because they are now wholly estranged from the ideas of consistency and morality that have heretofore actuated them. There is no more dangerous delusion than the unvarying and unwarranted assumption of virtue and infallibility for our own contentions and supporters, and the corresponding assumption of corruption, criminality and falsehood in our adversaries. That this attitude has become a mania on the part of Col. Roosevelt, no thoughtful student of modern events will deny. The strangest part of it is that this moral seems to have become epidemic in his followers. They denounce what they recently believed and advocated. They hate and revile those they on yesterday loved and believed in and supported. The obligations of law, the ties of party, the duties owed to others—those things that have been supposed to be immutable and morally undeniable, are one and all cast aside, trampled upon—not merely rejected, but scorned, by the followers of Col. Roosevelt. Col. Roosevelt has done more to lower the standards of respect for and consideration of others, and the canons of common decency, as applied to public life in America, than any other American, living or dead.

Therefore, it is not to be wondered at that under his wild leadership we hear it announced that after the Republican party has acted, that after his followers have had their day in court, have submitted their cause to the arbitration of the national convention of the party, they raise the cry of fraud, fraud, and are proposing to do acts so morally reprehensible and indefensible that they have not only never been committed, but have never heretofore been advocated.

We think, therefore, the only thing for the Taft people to do is to proceed by petition to insure the placing upon the ballot this fall of the regular number of electors to which the State is entitled, who will be pledged to vote for President Taft. Throughout the country, great and leading progressives, such as Senator La Follette, Senator Cummins, and several of the Governors who supported Col. Roosevelt for the nomination, and innumerable other leading progressives, are now firmly convinced that Col. Roosevelt has not only a stranglehold upon the Republican party, but upon real progressiveness in America. It is a strange situation, and obviously the beginning of the end is in sight, and one by one the real leaders of progressive ideas in America are deserting Col. Roosevelt. But his hold upon the popular imagination and upon the generality of the voters is such that although most of the leaders will undoubtedly fall away, it is not to be denied that if the farce continues, that he may get enough votes to encompass the defeat of President Taft, which is apparently all that he now hopes or desires to accomplish.

Easy Aids to Good Looks

"After motoring or golfing the hair may be dusty—with no time for washing the head. In this dilemma you will find a dry shampoo a good friend. Put four ounces of powdered orris root in a fruit jar, add an original package of therox and mix together. Sprinkle a little on the head and brush through the hair. Therox removes dust, oil and dandruff, and leaves the hair light, fluffy and easy to do up.

"Disfiguring wild hairs can be made to vanish quickly from the face or forearms by applying delatone paste, made by mixing powdered delatone with water. Cover the hairy surface with this paste for a minute or two, then remove, wash the skin, and the hairs will be gone.

"Short and thin eyelashes detract from otherwise beautiful eyes. Weak and straggly lashes can be strengthened if plain pyroxin be applied to the lash roots with thumb and forefinger. Thin eyebrows always improve with daily applications of pyroxin.

"A complexion cannot be dainty if the skin is shining from perspiration. A complexion beautifier that will not rub off or show like powder is made easily by dissolving an original package of mayatone in a half pint of witch hasel. This holds and does not smear. Gently massage with this solution daily, and the skin will be soft and satiny, velvety and smooth."

Tears Don't Save Him.

Harry Grace "fell from grace" Tuesday night by getting drunk. Tears coursed down his wrinkled cheeks as he begged the court for "just one more chance." He had been enjoying liberty on a ninety-day suspended sentence, having been convicted several weeks before of being an idle and dissolute person.

"I hadn't touched a drop for months," pleaded the elderly man, "until last night. I only took four small glasses."

"The former judgment will be enforced," ordered Judge Chambers. Grace returned to his place in the dock, buried his face in his arms and gave vent to renewed tears.

WAR ON LOAN SHARKS BEGUN.

BROKER ARRAIGNED, EXCESSIVE INTEREST CHARGED.

Man Alleges He Was Asked Fifty Cents Cash Interest and Required to Buy Two Dollars' Worth of Mining Stock When He Borrowed Money on Ring.

First steps in a criminal action to test the validity of the recently enacted municipal ordinance to stop money brokers from charging more than 2 per cent. a month on loans, were taken yesterday afternoon when C. K. Laughlin, with offices in the Grant building, was arraigned on a misdemeanor complaint before Police Judge Chambers.

The complaint was sworn to by J. W. Block. He alleges the defendant charged him $3.50 for a loan of $25 on a diamond ring, whereas under the law the interest should only have been 50 cents, he asserted. Laughlin appeared without counsel, pleaded not guilty, and the justice released him on $50 bail for trial August 19.

Block set forth in his complaint that when he secured the loan, Laughlin demanded 50 cents, which would be 2 per cent. interest for the first month, and then required him to pay $2 for two shares in an alleged mining company. That brought the alleged interest up to 10 per cent.

Assistant City Prosecutor Nimmo, who issued the complaint, said yesterday that the sale of the mining stock is clearly an evasion of the spirit of the ordinance, which contains a clause seeking to prevent any kind of an evasion. Nimmo said the Laughlin case will be taken to the Supreme Court, if necessary, to test the validity of the ordinance.

SOCIAL CLUB'S METHODS.

In finding Joseph McKasson, steward of the St. Ignatius Club, No. 914 Summit street, guilty of having sold liquor without a license, Police Judge Frederickson in the Police Court yesterday ruled that a social club must procure a license before it dispenses liquor even to its members.

McKasson set up as a defense that under the provisions of the liquor ordinance a social club is exempt because those clubs are not specifically mentioned. He also objected to the methods used in securing the evidence against him. Patrolmen West and Miner, in civilian clothes, visited the club. They ordered beer, paid for and drank it, and then, at the request of McKasson, signed an application for membership. When they had affixed their signatures to the cards, McKasson, it was testified, said to them:

"You are now life members of the club."

How to Keep Face Young and Attractive

(National Hygienic Review.)

The way to ward off old age is not to fear it, not to allow one's self to be oppressed by the dread of advancing years. Use only legitimate preventives and avoid trying experiments with preparations not indorsed by physicians. An entirely safe and very effective way to keep the complexion young-looking and beautiful is to apply ordinary mercolized wax at bedtime, using it like cold cream, washing it off in the morning. This gradually absorbs the withered, faded cuticle, which is replaced by the more youthful, pink-tinted underskin. One ounce of this wax, to be had at any drug store, is enough to completely rejuvenate a wornout complexion.

Wrinkles and flabbiness of cheek and chin, the first signs of advancing age, may be lessened by a simple, harmless preparation made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. It is used as a face bath.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

San Bernardino.

HATES TO PAY TAXES TWICE.

State, Not County, to Get Money, Says Railroad.

Largest Citrus Shipment Is Made at Highland.

County Chamber of Commerce May Be Formed.

SAN BERNARDINO, July 10.—The Santa Fe today filed with the County Board of Equalization a protest against the further continuance of the Gate City pre-cooling plant upon the assessment rolls of the county. The protest recites the allegation that the plant is operative and should be taxed by the State instead of the county, and refers at length to the State Board's decision, denying the county the right to assess either the Gate City plant of the Southern Pacific pre-cooling plant at Colton.

The question involved in the protest is now before the Attorney-General at Sacramento, from whom a decision has been asked, and Dist.-Atty. Goodcell has been formally authorized by the Supervisors of the county to commence proceedings to have the State board's decision reversed in the Supreme Court. The result means some $10,000 in tax revenue to the county.

ADMITS FRIENDSHIP.

Mrs. Lulu Deitz took the stand as a witness for the defense today in her suit against the Fred Esler estate to collect a $10,000 promissory note given her by Fred Esler, deceased. She told of their movements together, covering the period since the death of her husband, Harry Deitz, actor, several years ago, not denying the intimate friendly relations, but challenging the declaration that there had been anything improper between them. Mrs. Deitz was still on the witness stand when an adjournment was taken this afternoon until tomorrow morning.

LARGE SHIPMENT.

The largest shipment of citrus trees ever made in this section is being packed onto Santa Fe cars at Highland, where H. H. Linville and Frazer & Barnes are shipping to Colusa for Mills, 12,500 Eureka lemon trees. For the shipment Mr. Mills had special boxes constructed at Los Angeles. These held from 100 to 125 trees each. The shipment about closes the citrus tree movement here. Mr. Mills is opening up a big section at Colusa to the citrus industry, having become the pioneer of that district. He is heavily interested at Riverside also, and ranks as one of the foremost citrus experts in the State.

GETS NO PAY.

L. V. Root, formerly Justice of the Peace at Needles, has been authorized by Dist.-Atty. R. R. Goodcell to represent the State in all matters coming before the Justice Court at Needles necessitating the presence of a public prosecutor. Under this appointment Root, while representing the District-Attorney's office, will receive no compensation. The idea was suggested to give Needles immediate access to public prosecutions. Needles lies more than 200 miles from the county seat and heretofore a deputy from the prosecutor's office has had to make the long trip, causing great delay and involving large expense.

FALLS FROM WINDOW.

The body of Mrs. B. L. Briggs, who died at San Francisco Tuesday from a plunge from a second-story window at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Reed Smith, will be received here tomorrow morning. She had long been a resident of San Bernardino. She is survived by eight children, Mrs. A. B. Phillips and Frank Briggs of this city, Mrs. Nell McKinley of Prescilla, Fred Briggs of Kansas, Emmett Briggs of Los Angeles, Mrs. Reed Smith and Mrs. Charles Hitchcock of San Francisco.

MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting of the Merchants' Association last night resulted in the re-election of James Drever, president; Jack McInerny, vice-president; J. B. Frith, treasurer; C. Cohn, George Feetham, R. Anker and J. T. Bolleng, board of directors. The members voted to hold the annual banquet Thursday of next week. It is likely that the feast will be held at the Elks Club. Herman Harris, C. N. Hanf and C. R. Lothrop were appointed a committee to make the necessary banquet arrangements.

COUNTY CHAMBER.

Henry G. Dent and J. E. Blair have been appointed to represent the Bloomington Chamber of Commerce at a conference to be held here Friday when a County Chamber of Commerce will be discussed. Through such an organization it is proposed by the promoters to work for the good of the whole county. Representatives of every town and community in the county are expected to participate in the conference.

PUPILS PROMOTED.

County Superintendent of Schools A. S. McPherron has compiled a list of all the eighth grade pupils in the county who were promoted recently and are now ready for entrance in the high schools. The list contains 414 names and represents the largest list of eighth grade promotions in the history of the county schools. This does not include the San Bernardino schools, which will probably increase the list by 200 pupils.

SIXTEEN YEARS; HAS HAD ENOUGH.

VETERAN SUPERVISOR LAYS DOWN ROBES OF OFFICE.

Water Commission Unable to Get Together With Company Which Offers to Sell Rights but Asks Large Sum—San Bernardino Basin May Be Tapped for Supply.

REDLANDS, July 10.—J. B. Glover, Supervisor from the Redlands district, has announced that he will not again be a candidate for the position. He has held office continuously for sixteen years, and believes that he has done his share toward looking after the interests of his country. Although a Democrat, Glover has invariably carried this heavy Republican district by goodly majorities. Four years ago the Republicans paid him a compliment by not naming a candidate to run against him. Glover gives up his duties on account of ill health. He came to Redlands in 1870 and has witnessed every phase of transformation from a wide waste land to a progressive city.

PRICES DIFFER.

The Water Commission has received a report from its subcommittee, the result of a couple of conferences with President E. M. Lyon of the Domestic Water Company in regard to what price the company would fix upon certain portions of its domestic water system. Recently the electors of the city voted bonds in the amount of $600,000, with which to invest in a municipal water system.

A few days ago an offer was made the Domestic Water Company for its distributing system, the price being $165,000. Now the company comes back with a counter proposition to sell for $250,000, or $500,000 for the entire system, excluding the Lugonia water and its office building. The commission believes its offer of $165,000 is liberal, and will stand pat.

Possibly further conferences may result in the parties getting closer together. The Domestic company desires to include its Bear Valley water in the deal, but the commission does not care for these rights, believing the upkeep is too costly.

In connection with this report the most important action taken by the Water Commission was upon a motion of Dr. C. S. Lombard urging that the City Trustees begin at once the sinking of a well on property held under an option near Texas and Pioneer streets; also that steps be taken to develop water in the San Bernardino basin; the money for this purpose to be taken from the general fund, that fund to be reimbursed later when the bonds are sold.

FOOTHILL BRIEFS.

Last evening Mrs. G. G. Kennard gave a farewell reception to Mrs. J. F. Reisner, who will soon leave for Topeka, Kan. The Reisners have been active in Y.M.C.A. work. Reisner was physical director until his resignation on July 1.

County Superintendent of Schools A. S. McPherron has just issued a list of pupils eligible to receive diplomas from the grammar schools of the county. Redlands leads the list with 117 to receive papers entitling them to advancement.

A party of forty-two excursionists, members of a Gillespie Kimport party, arrived in the city this morning from the Grand Canyon. They are from the New England States and will tour the State before leaving for the North and East.

The Tempe (Ariz.) baseball team is desirous of securing a game with a local nine in the middle of August, when they tour the State. Robert L. Glover, acting secretary of the Y.M.C.A., is in communication with their manager.

Wrongly Accused.

COULDN'T HAVE DONE IT; THEY WEREN'T PRESENT.

AVALON, July 10.—Robert Brown and Fred Thompson, two guests at The Times Camp, have been reported by a Los Angeles newspaper as having been sent off the island for stealing jewelry, when they, along with several others, did not arrive at the camp until Sunday afternoon, and the robbery occurred Saturday. The alleged thefts from a curio store were a small napkin ring valued at 75 cents and four cheap stick pins and two or three pennants valued at less than $1.

Officer Sotemier, who captured the guilty parties Saturday evening, returned the goods to their owners. The lads who committed the thefts apologized. Brown and Thompson were in their respective homes in Los Angeles Saturday. Since their arrival on the island Brown and Thompson have conducted themselves in a manner which brings credit to the boys of the camp. Never once have they been reprimanded. So gentlemanly has been their conduct during their stay in camp that Superintendent Gillette promised them another trip next summer. They are to remain for several days yet.

A tournament of horseshoes to decide the championship of The Times Camp is now holding the attention of the boys. The competitors are swiftly being eliminated but not without a struggle. Nearly every game reads 21 to 20. John Schmidt seems to have the advantage, with Harry Brown a close second.

He weakened a little this morning and Noel Woodward, who was watching close, came through with a spirit and gained a few points on the leader.

Charles Douglas, now residing in tent No. 4, has changed his name. In the future he will be known as the "Pink Baby." His beautiful complexion, caused by his fondness for Bishop's Catsup, coupled with the Catalina sun, is the reason for the change of title.

Clifford Cake is the "Wee Boy" with the large capacity. Any time of day, even after a large meal, he can be found with a quantity of "Everybody's" olives and a pocketful of "Bis Bis." He declares they are the finest ever for a growing boy.

Ralph Reynolds, Lincoln Cross, Jack Scheis and a number of others, whose time is up tomorrow, have been holding private meetings trying to figure out some way whereby they can stay a little longer.

For twelve days the boys have revelled in a complete round of pleasure. Apparently, one would think that the lads remained "awake o' nights" planning for the coming events. But a trip through the peaceful camp grounds after 10 o'clock each evening will soon settle any doubt.

Today's menu follows:

Dinner—Soup, vegetable; "Bis Bis," relish, "Everybody's" olives; entree, baked spaghetti with tomatoes, "Calamaco," roast shoulder of beef; vegetables, mashed potatoes, sugar corn; desert, baked rice pudding with vanilla sauce, lemonade, Bradford's bread and butter.

Supper—Cold roast beef, baked pork and beans, "Stetson's," mashed brown potatoes, potato salad; cocoa, "Bishop's" assorted cake, Bradford's bread and butter.

San Diego.

SHIP RATE WAR IS THREATENED.

CHANCE FOR CHEAP TRAVEL TO SOUTH COAST POINTS.

Mysterious Disappearance of Assistant Bookkeeper Causes Police to Institute Search for Body—Engineer's Clothing Catches in Machinery but His Life Is Saved.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Another rate war, extending from San Diego to Ensenada and possibly to San Pedro and Long Beach, is threatened in the announcement that the gasoline vessel San Diego is to be put on the run again in competition with the Victoria of the Compania Naviera del Pacifico line. The San Diego is owned by the Meteor Transportation Company, whose agent here will be the North Pacific Company.

When he heard that his old-time rival was to renew the battle for the Lower California trade, George Beermaker of the Mexican company, with headquarters here, announced that beginning on the San Diego's first sailing date, now set for Friday, he would sell tickets from this city to Ensenada for $1 and would cut the fare lower if this rate was met by his rival.

The Meteor company, it is understood, will start with a fare of $3 one way and $5 the round trip. Its vessel is much faster than the Victoria and can make the trip in three hours less time.

According to the preliminary schedule given out by the agent tonight the San Diego will make weekly round trips between Catalina Island, Long Beach, San Diego and Ensenada.

BELIEVE HE IS DROWNED.

Mystery surrounds the disappearance of Charles P. W. Sanways, assistant bookkeeper for the Klauber Wangenheim Company, wholesale grocers and exporters, who has been missing since last Wednesday. He left his apartments at the Upas Hotel that night with the statement that he was going to Coronado Beach. He had about $30 on his person. No one saw him on the ferry or at the beach resort. His accounts with the Klauber Wangenheim Company are reported correct.

Two theories are advanced for Sanways's disappearance, one being that he fell from the ferry on his trip across the bay and was drowned, and the other that he was murdered for his money and his body thrown into the bay. Friends scout any suicide theory as the young man was in good health and spirits. He came here from Canada about five weeks ago, was of attractive appearance and highly educated, talking with a strong English accent.

The police were appealed to today by his employers.

PIONEER NAVIGATOR.

Capt. Moses S. Pirime, a pioneer navigator, died tonight at the Fredericka Home, at the age of 89 years. Capt. Moses rounded the Horn many times in the early days of navigation on this Coast and the log-book of his ship supplied data for early-day history and romance.

LIFE ENDANGERED.

Manuel Manice, engineer on the San Diego-Pt. Loma ferry, came near losing his life yesterday when his clothing caught in the swiftly-revolving machinery on the boat. Before the engine could be stopped he was almost stripped of clothing.

Santa Barbara.

FREIGHT RATES ALL-IMPORTANT.

COST OF ROADS DEPENDS ON HAULING OF MATERIALS.

County Highways Develop Issue in District Bonds Situation and Lower Rate Is Applied For—Only One Per Cent. of Tax-payers Delinquent.

SANTA BARBARA, July 10.—The relation of railroad freight rates to public road improvement is considered vitally important to highway construction in this county. The issue has been sharply marked by a situation developing at Goleta, where twelve miles of permanent highway are being built under the district bonds and county appropriation at the ratio of four to one. The surfacing of the new road is made from Carpinteria asphalt manufactured from native bitumen, taken from a newly-opened mine. The distance from the mine to the scene of road construction is about fifteen miles.

The Southern Pacific charges a freight rate of $1.25 a ton. The road material at the mine costs $3 a ton. The railroad hauls crushed rock from quarries in Los Angeles to the same Goleta sidetrack for seventy cents a ton; but it is explained that it is a different classification, although the same type of cars is used and the material goes into the same road. Application for the reduction of the rate has thus far been unavailing, although the charge may seriously hamper other road work in the vicinity.

Carpinteria will have a road-bond election July 22. Supervisor Deaderick of that district says there will not be twenty votes against the bonds. The same asphalt used on the Goleta highways will be specified for the Carpinteria roads, but the material is close at hand and the hauling will be a small item.

These two road projects will give a paved stretch of road almost from the Ventura county line to a point nine miles west of Santa Barbara, all on the route of the proposed State highway.

FEW DELINQUENCIES.

Of 8000 individuals on the county assessment roll, and a total tax levy of $613,297, only eighty are delinquent and the total delinquency on real estate is but $1106. The showing is considered quite remarkable. Not a single piece of property in the city of Lompoc was sold this year for delinquent county taxes.

WOMAN RELEASED.

Miss Katherine F. Coughlan, graduate of the Los Angeles State Normal School and former teacher for the Sudden school district in this county, has been released from the County Jail where she was detained two weeks pending her examination for insanity. Her brothers from Kansas City came to her assistance, and it is understood that she will be taken to their home. Her case was considered by Judge Frank R. Willis, of Los Angeles who is here this week in the absence of Judge Crow.

INCIDENTAL NOTES.

Mrs. William Miller Graham has charge of arrangements for "tableaux vivants" to be given at the Potter Theater July 31, for a cause which she has not yet made public, but generally understood to be a benefit for the employees of the Santa Barbara Country Club who lost their effects and suffered otherwise in the fire that destroyed the clubhouse some weeks ago.

The League of the Cross Cadets, a Catholic organization at San Francisco, will arrive here July 21 by steamer for a week's camp. The same company was here last summer. There will be about 350 boys in the troop.

D. D. Brenson, inspector in the forest service, who investigated and vindicated Supervisor Willis N. Blossom of the Santa Barbara forest, after an inspection that approached a year in duration, has received a call to report at Washington by July 15.

HORSE TAKES SEAT IN CAR.

Becomes Rambunctious and Somersaults Out Again.

The Candy Kids to Feed on Doughnuts for Diet.

Storm-drain Squabble Brings Showers of Protests.

[Office of The Times, 33 S. Fair Oaks avenue.]

PASADENA, July 11.—Billy, an acrobatic horse owned by the Pasadena Transfer Company, varied the monotony of the day yesterday by performing a thrilling stunt at Colorado street and Fair Oaks avenue. He succeeded in attracting a crowd, although he came out somewhat the worse for wear. He took a seat in an automobile, then, apparently not liking it, turned a somersault and landed neatly to the pavement. All would have been well had it not been that one hoof struck the windshield of the car, which, breaking, cut Billy in divers places and made A. G. Murphy, owner of the car, peevish.

The exhibition was wholly extempore. In fact, the horse's genius for gymnastics had not been known before. He was being led with a halter by H. L. Eyer when he became frightened at sight of a steam roller and broke away.

He had just crossed Colorado street, going south, when he found the way blocked by a string of pedestrians and made for the automobile. Billy made a leap for the front seat and landed squarely on the cushions.

HAS BRIGHT IDEA.

The Board of Education, which had decided to appeal to the parent-teachers' associations of the city to aid it in preventing school children from an over-indulgence in ice cream and candy, has now hit upon a plan.

If arrangements being discussed are carried out, when school opens in the fall the management of the two cafeterias at the Pasadena High School building and the West Hall of the old Throop Institute building, respectively, will be given over to the children. They will be permitted to conduct the eating establishments, which, if they make them pay, they will also have to patronize. It is manifest that a student's stomach, if not his pocketbook, will only stand a certain amount of edibles, and if the cafeteria food is purchased and eaten the buying of ice cream and candy will be lessened.

PROPERTY-OWNERS EXCITED.

The storm of protest resulting from the sudden notice of the builders of the recently-constructed storm drain through the center of the city that full payments are due on the 28th inst., with notification to make the payments in Los Angeles, continued unabated yesterday. Councilmen Fogg and Barnes, who were appointed by the City Council a special committee to investigate and ask for the establishment of an office here, where payments can be made, and an extension of time, sought an interview with the Los Angeles contractors, but were unable to see them. They expect to hold a conference today.

The Council has the power to grant a month's extension and Councilman Fogg declared last night that he hopes to see the matter work out satisfactorily.

The Board of Trade also has protested.

Mayor Thum issued a statement yesterday in which he said in part:

"The proceedings for the storm-drain were started by the previous administration about two years ago and many property owners have forgotten all about the circumstances although considerable publicity was given the subject by former Mayor Taggart at the time. Some, however, did not learn of the proceedings even then and in consequence the assessment comes up as a surprise.

"Had I appreciated the great inconvenience to which the citizens were to be put in making payment I should have had the map referred to prepared and published July 1.

"We have learned a lesson from the present experience and our plan of handling the East Side storm-drain as a result in a degree of publicity that will answer all purposes."

COMMITTEES APPOINTED.

The directors of the Pasadena Board of Trade have appointed the chairmen of the various standing committees that will serve for the ensuing year. These chairmen will appoint other members of the committees themselves. The heads of the committees are:

Committee on Membership, Lee G. McLachlan; Transportation, William F. Knight; Streets and Boulevards, C. P. Day; Finance, Fred E. Wilcox; Entertainment, C. P. Lukens, and Advertising, C. J. Hall.

The Board of Trade has before it a communication from C. D. Manning of the Board of County Commissioners asking that it continue to take an active interest in the good road movement, as it has planned to do. The question of better electric car service between Pasadena and Los Angeles is one of the matters that the Board of Trade is now considering. The question is before the Committee on Transportation and was discussed by the directors at a meeting last Tuesday night.

RIVERSIDE TAX COLLECTOR.

Several After Job Expected to Be Vacant by Resignation—City Loses Money by Charging Flat Rate.

RIVERSIDE, July 10.—Already there is a merry scramble for the office of County Tax Collector, it being generally assumed that Collector Crane will tender his resignation.

City Auditor Stibbens is in line for the office in the event that it is made vacant, he having the inside track towards landing the position, probably, on account of his years of experience and good service as City Assessor and City Auditor. Stibbens was a candidate for the Republican nomination last year.

A petition asking the County Supervisors to appoint F. E. Dinsmore to the office, if it becomes vacant, is also being circulated. Dinsmore has had much experience as an employee of the Riverside Title and Abstract Company, with which concern he is still connected.

TO ADOPT METERS.

The Board of Public Utilities is considering the question of doing away entirely with the flat rate system of charging for electric service from the city electric lighting plant. It has been abundantly shown that the city has lost considerable juice through this method of charging, and some of the members of the Board of Utilities have advocated putting every user of electricity for light, power or heat on a meter, that each may pay for what he gets.

At the board meeting last night it was agreed that all electric fans now being operated by stores and places of business shall be placed on a meter and Superintendent Cutting, of the electric plant, was instructed to investigate and make a report on the number in use, their location, etc., and of all who are on a flat rate basis. Mayor Peters has made investigations in other cities and favors changing to a meter system of charging.

WATER QUESTION IS BOILING HOT.

CITY UNDECIDED HOW TO ACT WITH JUSTICE TO ALL.

Company Officials Say Present Rates Will Not Pay Expenses Nor Interest on Investment—Extension of Lighting System to Be Completed by August.

GLENDALE, July 10.—A battle is on between the officials of this city and the Consolidated Water Company, which serves water to the residents of a large portion of the city. For several weeks the fire of this fight has been smoldering, but at the meeting of the City Trustees this week it burst into flame.

The affair begun when the City Trustees passed an ordinance regulating the water rate within Glendale's limits. This cut in rates appeared to all except the water companies entirely reasonable. The rate was reduced from $1.50 per monthly minimum of 600 cubic feet to a minimum of $1.25, with a 7-cent excess instead of 10 cents. At several called meetings of the Trustees representatives of the water companies protested against the reduction. As a result of this protest the city compromises with the companies, the result being that the rate was cut just half as much as the city had intended originally that it should be.

Then came an offer from the Consolidated Water Company to sell their plant and system to the city for a consideration of something like $3000 a miner's inch, the aggregate sum amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars. The city, believing that the figure was too high, did nothing in the matter. The Trustees are at this time considering the purchase of the Miradero Water Company owned by L. C. Brand for about $25,500. At this time this company serves a large portion of the western section of this city.

At the Trustees' meeting this week the officials were much surprised to receive the following letter from Ralph Rogers, manager of the Consolidated Water Company:

"Dear Sirs: In reply to your letter of July 5, would say I have had this matter up with the State Board of Public Utilities. The only way for Glendale to get better water service is to make a rate that would be equal to the cost of operation or buy the system and put in their own plant and then they would have something to learn.

"You have fixed the rate below the actual cost of operation without even allowing interest on the investment, which leaves us with nothing to buy land and put in a pumping plant so as to raise the water to a higher elevation. The Ninth, Orange and Kenwood streets' condition has existed for a long time. Unless we can have something to pay us for laying pipe and putting in reservoirs to relieve these people we certainly cannot be called upon to expend money without even getting interest on same. The only way I see out of it is for the city to buy the plant."

This letter was an answer to one sent to the water company by the Trustees, protesting against the poor service on several of Glendale's leading streets.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING.

Harry B. Lynch, manager of the electric lighting department, stated today that the extensive work of extending the lighting system, which has been in progress for six months, will be completed by August 1. During the last month the working force of the department has been centered on the laying of the conduits along Broadway between Glendale avenue and Brand boulevard, these being laid on account of the desire of the Trustees that all lines and poles shall be eliminated from Broadway. Throughout most of the distance on Broadway a nine-duct conduit is being laid. On Brand boulevard and Glendale avenue a three-inch fiber duct in concrete is being installed. Ornamental iron standards will be erected at intervals of 100 feet on each side of the street.

Since the acquisition by the city of the West Glendale section, connections have been made to the system at the rate of about a hundred a month and the plant is serving more than 1500 customers, with probably 500 still to be connected. The fiscal year has been exceedingly prosperous for this plant. During that time the number of consumers has doubled and the price for juice has been lowered from 10 cents to 9 cents a kilowatt, with $1 minimum.

Bids for Municipal Pier to Be Asked by Petition.

Fishermen Report Having Seen Chinese at Clemente.

LONG BEACH, July 10.—Recommendations of Principal David Burcham to the school board relative to the conduct and management next year of the Polytechnic cafeteria has brought out the fact that the cafeteria, though apparently doing a good business among the 800 students, was operated at a loss and the school board will ask of the teacher manager in charge for a statement to get some enlightenment on the subject.

Principal Burcham recommends that the board delegate the management to one of the teachers and one of the student body, who shall be managers. The teacher-manager is to keep the books, do the banking and pay the bills. The student manager is to select and supervise the students who assist in the cafeteria in return for their meals. Whatever profits accrue are to be turned over to the student body.

Prof. Burcham is of the opinion that allowing the students to have a voice in the management it will be possible to enlist interest and support that has not yet been possible. He also suggests an out-of-doors dining-room for students who prefer to bring part or all of their lunches from home.

The annual budget, which is required to be ready August 1, has not yet been compiled, the former superintendent's term having expired and the new superintendent not yet being on the ground. It will be attended to at once by the president and clerk of the board.

The annual reports of the finances show that there has been expended for the High School salaries and miscellaneous expenses, $83,254.62, and that there is a deficit of $662.28. The building fund of the school, however, has a balance of $1,204.55. For the grammar schools, receipts were $94,662.86 and expenses $91,948.41, leaving a balance of $2714.

Nothing further has been heard from the school bond issue of $100,000 to be bought by the State if its validity is approved by the Attorney-General and an effort will be made to hurry action as the buildings provided for are much needed next school term.

ALMOST A HOLD-UP.

Arthur F. Herron, a boy employed at a cigar stand, reported to the police at 1 o'clock this morning that he had been the victim of an attempted hold-up near his home on Magnolia avenue. Herron was riding his bicycle when a man stepped out from a shadow and seizing his wheel jerked the lad to the pavement. Just then a pedestrian hove in sight and the bandit took to his heels. The police found no trace of the fellow.

Herron recognized the thug as a man he had seen hanging about the stand earlier in the evening and later when the lad was checking up the money drawer before closing up.

ASK FOR BIDS.

Renewed interest in the project for a horseshoe pier to replace the present Pine-avenue structure was awakened this morning by the active circulation of petitions asking the Council to appoint a committee to invite competitive plans and designs for a free municipal pier to extend from Pine and American avenues, and also to employ a board of engineers to pass upon the material for its construction. Data regarding similar piers elsewhere is to be gathered.

CHINESE IN HIDING?

Rumors were current today among boatmen in the inner harbor that a local launch which makes weekly trips to San Clemente island for abalones had returned today and furnished the immigrant inspectors with information that they had seen a white man and several Chinese hiding in one corner of the island since the departure of the raiding party Sunday. It is thought that this is either a portion of the gang who escaped capture Sunday or else is a new consignment arrived since at the rendezvous and awaiting a boat to carry them to the mainland. It is also hinted that the immigration officers are attempting to connect a Long Beach man as one of the principals in the smuggling business.

BEACH BRIEFS.

A Coroner's jury this morning returned a verdict of accidental death in the case of Mrs. Julia Lender, who was hit by a Redondo car Monday while crossing the track on Redondo avenue. The car men were exonerated.

The yearly report of the police department shows 1067 arrests in 1911-12, ending June 30 and of these there were 900 convictions. $2748. was collected in fines and forfeitures. The cost of the department for the year was $19,095.37.

Beginning next week the schooner San Diego owned by the Meteor Boat Company will make bi-weekly trips between Long Beach and San Diego, continuing one trip south to Ensenada. The San Diego is a coaster vessel of 100 tons and will operate in conjunction with the North Pacific steamer Santa Clara, which will end her southern trip at Long Beach.

SCHOOL FUNDS INSUFFICIENT.

BUILDINGS OVERFLOWING AND PUPILS ARE CROWDED.

City Has Been Paying Transportation for Children Who Live at a Distance—Blind-pig Proprietor Fined—Children of George Junior Republic to Be Assisted in Fair.

POMONA, July 10.—Continued increase in the school population is giving the Board of Education trouble to provide quarters. It is estimated that the attendance here next term will be nearly 2500. Most of the overcrowded conditions exist in the grades. The Kauffman school on the South Side, and the San Antonio grade school on the North Side are overcrowded and cannot accommodate more pupils.

To help temporarily the abandoned wooden schoolhouse in the Kingsley tract is being renovated and made ready for occupancy, and Miss Anne L. Scott has been engaged as teacher there.

The State law requires that the city must provide transportation to and from school for children living in parts of the city where there are not adequate school accommodations and the past year the city has paid out about $1200 for such purposes. It was necessary to take pupils from one part of the city to another to provide room for them and now all of the grade rooms will be filled to overflowing if some relief is not had by next term.

Miss Doris Mannerhan, formerly of Kansas City, has been appointed as teacher in the eighth grade and Miss Marie Cloisser will be a new kindergarten teacher.

TO TEACH ART.

William McDermitt, who has graduated from Pratt Art Institute, and who has also been a pupil at the New York Art Student's League, is visiting here at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George McDermitt, on West Third street. McDermitt will go to Pullman, Wash., to take charge of the art department of the State College there in September.

REPUBLIC'S FAIR.

Lewis Johnson, formerly of Pomona College, but who has lately been head of the music department of Scott College in Georgia, and who possesses a fine tenor voice, will sing in the vaudeville at the country fair, to be given by society girls at Ganesha Park tomorrow afternoon and evening, for the benefit of the George Junior Republic. Miss Bertha Sanford will give Spanish dances, and Fred Slicton will do clog dances. Thorborn and Becker will appear in a number of character songs, and there will be a playlet. A food show and a baby show will also be features.

If tired of the coast go to Arrowhead Springs and experience new life.

County Chamber of Commerce May Be Formed.

SAN BERNARDINO, July 10.—The Santa Fe today filed with the County Board of Equalization a protest against the further continuance of the Gate City pre-cooling plant upon the assessment rolls of the county. The protest recites the allegation that the plant is operative and should be taxed by the State instead of the county, and refers at length to the State board's decision, denying the county the right to assess either the Gate City plant of the Southern Pacific pre-cooling plant at Colton.

The question involved in the protest is now before the Attorney-General at Sacramento, from whom a decision has been asked, and Dist.-Atty. Goodcell has been formally authorized by the Supervisors of the county to commence proceedings to have the State board's decision reviewed in the Supreme Court. The result means some $10,000 in tax revenues to the county.

Mrs. Deitz was still on the witness stand when an adjournment was taken this afternoon until tomorrow morning.

The largest shipment of citrus trees ever made in this section is being packed onto Santa Fe cars at Highland, where H. H. These held from 100 to 125 trees each. The shipment about closes the citrus tree movement here. Mr. Mills is opening up a big section at Colusa to the citrus industry, having become the pioneer of that district. He is heavily interested at Riverside also, and ranks as one of the foremost citrus experts in the State.

AVALON, July 10.—Robert Brown and Fred Thompson, two guests at The Times Camp, have been reported by a Los Angeles newspaper as having been sent off the island for stealing jewelry, when they, along with several others, did not arrive at the camp until Sunday afternoon, and the robbery occurred Saturday. The alleged thefts from a curio store were a small napkin ring valued at 75 cents and four cheap stick pins and two or three pennants valued at less than $3.

Officer Sutemier, who captured the guilty parties Saturday evening, returned the goods to their owners. The lads who committed the thefts apologized. Brown and Thompson were in their respective homes in Los Angeles Saturday. Since their arrival on the island Brown and Thompson have conducted themselves in a manner which brings credit to the boys of the camp. Never once have they been reprimanded. So gentlemanly has been their conduct during their stay in camp that Superintendent Gillette promised them another trip next summer. They are to remain for several days yet.

A tournament of horseshoes to decide the championship of The Times Camp is now holding the attention of the boys. The competitors are swiftly being eliminated but not without a struggle. Nearly every game reads 21 to 20. John Schmidt seems to have the advantage, with Harry Brown a close second.

Yesterday the Juniors of the camp played a game of indoor baseball, the first of a series for the Goldsmith pennant. Although the Henry & Cornett team won, it by no means gives them the flag. The Times Camp Specials are already changing their line-up and will put up a better fight next game. The Goldsmith ball has been adopted by the camp.

MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting of the Merchants' Association last night resulted in the re-election of James Drever, president; Jack McInerny, vice-president; J. B. Frith, treasurer; C. Cohn, George Feetham, R. Anker and J. T. Bolling, board of directors. The members voted to hold the annual banquet Thursday of next week. It is likely that the feast will be held at the Elks Club. Herman Harris, C. N. Hanf and C. R. Lothrop were appointed a committee to make the necessary banquet arrangements.

COUNTY CHAMBER.

Henry G. Dent and J. E. Blair have been appointed to represent the Bloomington Chamber of Commerce at a conference to be held here Friday when a County Chamber of Commerce will be discussed. Through such an organization it is proposed by the promoters to work for the good of the whole county. Representatives of every town and community in the county are expected to participate in the conference.

PUPILS PROMOTED.

County Superintendent of Schools A. S. McPherron has compiled a list of all the eighth grade pupils in the county who were promoted recently and are now ready for entrance in the high schools. The list contains 414 names and represents the largest list of eighth grade promotions in the history of the county schools. This does not include the San Bernardino schools, which will probably increase the list by 200 pupils.

LICENSE TO WED.

A marriage license was issued here today to John Edward Conners, native of Denmark, age 51, resident of Los Angeles, and Elizabeth Story, native of California, age 40, resident of San Francisco.

SIXTEEN YEARS; HAS HAD ENOUGH.

VETERAN SUPERVISOR LAYS DOWN ROBES OF OFFICE.

Water Commission Unable to Get Together With Company Which Offers to Sell Rights but Asks Large Sum—San Bernardino Basin May Be Tapped for Supply.

REDLANDS, July 10.—J. B. Glover, Supervisor from the Redlands district, has announced that he will not again be a candidate for the position. He has held office continuously for sixteen years, and believes that he has done his share toward looking after the interests of his country. Although a Democrat, Glover has invariably carried this heavy Republican district by goodly majorities. Four years ago the Republicans paid him a compliment by not naming a candidate to run against him. Glover gives up his duties on account of ill health. He came to Redlands in 1870 and has witnessed every phase of transformation from a wide waste land to a progressive city.

PRICES DIFFER.

The Water Commission has received a report from its subcommittee, the result of a couple of conferences with President E. M. Lyon of the Domestic Water Company in regard to what price the company would fix upon certain portions of its domestic water system. Recently the electors of the city voted bonds in the amount of $600,000, with which to invest in a municipal water system.

A few days ago an offer was made the Domestic Water Company for its distributing system, the price being $165,000. Now the company comes back with a counter proposition to sell for $250,000, or $500,000 for the entire system, excluding the Lugonia water and its office building. The commission believes its offer of $165,000 is liberal, and will stand pat.

Possibly further conferences may result in the parties getting closer together. The Domestic company desires to include its Bear Valley water in the deal, but the commission does not care for these rights, believing the upkeep is too costly.

In connection with this report the most important action taken by the Water Commission was upon a motion of Dr. C. S. Lombard urging that the City Trustees begin at once the sinking of a well on property held under an option near Texas and Pioneer streets; also that steps be taken to develop water in the San Bernardino basin; the money for this purpose to be taken from the general fund, that fund to be reimbursed later when the bonds are sold.

FOOTHILL BRIEFS.

Last evening Mrs. G. G. Kennard gave a farewell reception to Mrs. J. F. Reisner, who will soon leave for Topeka, Kan. The Reisners have been active in Y.M.C.A. work. Reisner was physical director until his resignation on July 1.

County Superintendent of Schools A. S. McPherron has just issued a list of pupils eligible to receive diplomas from the grammar schools of the county. Redlands leads the list with 117 to receive papers entitling them to advancement.

A party of forty-two excursionists, members of a Gillespie Kimport party, arrived in the city this morning from the Grand Canyon. They are from the New England States and will tour the State before leaving for the North and East.

The Tempe (Ariz.) baseball team is desirous of securing a game with a local nine in the middle of August, when they tour the State. Robert L. Glover, acting secretary of the Y.M.C.A., is in communication with their manager.

San Diego.

SHIP RATE WAR IS THREATENED.

CHANCE FOR CHEAP TRAVEL TO SOUTH COAST POINTS.

Mysterious Disappearance of Assistant Bookkeeper Causes Police to Institute Search for Body—Engineer's Clothing Catches in Machinery but His Life Is Saved.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, July 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Another rate war, extending from San Diego to Ensenada and possibly to San Pedro and Long Beach, is threatened in the announcement that the gasoline vessel San Diego is to be put on the run again in competition with the Victoria of the Compania Naviera del Pacifico line. The San Diego is owned by the Meteor Transportation Company, whose agent here will be the North Pacific Company.

When he heard that his old-time rival was to renew the battle for the Lower California trade, George Beermaker of the Mexican company, with headquarters here, announced that beginning on the San Diego's first sailing date, now set for Friday, he would sell tickets from this city to Ensenada for $1 and would cut the fare lower if this rate was met by his rival.

The Meteor company, it is understood, will start with a fare of $2 one way and $5 the round trip. Its vessel is much faster than the Victoria and can make the trip in three hours less time.

According to the preliminary schedule given out by the agent tonight the San Diego will make weekly round trips between Catalina Island, Long Beach, San Diego and Ensenada.

BELIEVE HE IS DROWNED.

Mystery surrounds the disappearance of Charles P. W. Sanways, assistant bookkeeper for the Klauber Wangenheim Company, wholesale grocers and exporters, who has been missing since last Wednesday. He left his apartments at the Upas Hotel that night with the statement that he was going to Coronado Beach. He had about $30 on his person. No one saw him on the ferry or at the beach resort. His accounts with the Klauber Wangenheim Company are reported correct.

Two theories are advanced for Sanways's disappearance, one being that he fell from the ferry on his trip across the bay and was drowned, and the other that he was murdered for his money and his body thrown into the bay. Friends scout any suicide theory as the young man was in good health and spirits. He came here from Canada about five weeks ago, was of attractive appearance and highly educated, talking with a strong English accent.

The police were appealed to today by his employers.

PIONEER NAVIGATOR.

LIFE ENDANGERED.

Manuel Manice, engineer on the San Diego-Pt. Loma ferry, came near losing his life yesterday when his clothing caught in the swiftly-revolving machinery on the boat. Before the engine could be stopped he was almost stripped of clothing.

Santa Barbara.

FREIGHT RATES ALL-IMPORTANT.

County Highways Develop Issue in District Bonds Situation and Lower Rate Is Applied For—Only One Per Cent. of Tax-payers Delinquent.

SANTA BARBARA, July 10.—The relation of railroad freight rates to public road improvement is considered vitally important to highway construction in this county. The issue has been sharply marked by a situation developing at Goleta, where twelve miles of permanent highway are being built under the district bonds and county appropriation at the ratio of four to one. The surfacing of the new road is made from Carpinteria asphalt manufactured from native bitumen, taken from a newly-opened mine. The distance from the mine to the scene of road construction is about fifteen miles.

The Southern Pacific charges a freight rate of $1.25 a ton. The road material at the mine costs $3 a ton. The railroad hauls crushed rock from quarries in Los Angeles to the same Goleta sidetrack for seventy cents a ton; but it is explained that it is a different classification, although the same type of cars is used and the material goes into the same road. Application for the reduction of the rate has thus far been unavailing, although the charge may seriously hamper other road work in the vicinity.

Carpinteria will have a road-bond election July 22. Supervisor Deaderick of that district says there will not be twenty votes against the bonds. The same asphalt used on the Goleta highways will be specified for the Carpinteria roads, but the material is close at hand and the hauling will be a small item.

These two road projects will give a paved stretch of road almost from the Ventura county line to a point nine miles west of Santa Barbara, all on the route of the proposed State highway.

FEW DELINQUENCIES.

Of 8000 individuals on the county assessment roll, and a total tax levy of $613,297, only eighty are delinquent and the total delinquency on real estate is but $1105. The showing is considered quite remarkable. Not a single piece of property in the city of Lompoc was sold this year for delinquent county taxes.

WOMAN RELEASED.

Miss Katherine F. Coughlan, graduate of the Los Angeles State Normal School and former teacher for the Sudden school district in this county, has been released from the County Jail where she was detained two weeks pending her examination for insanity. Her brothers from Kansas City came to her assistance, and it is understood that she will be taken to their home. Her case was considered by Judge Frank R. Willis, of Los Angeles who is here this week in the absence of Judge Crow.

INCIDENTAL NOTES.

Mrs. William Miller Graham has charge of arrangements for "tableaux vivants" to be given at the Potter Theater July 31, for a cause which she has not yet made public, but generally understood to be a benefit for the employees of the Santa Barbara Country Club who lost their effects and suffered otherwise in the fire that destroyed the clubhouse some weeks ago.

The League of the Cross Cadets, a Catholic organization at San Francisco, will arrive here July 21 by steamer for a week's camp. The same company was here last summer. There will be about 250 boys in the troop.

D. D. Brenson, inspector in the forest service, who investigated and vindicated Supervisor Willis N. Sloss of the Santa Barbara forest, after an inspection that approached a year in duration, has received a call to report at Washington by July 15.

Wrongly Accused.

COULDN'T HAVE DONE IT; THEY WEREN'T PRESENT.

AVALON, July 10.—Robert Brown and Fred Thompson, two guests at The Times Camp, have been reported by a Los Angeles newspaper as having been sent off the island for stealing jewelry, when they, along with several others, did not arrive at the camp until Sunday afternoon, and the robbery occurred Saturday. The alleged thefts from a curio store were a small napkin ring valued at 75 cents and four cheap stick pins and two or three pennants valued at less than $1.

Officer Sutsmier, who captured the guilty parties Saturday evening, returned the goods to their owners. The lads who committed the thefts apologized. Brown and Thompson were in their respective homes in Los Angeles Saturday. Since their arrival on the island Brown and Thompson have conducted themselves in a manner which brings credit to the boys of the camp. Never once have they been reprimanded. So gentlemanly has been their conduct during their stay in camp that Superintendent Gillette promised them another trip next summer. They are to remain for several days yet.

A tournament of horseshoes to decide the championship of The Times Camp is now holding the attention of the boys. The competitors are swiftly being eliminated but not without a struggle. Nearly every game reads 21 to 20. John Schmidt seems to have the advantage, with Harry Brown a close second.

Yesterday the Juniors of the camp played a game of indoor baseball, the first of a series for the Goldsmith pennant. Although the Henry & Cornett team won, it by no means gives them the flag. The Times Camp Specials are already changing their line-up and will put up a better fight next game. The Goldsmith ball has been adopted by the camp.

Lee Brown of Santa Ana still holds the record for eating "Makakake" pancakes. He weakened a little this morning and Noel Woodward, who was watching close, came through with a spirit and gained a few points on the leader.

Charles Douglas, now residing in tent No. 4, has changed his name. In the future he will be known as the "Pink Baby." His beautiful complexion, caused by his fondness for Bishop's Catsup, coupled with the Catalina sun, is the reason for the change of title.

Clifford Cake is the "Wee Boy" with the large capacity. Any time of day, even after a large meal, he can be found with a quantity of "Everybody's" olives and a pocketful of "Bis Bis." He declares they are the finest ever for a growing boy.

Ralph Reynolds, Lincoln Cross, Jack Scholz and a number of others, whose time is up tomorrow, have been holding private meetings trying to figure out some way whereby they can stay a little longer.

For twelve days the boys have reveled in a complete round of pleasure. Apparently, one would think that the lads remained "awake o' nights" planning for the coming events. But a trip through the peaceful camp grounds after 10 o'clock each evening will soon settle any doubt.

Today's menu follows:

Breakfats — "Germea," fresh milk, fried rock bass, French fried potatoes, hot cakes, "Makakake," hot coffee, "Newmarks Pure," Bradford's bread and butter.

Dinner—Soup, vegetable; "Bis Bis," relish, "Everybody's" olives; entree, baked spaghetti with tomatoes, "Calamaco," roast shoulder of beef; vegetables, mashed potatoes, sugar corn; desert, baked rice pudding with vanilla sauce, lemonade, Bradford's bread and butter.

Supper—Cold roast beef, baked pork and beans, "Stetson's;" mashed brown potatoes, potato salad; cocoa, "Bishop's" assorted cake, Bradford's bread and butter.

FINANCIAL NEWS SUMMARY.

[Furnished by Logan & Bryan, Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, Bradbury building, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, July 10.—Indicated yields from three main cereal crops by condition as of July 1 total 4,676,000 bushels, compared with 4,974,000 bushels in 1911, an increase of 12.4 per cent.

Chinese government rejected terms proposed by bankers for $100,000,000 loan.

Americans in London firm with active stocks up ¼ to ⅜.

Steel mills that are manufacturing rails are the busiest they have been in five years.

Rains in North Dakota benefit spring wheat crop.

Great Britain's imports despite political and labor troubles show increase over 1911 of $100,000,000.

Twelve industrials declined .07 per cent.

Twenty active rails declined .33 per cent.

It looks as if a better selling level was provided by the moderate upturn in the American market during the forenoon which resulted from the strength of American issues in London. For a time prices held steady with more or less scattered realizing of evidence, but in the last hour the pressure became quite heavy, and on old downturn quite a few stop orders were uncovered, which tended to accelerate the downward movement.

Money rates especially for the long period were firmer with offers light and demand rather displayed a disposition to harden.

The Steel Corporation statement of unfilled tonnage, while somewhat better than expected, failed to impart strength in the steel shares, in fact, it had no market influence if had practically no effect.

Promising Condition of Cereals Enlivens New York Stock Market at Opening—Amalgamated Copper Experiences a Brisk Rise on the Early Trading of Day.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 10.—The government crop report published yesterday was used as a lever with which to move prices upward in the early part to today's stock market session.

The returns seemed to convey the impression that the more important cereals promised exceedingly well.

There was a brisk rise in Amalgamated Copper in early trading, based in a measure on improved copper conditions abroad, but the metal market remains exceedingly sensitive with indications of a widely extended speculation. Sales of copper were reported here today at around 17 cents.

One of the few important features of the day was the publication of the United States Steel Corporation's statement of unfilled tonnage on hand June 30. This showed an increase of 56,303 tons over the preceding month, the grand total being 5,907,346 tons, a figure which only once has been exceeded in almost three years.

Trading in steel was relatively large and its undertone was strong at the outset, but later all leading issues sold off precipitately, lowest prices being registered in the last hour to the accompaniment of considerable activity.

London, where money and discounts were firmer, was not a factor here.

The bond market was lower and generally irregular. Total sales, par value, aggregated $2,728,000. United States bonds unchanged on call.

New York Curb Stocks.

[Furnished by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, 111 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, July 10.—[Exclusive to The Times.] The curb market was irregular and fairly active. Mason Valley sold at 13⅞, near the opening but closed weak. Ohio sold down to 25 cents, recovered fractionally near the close. The oil stocks continued to be the active features.

The morning session of the Boston session was very quiet with the tone uncertain. In the afternoon the market developed some weakness, after the early strength, with declines ranging from 1 to 3 points in the most of the active stocks and the market closed considerably weaker all around in sympathy with the drive on stocks in New York.

DOG DAYS HAVE COME.

be formulated against Dr. Powers and that the referendum be invoked against the muzzling ordinance. The majority of the audience were women, and automobiles lined the curb on the street outside of the hall while their well-dressed owners spent the better part of a warm afternoon fighting the battles of their dogs.

With the formation of the new organization for the uplift of the dogs, it was determined to make it permanent and incorporation papers will be sought. A committee will be named whose duties will be to look after all lost dogs of members of the association. It will be possible under this committee when Carlo or Beatrice is missing to call up on the telephone and have an eager searcher placed on the dog's trail. It will also be possible, in the event that the canine is apprehended by the dog-catcher, to have a representative of the association proceed immediately to the pound and remove the dog from durance vile. In fact, every eventuality in the life of a well-ordered dog will be looked after by the association and woe unto the person or persons who worry or trouble dogs unnecessarily.

It was determined to institute a legal department which would take care of all legal matters pertaining to dogs and their owners. Frank Domingues offered his advice and aid and was unanimously elected.

FLOOD OF CASH.

Fifty cents a year dues will be charged each member and, as there are 18,000 dog-owners in the city, it was pointed out that an ample fund would be secured. When it was stated that a substantial campaign fund would be necessary, Miss Helen Mathewson arose and subscribed $25. She was followed by a perfect avalanche of $5 and $10 donations until upward of $500 had been subscribed as a starter.

The meeting censured the Municipal Newspaper for giving space and publicity to scares about hydrophobia and other alleged imaginary things that "inflamed public sentiment."

Papers for the referendum petition will be circulated during the present week and it is expected that the City Council will repeal the ordinance at its next session without the need of carrying out the referendum vote. It is intended, however, to keep the organization always intact and prepared to meet at all times any legislation unfavorable to dogs.

SHOOTS 'EM SIDEWAYS.

Noted Travel Lecturer Here Carries Trick Camera That Fools Dodgers.

Carrying five cameras, one for motion pictures and another for trick work, Dwight L. Elmendorf, a noted eastern travel lecturer, arrived at the Alexandria yesterday for a sojourn of sufficient duration to enable him to obtain 500 views of this city and its immediate surroundings, which will be used in his series of lectures in the United States during the coming winter.

Elmendorf is the Stoddard of today, and his collection of pictures numbers more than 42,000 taken in all parts of the world, some in Los Angeles on a visit in 1885. "There have been such changes that I don't recognize the city at all," he said last night, "and it is my intention to secure views of the same locations as those taken more than twenty-six years ago with which to illustrate my work."

Elmendorf arrived here after passing five days at the Grand Canyon, where he declared there are many new things to see despite the fact that he has taken photographs on six different occasions in the mighty gorge. "The American people, at least those in the East, are eager to know the world, if only by pictures, and for that reason they are fond of travel scenes not only abroad, but in their own country, and these pictures are frequently incentives for them to see themselves what the eye of the camera has shown," he said.

According to his estimate half a million persons will view the scenes of Southern California, which will be embodied in a single lecture, and which will be given only in the larger cities of the East, where ample facilities for large crowds and a proper display of the photographs are possible. "My screen is forty-eight feet wide and that many in length, which may give an idea of the work," he said.

Elmendorf has manufactured a trick camera, which apparently takes a picture directly ahead, but really is securing objects on the side, and enables him to get pictures portraying absolutely natural conditions. "I made this camera for use in Egypt, where the natives hold in abhorrence the idea of having their pictures taken, much after the fashion of some of the Indians of this country," he said. His moving-picture camera operates in a similar manner, affording absolute guarantee of the naturalness of the subjects taken.

From here Elmendorf will visit the Yosemite, San Francisco, the Yellowstone and other points of interest. Los Angeles has the distinction of being one of the very few cities which will be shown all alone, there being sufficient material here to develop an entire lecture.

MUSIC TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION KEEPING BUSY.

Exploiting Local Composers—Convention Will Close With Three Notable Concerts Today—Lively Business Session Looked for This Morning—They're a Happy Lot.

The California Music Teachers' Association met yesterday morning in Gamut Club Auditorium, and listened to the reading of a paper by Miss Carolyn Alchin, on the subject of "Applied Harmony," and took part in a general discussion of the question.

Miss Elizabeth Simpson gave a chatty talk on "Student Life in Paris," reciting many humorous things she experienced while there. She proved particularly happy in relating her trials with a French domestic.

A very charming concert was given at 11 o'clock by the San Diego members, the following persons taking part in the programme: Mrs. Jane Litzenburg, soprano; Miss Florence Norman Shaw, violinist; Royal A. Brown, pianist; Mrs. M. B. Hesse and Albert F. Conant, accompanists.

At 1:30 in the afternoon, a Chopin recital was given by John C. Manning of San Francisco. He first delivered a lecture on the subject of music for beginners and told how boys had been won from "rag-time" to the classics. His performances at the piano were received with the most flattering applause by the critical audience of teachers.

At the close of Mr. Manning's recital the members took cars and automobiles and went to Pasadena, where on organ recital was given in the First Presbyterian Church at 4 o'clock, under the auspices of the Organists' Guild. The programme was by P. Shaul Hallett and Arthur Alexander, a vocal quartette having been contributed by Mrs. Willis N. Tiffany, soprano; Miss Kie Julie Christin, contralto; Burton G. Bloom, tenor, and Henry S. Williams, basso, with Morton F. Mason at the organ. At 5:30 tea was served at the Hotel Maryland.

Last night a most delightful programme was given in the Gamut Club auditorium by Mr. and Mrs. Thilo Becker, well-known local people, consisting of piano and violin.

THE LAST DAY.

Today is the closing day of the convention, and the business meeting this morning is expected to be a staccato demonstration in the discussion of questions concerning the welfare of the association. A treat is in store for those who attend the 10 o'clock musical session, Miss Paloma Schram having been secured to give a half-hour at the piano, instead of the two gentlemen named in the printed programme. At 10:30, Henry B. Passmore of San Francisco will deliver "A Plea for Higher Technique Among Singers." The business meeting will follow this paper.

During this afternoon and evening three notable concerts will be given. The first will be at 2 o'clock by Mrs. Bertha Winslow-Vaughn, soprano; Axel Simonson, cellist; France Woodmansee, pianist, and Mrs. Gerald Rule, accompanist.

The second will be at 4 o'clock, and will consist of a programme of compositions of Los Angeles composers, in which the following persons will take part: Mrs. Estelle Heartt Dreyfus, contralto; Clifford Lott, baritone; Mrs. F. H. Colby, soprano; Mrs. Lillian S. Gee, contralto; G. Cavaradossi, tenor; Edwin House, baritone; A. J. Stamm, Julius Bierlich, piano and violin; Axel Simonson, cellist; Gertrude Ross and F. H. Colby, accompanists. The composers represented will be Waldo F. Chase, Frank H. Colby, Henry Schoenefeld and Frederick Stevenson.

Between these two concerts Mrs. Ross will give a half-hour to public school music.

Tonight at 8:15, the San Francisco members will give a concert, those on the programme being Phyllida Ashley, pianist; Mrs. Lillie Birmingham, contralto, accompanied by C. L. Seeger, the composer; Mrs. Grace Davis Northrup, contralto; Hother Wismer, violinist; John C. Manning, pianist, and Miss Alma Birmingham, accompanist to her mother in a final group of songs.

The association is being well entertained by the local members, and everybody seems pleased, and they enjoy the programmes just as if it was all new to them—or if they don't, they make a good bluff at it.

THE COPPER INDUSTRY.

[Furnished by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, 115 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

London copper opened firm. Spot, £75, up 1/3 6d; futures, £75 1/3 6d, up 1/3 6d.

London copper closed easy. Spot, £74 15s, off 5s; futures, £75 12s 6d, off 5s. Sales: Spot, 350 tons; futures, 425; spelter, 28, unchanged.

During the remainder of 1912, Tennessee copper's operations should show a decided improvement over the good record which the company has made up to this time. Not only are the earnings increasing, owing to the effect of the higher metal market which is now being felt, but from now until the close of the year an increase in copper production will be made. This will be made possible principally by greater re overy effected in the smelting of the ore. It is expected that production will be maintained at the rate of 16,000,000 pounds per annum.

In the one item of copper alone the difference in metal price, between the last year's average and the present quotation means to the company, on the above output, additional income at the rate of $800,000 per annum. Tennessee's earnings, on the increased production, copper at its present price and including profits from the acid plant, should be at the rate of $1,500,000 per annum. After allowing for depreciation and retirement of bonds, there would still be remaining $1,200,000. The Tennessee management feels confident that for 1912 the company will show earnings of at least $1,000,000 after all charges have been made.

The stock of the Federal Mining and Smelting Company has been active. The rise in all probability is due to the good showing which the company is making with the present price of lead.

Based on the profits for May of $81,000, the Federal Mining and Smelting Company is earning approximately $20,000 a month above present dividend requirements. Profits for May showed an increase of $15,000 over the previous month. The May figure is based on 4.15 cents a pound for lead and had the present price of 4½ cents been employed in estimating profits, the above earnings would be increased by approximately $25,000. The output of the Federal Mining and Smelting Company is running fairly constant and probably will continue so, and any increase will be due largely to higher metal prices.

The Federal Mining Company has options on some mining ground which is said to look fairly attractive, and it is quite probable that some of these options will be exercised in the near future. One of the best of these pieces of ground is one which lies next to the Mace property and if this is taken over it will be developed from the underground workings of their present property. At the Morning Mine, where considerable difficulty has been experienced in concentration, owing to the refractory nature of the ore, the results now being obtained are said to be highly satisfactory. The Flotation process which has been installed is giving a higher extraction than formerly and good results.

The present preferred dividend of 6 per cent. on Federal Mining and Smelting stock calls for monthly profits of $40,000. The returns of $81,000 for May indicate earnings at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, while if the present price of lead were taken this would be increased to 10 per cent. With the maintenance of the present lead market we understand that the company in all probability will return to at least its old rate. In February the preferred dividend was cut from 7 per cent to 6 per cent. per annum.

AT BINGHAM MINES

Gay & Sturges have the following to say about the Eagle and Blue Bell owned by the Bingham Mines Company:

"It is hoped when the new shaft is ready and production of 150 tons a day is reached within the next few weeks, mining costs will not exceed $2.50 a ton. A new contract fixes the smelting item at $3.50 a ton. Freight varies between $1.75 and $2.25 a ton, according to ore values. It is unfair to analyze the costs of 1911 on the ton basis, because it was aimed to ship just enough ore to pay current expenses, and this ore was hoisted and handled at great disadvantage.

"Developments during the last year, and particularly during the last few weeks, change the entire aspect o fthe property. The latest discovery is at the 700 level and the returns on the first shipment were received this week. It contained 58% tons and yielded $1203 or $58.32 a ton, after paying freight and smelter charges. General Manager Pett states this ore is opened for a length of 38 feet and he averages the width at twelve feet. A winze has proved it to a depth of thirty-two feet, and it is also making above the level. He estimates in these openings 1000 tons in sight, with good prospects of developing more." Captain Duncan McVichie, one of the best known mining men of Utah, has just finished an inspection of the mine and says he will be surprised if this new ore body on the 700 does not connect with the large ore body already opened on the 1200. He says that geologically the mine looks as favorable as Centennial-Eureka for great depth and large bodies.

"The important discoveries at 1200, 1200, 1000 and 700 were made by following ore stringers from the old low-grade workings, 1200 feet away. A new permanent high-duty shaft in the vicinity of the new ore has been finished to the 1400 level, 125 feet deeper than the bottom workings, and a crosscut at that depth should reach the ore within a total of 450 feet, about 250 feet remaining to go. The crosscut is moving about six feet a day.

"Through the old workings the new ore body has been developed at the 1200 by a stope 150 feet long, with the ore continuing at both ends. This work is going ahead steadily. An estimated average width of forty feet is given, the middle being twenty feet, the north end fifty feet and the south end until recently sixty feet. The latter narrowed down suddenly to twelve feet, but this is not exceptional in these ore deposits, and may be expected to open up again. The face of the north end of the stope, forty-five feet wide and forty-two feet high, carries $12 to $14 per ton, and the average shipped from the stope throughout a fourteen-month period was $15.77 a ton gross. A raise from this level is continuously in ore up to the 1200. At the 1000 a crosscut from the new shaft cut the ore and it was stoped up almost to the 700. Foul air prevented further work and a crosscut was then driven in at the 900. It was in these workings that the important discovery of recent date was made. The new shaft can handle 600 tons a day when fully equipped."

New York Cotton Market.

[Furnished by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, 115 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, July 10.—During early trading the market was strong on overnight buying and short covering in consequence of firmer cables and unfavorable crop reports. Detailed weather report showed a few scattered showers in Texas, which were generally regarded insufficient and nevertheless had some effect in sympathy with heavy selling by Fell, the brokers, near the close. This house is supposed to have put out quite an active line of shorts which some of the largest spot interests in the trade have been buying. The Crop is undoubtedly in a very bad shape east of the Mississippi and should dry weather continue in Texas and Oklahoma much higher prices could not be prevented. Southern spots, firm, 4@9¼ higher.

Logan & Bryan say:

"Owing to continued heavy rains in many sections of the east gulf and Atlantic States the market ruled active and higher, and shorts who sold late yesterday on the break covered freely on the unfavorable weather map. Soon after the opening active new crop months sold 23 points higher than yesterday's close, but a part of the advance was lost on selling on profits and less active buying on prospects of more settled weather in districts where rain has been incessant for weeks. This selling was not in volume to more than affect a slight reaction, the market on the whole maintaining a strong undertone.

"Liverpool made a good response by closing 5 to 9 points higher and spots there were up, highest of the season, with sales on 11,000 bales.

"Crop accounts are gloomy from portions affected by these rains, especially in the Mississippi River Valley, on the overflowed districts, and mutterings are beginning to be heard from Texas of deterioration from lack of moisture, though in the latter State it is doubtful if any material damage has resulted or is likely to for some on account of this, as rain was ample during the first portion of June and temperatures have been moderate. The crying need is for sunshine in all sections east of the river, and if had sentiment will be less bullish and a good rain is probable."
